COOL WINDOWS FOR HOT WEATHER

How the enterprising Retail Florist can make capital of the same conditions that cut down his sales in summer

JUST because this is the "good old summer time" is no reason for neglecting the show window—no excuse for leaving it practically empty, as many do, or for filling it with Boston ferns, and letting it go at that for weeks on end. Quite the contrary, it's the time to arrange a special display that will make your window the talk of the town. And it's inexpensively done; it calls for more ingenuity than material.

All one needs is a window pan for running water, a windmill or water wheel turned by a motor, some green sheet moss, some turtles or ducklings, a few ferns and a little skill in working out an idea. It's worth trying, if for no other reason than that there is time now to test the advertising value of a window display that is out of the ordinary.

Advertising Value.

The value of good window decoration as an advertising force is overlooked by too many retail florists. They make a show of plants or cut flowers to tell the passers-by that a florist occupies the shop, but, beyond placing these in the window, they trouble themselves no more about it. They do not realize that the window may be made the most valuable space in the store. It is really a part of the capital which they have invested in the business, yet they fail to make it yield the largest possible interest. If such a florist had a store for sale, he would not sell it on the first offer but would try to get the largest sum that he could for it. Had he money to lend, he would not accept one per cent a year for it! But here is valuable property, this window space, that is not bringing the income it should.

For local advertisement there is nothing better than a show window attractively arranged. Every passer-by is a possible buyer. When a person comes into the shop and inquires about flowers, the florist uses every effort to persuade him to buy. He feels that he has lost a customer, if the visitor departs without buying. Many people, however, pass the florist's place of business, who buy flowers, yet he makes no effort, through attractive window decorations, to persuade them to buy their flowers there. The full advertising power of a window is often only brought home by actual experiment. There is a small retail store in Chicago which formerly did but little business because another store a block away, in a more favorable location, at the intersection of two car lines, drew most of the trade of the neighborhood. A man bought the store who was not willing to give up so much of the trade to his competitor, and by means of novel window decorations finally gained the greater part of the business in the vicinity.

A Few Principles.

Window decorating, of course, is a trade and an art in itself, but the application of a few simple principles of the craft will vastly improve the appearance of any window. Too often no attention at all is paid to the arrangement of cut flowers or plants in the window; they are simply stored in the window. The too-frequent trouble when an effort is made to decorate is that the window is overcrowded. A dozen different kinds of flowers, of almost as many colors, form a mass that produces no effect whatever on a person passing outside. Perhaps the decorator believed that he would impress the passer-by with his varied stock; in reality he makes no impression at all. When there is so much material in the window, moreover, the florist can not afford to change it often, and so wilted flowers meet the eyes of the possible customer going by.

Psychologists have discovered that the human mind can not grasp more than three or four objects in a single glance. The fewer the number of objects presented at once, the stronger will be the impression. An expert decorator therefore aims at simplicity. He tries to produce a single strong effect. To get this he uses but a few groups, and all of these in harmony with one another. A few vases of one flower, perhaps including several varieties, all of harmonizing colors and shades, will prove much more attractive than a windowful of many kinds of flowers. Those who have particularly noticed the windows of the large city department stores which aim at artistic decorating will remember the few objects used. These displays are some of them marvels of simplicity, but powerful in attraction. Use few objects, therefore, and have one strong effect in view in decorating your windows; aim for simplicity.

A Cool Window on Main Street, Buffalo.

Use of Background.

As an aid to simplicity a background is of great value. The effect of one group or of a few small groups of flowers will be intensified by the presence of some ferns, palms, and the like, forming a screen. The attention is thereby focused upon the flowers, or other objects which you have selected as your drawing card. Often the background is elaborate of itself, usually it is quite simple; in either case it must be inconspicuous and serve almost entirely as a screen against which the groups that are to draw attention may stand out more clearly. Bark and moss, rustic wood and even cloth screens are good for backgrounds and, in addition, need no attention after they are put up.

In all decorating an effort must be made to bring the central objects within the range of vision. The whole arrangement, as well as every detail, must stand up. A group of objects all upon the same level makes but little impression. If the level is a floor or a low window that brings the tops of the objects below the shoulders, the objects will be overlooked almost entirely. A terraced platform is therefore one of the best arrangements upon which to build a display. Let the foreground be low, but be sure that the groups in the background of your setting come on a level with the eye. Then the center of attention which is in the middle distance will be at the best possible height.

Cut flowers or plants of various heights may be used to gain this result, the taller toward the back.

To Add Drawing Power.

If these few principles be followed, the result should be a pleasing window decoration. To add drawing power, there are several things which may be used. Motion, for one, never fails to attract attention. The fascination of movement for all ages and classes of people is not easily explained, but it is sure. A crowd will stand all day before a window in which there are a few flying streamers, a flowing rivulet, or some bit of machinery that moves by an unseen, although quite obvious, simple bit of mechanism. There seems, too, to be something irresistible about a stream or miniature pond of water, especially on hot summer days. If in the water there be some sort of living animal, the charm is doubly strong. Often this is due to the movements of the animal, but some forms of vegetable life—usually those in which a change is noticeable from time to time—also arouse the interest of a casual observer. For instance, a seed dealer who, in early spring, planted grass seed in a window in which he had placed a couple of inches of soil, so attracted the attention of all the passers-by that they crossed the street to pass his store each day, in order to see what progress the grass was making. When it grew long he cut it with miniature lawn tools, which he then left in the window, with the result that his sales of seeds and lawn and garden tools were greatly increased.

Three Kinds of Features.

With one or a combination of these three kinds of features—motion, water running by means of a breeze from an unseen electric fan is pretty to look at, easy to contrive, and quite attractive. A small sprinkler inside a large glass globe and throwing water up against the inside of the glass draws a crowd, which is curious to see what throws the water, as the sprinkler is partly concealed by the water streaming down the sides of the globe. To make it more effective, a hole may be bored in the top of the globe to let a little fountain spurt out; the water falls back in a small pond surrounding the globe.

Other contrivances may be made with small streams or ponds in tin gutters or basins, artfully concealed with moss, sand or soil. Waterfalls and cascades are more easily arranged than they seem to be. These may be accompanied with a little natural scenery and vegetation, such as are shown in the pictures of the windows of Gude Bros. Co. and W. J. Palmer & Son on this and the preceding pages. In the ponds may be put small turtles, crabs, alligators, or crawfish; a few tadpoles from a nearby brook help the effect wonderfully if you can get nothing better.

Toys Help to Decorate.

Toys are of great value in carrying out special ideas. When there are motor boat races or regattas in or near your town, put a decorated toy motor boat on your little pond and anchor it over or near the inlet which feeds the pond, so that the force of the incoming stream will cause the boat to rock. When the automobile show is on or the races are being run, put a decorated toy auto in the central position, with its wheels whirling and its pennants and decorations waving in the breeze of an electric fan. These timely novelties are and life—the drawing power of a window may be greatly increased. The source of movement may be an electric fan, a water wheel turned by a small stream of water, a toy engine, a small electric motor, or any of a hundred bits of mechanism, which your 10-year-old boy, or one of that age in the neighborhood, delights to rig up. A windmill the things that make people talk, and talk is advertisement.

The subject of window decoration is large and complex, but these few suggestions may prove of value in themselves and, what is of more account, in the ideas which they will call to the minds of the readers. The essentials are simplicity, unity of effect, a good background and a design that stands well up in view. The features to be added to attract especial attention are motion, water and life. The elaborate window displays that can be worked up, involving one or a combination of these, are numberless.

BENTZEN'S STORE.

The illustrations on page 9 afford two views of the store of the Bentzen Floral Co., St. Louis. The location is 3118 North Grand avenue, in a district known as one particularly favored by florists. The interior view shows the selling room, with the two display refrigerators, at left and rear, and the plate glass showcases at the right, used for novelties. Note the array of magnolia and oak wreaths. The exterior view shows the new Dorris delivery car at the door.

CARE IN SMALL THINGS.

The plunger who makes good, makes more than the conservative man.

But there are more conservative men who make good than there are plungers who make good.

It is worth while to be careful about everything.

The man who is careful about one thing, seems always to have time to be careful about other things.

The man who uses good taste in choosing his wearing apparel almost always uses good taste about his store arrangement.

Such carefulness is advertising—good advertising—and it's inexpensive.

The little things carefully done tell everybody who passes, a whole volume about the character of the business—the service to be had in that store.

AN EARLY CLOSING MOVEMENT.

An effort is being made to secure the early closing of all the stores in Washington on Sundays during the summer months. The matter is in the hands of a committee, of which Z. D. Blackistone, O. A. C. Oehmler and William Marche are members, of the Florists' Club of Washington. They have secured the consent of some of the florists in the matter and the following petition is now being circulated among the trade:

Whereas the florists' industry has expanded and increased greatly within recent years and to such an extent that it is now considered one of our important branches of trade; and

Whereas on account of the perishable nature of the florists' stock and the unusual and extraordinary conditions imposed upon the business, it is necessary for florists to keep open for business longer hours than is customary with most other businesses; and

Whereas summer is the period when the majority of substantial business houses find it advisable to reduce their hours of business as far as possible without financial loss and to adopt uniform business hours; and

Whereas heretofore the florists of Washington have been closing their stores on Sundays at various hours and without any idea of uniformity; and

Whereas by closing at 1 p. m. on Sundays during the months of July, August and September they could allow themselves and employees the freedom and recreation of the half of each Sunday, without any material financial loss or inconvenience; therefore be it

Resolved, That the Florists' Club of Washington hereby recommends and urges that during the said months of July, August and September all florist stores shall be closed at 1 p. m. on Sundays; and be it further

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions with a request for coöperation be mailed to every florist's store in the city of Washington.

Hope to close half a day on Sunday three months a year! When will they ever get to the point of not opening at all on the Sabbath?

Store of the Bentzen Floral Co., St. Louis, Mo.

ANY STAMPS FOR ANY USE.

A ruling that will do much to further popularize the parcel post by removing a restriction that has been a source of much inconvenience to the public has been made by Postmaster General Burleson. Parcel post stamps now are valid on all classes of mail matter and ordinary stamps, including commemorative issues, are good for postage on parcel post packages. Parcel post stamps will not be issued or used after the stock now on hand is exhausted.

STEVIA IN SOLID BEDS.

When should stevia plants be brought indoors, and how far apart should they be planted in solid beds? R. E. M.

Stevia should be brought indoors just before frost arrives. It is better to leave it out as late as possible, but a little frost will blacken it and render it valueless. The distance apart it should be planted will depend on whether you are growing the tall or dwarf variety and on the size of your plants. Average-sized plants, such as would fit an 8-inch pot, should have fifteen to eighteen inches each way to do them justice. Stevia wants to be grown in a cool house. C. W.

BUSINESS EMBARRASSMENTS.

Portland, Ind.—W. A. Hart, of Jefferson township, brought suit on a note against the Portland Nursery Co. June 17, and asked that a receiver be appointed for the defendant concern. Suit on a mechanic's lien also was brought by the firm of Yount & Ewry against James M. T. and Mary A. Wright. Mr. Wright is the general manager of the nursery company.

Painesville, O.—Though the Painesville Garden & Greenhouse Co. has been in business only one season, the space under glass has already been found inadequate and three more greenhouses will be built this summer. The demand for lettuce was so good that the stock was soon exhausted. It is said that the men who are back of this enterprise have ample means for its development.

GREENHOUSE INSURANCE.

Since the Omaha cyclone, which, by the way, swept several states, doing widespread damage to greenhouses, there has been much inquiry for wind storm insurance on glass structures. It has not been easy to find a company of known responsibility that would take greenhouse risks. Florian D. Wallace, a broker in the Insurance Exchange building, Chicago, thought he saw an opportunity to establish a new line of business and has devoted much of his time to the subject the last few months.

"I have prevailed upon a syndicate of old and well known stock fire and tornado insurance companies, with combined assets of over $25,000,000, to write greenhouse windstorm insurance," he says. "This is an entirely new and rather hazardous field for insurance companies and we will proceed cautiously for the present, covering only well built ranges in good repair, and only those in northern Illinois. Later in the year, however, when a better knowledge of conditions and requirements is obtained, the territory will be extended to cover other states.

"The policies will cover broadly greenhouses, boiler houses, dwellings, barns, live stock and all other property of the assured, fixed and movable, on his premises, except windmills, metal stacks, hotbeds and growing plants, shrubs and trees. There will be no troublesome conditions in the policy and no warranties except an agreement to insure for at least fifty per cent of the value of the plant. The rates will be surprisingly low for the hazard, and it will be only with the most careful inspections and selection that the insurance can be written at present prices. The writer is personally visiting the various greenhouse centers near Chicago, for the purpose of making these inspections and explaining the proposition generally."

Many growers carry fire and liability insurance as well as hail insurance and, since the Wilcox loss, are anxious to get fully covered by adding wind insurance. It has become pretty well recognized in this trade that a business not worth insurance is a pretty poor business.

Toledo, O.—A wedding of more than ordinary interest to the trade was that of Mrs. J. B. Freeman and Walter H. Crause, which took place June 30 in the handsomely decorated Unitarian church, in the presence of 150 guests. The bride is widely known in the trade, having for a long time been employed by George A. Heinl and having succeeded him in business some years ago. Mr. Crause is from Cincinnati. He will go into the business with his wife, but the name will not be changed.

RED SPIDER ON ROSES.

I have found some red spider on my rose bushes? What shall I do to get rid of the pest? J. L. V.

For red spider on your roses, syringe them with all the force at your command. Then, when you have syringed them, syringe them some more. Be just a little more persistent than the insects are and you will soon get the upper hand. A. F. J. B.

TEMPERATURE FOR ROSES.

What is the best night temperature for a house of Richmond, White Killarney, Maid and Sunburst, all grown in one house? What is the best night temperature for American Beauty, grown alone? F. F.

Some growers find 56 degrees sufficient for Richmond and Killarney, but 58 degrees is better. For American Beauty the temperature in winter should be as near 60 degrees as possible; never over 62 degrees. C. W.

COLOR OF ROSE MRS. RUSSELL.

"Some questions having arisen with regard to the color of the new forcing rose, Mrs. Charles Russell," says the Horticultural Advertiser (British), "Thos. Smith & Sons, of Stranraer, who are advertising this variety, kindly send us blooms for inspection. We have compared the flowers with the 'Repertoire de Couleurs' sent out by the R. H. S. and find that the nearest match is what is known as 'aniline red.' We might add that the flower evidently is a good laster and keeps its form and color after being cut as long as any rose with which we are acquainted."

THE DEPTH OF SOIL.

I should like to get some information on rose growing. Our benches are five feet wide, with 6-inch boards for sides. The bottom is made of 1-inch lumber and thus takes up one inch of the 6-inch side board, leaving only five inches for soil, and this space lacks one inch of being full. So the depth of the soil is about four inches. Is that enough soil to grow good roses in? J. E. C.

Though good roses can be and are grown in four inches of soil, it takes a good deal closer attention and a lot of feeding to keep the plants going, and, unless a good, heavy mulch is applied in the spring, the plants will dry out every day in sunny weather. I should prefer six inches of soil. A good way would be to have some 6-inch boards ripped into five strips, nail these strips on top of the side boards of the benches after the plants show that they need more soil and feeding, and fill the benches to the top of these strips with half soil and half manure. This would keep the plants in good growing condition without further feeding for some time. W. J. Keimel.

SUMMER PROPAGATION.

We are interested somewhat in the propagation of roses during the summer, as we wish to have some plants ready early in the fall. We believe that some of the growers around West Grove, Pa., and Springfield, O., have been doing summer propagation, and they are probably familiar with the best processes. Can you tell us when they do this, so that I could visit their greenhouses and see how it is done? H. & H.

By the summer propagation of roses, we suppose the inquirer means the summer propagation of these roses outdoors in hotbeds. The method we use here is to make a hotbed about two and one-half feet high at the back and sloping toward the front to a height of about two feet. In other words, there is a difference in height of about six inches from the back to the front, in a bed six feet wide. It is necessary to have the sashes fit the top of the frame closely, so as to exclude the outside air. It is necessary to keep the frames as nearly air-tight as possible.

We then secure some fresh horse-stable manure, put about two feet of this in the bed and tramp it down, watering it only a little as we put it in. The propagating sand is put on top of this manure, to a depth of about three or four inches. After the sand is packed down, the rose cuttings are put in, either by dibbling them in or simply laying them in trenches, according to the method chosen. We here dibble them, but we understand that most of the concerns at Springfield simply make a trench with a putty knife or other tool, lay the plants in the sand and then pack the sand well around them. After they have all been planted, they are well watered.

The temperature should range from 75 to 80 degrees. It depends entirely upon the character of the sand, whether these cuttings will need any more water or not. Here, with us, it is necessary to water them once or twice in the four weeks they are in the frame, as our sand is coarse and will not retain the moisture sufficiently. It is also necessary to have a curtain, of coarse muslin or similar material, over the frame, to keep the hot sun therefrom. This curtain is taken off at night and in cloudy weather. ANTISDEL'S HYDRANGEAS.

The group of Hydrangea Otaksa shown in the illustration on this page was the product of the Milford Greenhouse, which is allied with the Milford Nursery Co. and the Fostoria Nursery and Fruit Farm, under the proprietorship of H. N. Antisdel, of Milford, Ia. The hydrangeas were grown from cuttings in eighteen months. The small boy in the picture is Donald Antisdel, the 2½-year-old son of the proprietor.

In common with all in that part of the country, the growers of these hydrangeas are suffering from an extremely dry season. The effect of the drought upon the outdoor flowers is especially severe, and unless there is a let-up, may prove disastrous. The florists' business in Milford is thriving, in spite of the weather, and to such an extent that Mr. Antisdel is now making plans to build an additional greenhouse to take care of all his business adequately.

COST AND OVERHEAD EXPENSE

A DISCUSSION OF BUSINESS ARITHMETIC

This paper was prepared especially for seedsmen, but it contains so much that applies with equal force to retail florists and, indeed, to nurserymen and growers that its careful perusal is recommended to everyone in the trade. The author is L. B. McCausland, of Ross Bros., Wichita, Kan., who read it before the American Seed Trade Association at Cleveland, June 25.

WHAT ARE COST AND EXPENSE?

The Elements That Determine Price.

The subject of cost and overhead expense is one which should interest every man in this room. Generally these terms are not clearly defined by the business world. Too frequently the selling price is based on the invoice price, without due consideration to the overhead expense of operating the business.

To my mind, cost means the invoice price of an article, plus the expense of doing business on a certain number of dollars' worth of sales. If the invoice cost of the article is $1 and it takes twenty per cent of the selling price to cover the expense of doing business, then the cost should be considered $1.25 instead of $1. It will then be necessary to add the per cent of profit which it is desired to earn.

Manufacturers who change the form of a commodity have solved the problem of the relation of overhead expense to cost. By adding the item of overhead expense to the cost of their raw material, they know the exact cost of the manufactured article when it is placed in a packing case to be forwarded to a customer.

Figuring, or Merely Guessing.

We who are engaged in distributing seeds and other merchandise are too prone to feel that our expense items may be estimated, or guessed at, instead of being figured down to a basis which may be depended upon to indicate the total cost of transacting the business.

If we are to be successful in our businesses, it will be necessary for us to conduct them on a scientific basis, or at least on a basis which will permit our knowing the exact relation of the expense items, when compared with the sales of the year, month or day. In the general business world, only five per cent of merchants who begin business on a certain date are still in business twenty years from that date. Ninety-two per cent usually fail within the first four years after beginning their business careers.

In this day and age of talked-about high prices and the high cost of living, it seems to me as if it would be possible to reduce the price of many articles, if the true basis of overhead expense could be figured and definitely applied to each line of business represented in our complex form of living.

Problems in Economy.

If the head of every business could be made to feel the necessity of knowing exactly what it costs him to do business, there would be fewer failures, and consequently less waste in doing business, and in a short time it would be practicable to lower the price of many articles of merchandise which are a daily necessity to the people of the United States, and at the same time to insure the merchant of making a fair profit on every dollar's worth of goods sold.

Waste is the one element in the United States which is too plentiful. We do not take care of the small things as they do in older countries; perhaps the necessity for greater economy has not been so urgent in the past as it is at the present time. It will only be a matter of a few years until the next generation will be compelled to face problems of economy much more complex and vexatious than those we are facing today. Therefore, if we are going to do our duty in making our records clear for our successors, it is certainly proper that we carefully consider a plan which will eliminate guesswork from our businesses.

Getting Beyond One's Depth.

To emphasize the necessity of eliminating waste in business, I will repeat the words of a prominent business man in the wholesale grocery line:

"Every man who goes into business should have a sufficient capital to conduct the business comfortably and safely, be it large or small. He should do all the business possible to be done with the means at hand, but should not overreach or spread out to such a degree as would make his business unsafe. He should so watch every detail of his business, and guard his purchases, his expenses and his sales so closely, that he will not get beyond his depth. He should so conduct his business that he will be able to meet every obligation promptly at maturity. The man who does this will be found to be successful, while the one who allows his payments to lag will be found to be the one who, as a rule, trusts out his goods injudiciously and whose business methods are slipshod, whose stock is ill-kept and whose failure is only a question of time.

Inventories and Insurance.

"Every man in business should take a careful inventory of his stock at least once a year, and should formulate a statement of his affairs for comparison from year to year. From such statement he can determine the elements of weakness in his business, and when these have been pointed out, they can, with proper management, be remedied, and thus the quicksands of commercial dishonor can be avoided.

"Yearly inventories are a prime necessity on another account, that of insurance. A business that will not pay for insurance had best be abandoned.

"No man has a right, unless he has ample means outside of his business, to jeopardize the claims of his creditors by failure to properly insure his property. He cannot afford to run the risk incident to the failure to take an annual inventory and to properly record his purchases and his sales, which are absolutely necessary to enable him to get his just dues in case of loss by fire. It is a source of great satisfaction to a man to be able to sleep nights with a consciousness that his bills are paid promptly and his property is fully insured."

Calculating the Cost.

The first fundamental principle in successful merchandising is to provide in the sale price of any article, or in the total of annual sales, a profit sufficiently liberal to cover the direct charges against the business, viz.: Overhead or ascertainable expenses, interest on capital invested, contingencies, and a reasonable profit. Profit and success are interdependent and success, indeed, is more closely related to profit than to any other incident of the merchandising business.

Surprise is natural that so few merchants or even commercial students understand how to calculate profits, as was demonstrated when the following problem was announced in a public print for solution: "Should a merchant buy an article for $1 and above the total operating expense of twenty-two per cent desire to make a net profit of ten per cent, at what price must the article be sold?"

A large proportion of the answers to this problem ranged from $1.32 to $1.35, which indicated that operating expense and net profit were calculated upon the cost of the article; yet it can be easily demonstrated that, in successful merchandising, operating expense and net profit must be calculated upon the selling price.

Figuring on the Wrong Basis.

Now, while the calculation upon cost basis may be arithmetically correct, commercially it is not, for the proper answer to the problem stated is $1.47. The difference provided through the calculation of operating expense and net profit upon the selling price instead of the cost, created a defense against contingencies, a protection against disappointment, and perhaps against ultimate failure.

Assuming that the seedsman into whose hands this paper may fall has had his interest aroused in this fundamental principle of successful merchandising, the question will naturally be asked, "How is the gross profit, which comprises the operating expense and the net profit, to be calculated into the selling price?"

There is a simple decimal plan which we are led to offer in this connection, which has also been advanced in pamphlets and books treating definitely of merchants' interests.

It must here be borne in mind that confusion and mistakes would likely occur if the expenses were figured upon sales and the profits upon cost. There should be uniform calculation.

Some Practical Arithmetic.

The plan is this: Add the operating expense and the net profit in percentage figures, deduct the total from 100 per cent, and divide the cost of the article by the difference obtained.

To illustrate: In the problem above stated, the total operating expense was 22 per cent, and the desired net profit 10 per cent, making a total of 32 per cent. Deducting 32 per cent from 100 per cent, we have 68 per cent, and dividing the invoice cost of the article, $1, by 68 per cent, we have $1.47. This plan is capable of uniform application and is merely converting an old decimal rule to an important service in the accountancy system of a successful merchandise business.

Now a word regarding the percentage of expense and of profit which should be used as a basis in figuring. In the case of a running business, the previous year's sales or an average of two or more years' sales, and the previous year's operating expense or the average of two or more years' operating expense, may be taken as a basis for calculating the probable operating expense of the year to be provided for.

Our final word is: Properly calculate your profits.

Sitting at the Same Table.

It is to be hoped that, in the near future, every dealer who is a member of the American Seed Trade Association will be willing to give the other members of this association all the information possible regarding the items of cost and overhead expense connected with his business.

Perhaps it may be possible to inculcate a friendly feeling on this subject, and to interest members to give freely of their experience to one another. One way would be for the American Seed Trade Association to recommend that its members in each state form a group, and hold frequent meetings, say two, three or four each year. The men attending these meetings would get better acquainted and in a short time would think more of one another, and feel that the other fellow was honest and upright and was using proper effort to enlarge his business in the right direction.

Personal acquaintance, and getting your feet under the same table, has a great deal to do in making up an opinion of the worth of a man. Close association also aids in giving a better idea of what the other fellow is thinking about. The possibilities of the seed business are too large, and of too great importance to the nation, to permit anyone's being selfish—and getting away with it.

Moral and Material.

If we do our part in the economics of this country, we are going to be exceedingly busy for a term of years. So much remains to be done, and so many things may be done in a better manner than they are being done now, that there is opportunity for any man who is willing to work, and to apply his best thought to any one division of the business, to develop it, make it profitable and thus be of benefit to the community in which he lives.

Business is really much larger than the mere selling of goods, and while perhaps business could not exist unless we sold goods at a profit, still the business which looks at both the moral and the material side is usually more successful than the one which looks only at the material side of selling goods for dollars, and getting all the dollars possible.

"As ye sow, so also shall ye reap," and "Do unto others as you would have others do unto you," were not words idly spoken, and they have as much significance today as they did at the time they were first uttered.

Competition and Co-operation.

Every man is a creditor and every man is a debtor; every man is a buyer and every man is a seller. Of course, in all well organized businesses the duties of different men are so arranged as to permit each one to concentrate his mind on some one division or part of the business, thus securing the maximum of realization at the minimum of expenditure.

The more fully coöperation is adopted by the different lines of trade, the more distinctly is competition eliminated, and in most instances prices are no higher for the same article than those which exist in communities where competition is strictly enforced and where one merchant does everything in his power to destroy his rival in business. Think for a moment of the enormous cost of failures in business each year when reduced to dollars and cents. The total is appalling. It is almost a crime to our civilization of the twentieth century.

It is certainly time to stop this practice. If the merchants of the United States would see to it that conditions

GROWING FERNS IN FLORIDA.

The growing of such varieties of ferns as Boston, Amerpohlii and Whitmani in Florida is an enterprise of comparatively recent origin. Newell & Ustler, of Apopka, Fla., started a business of this sort about eighteen months ago, by planting some runners, of the 2½-inch size, from the north. Now the firm has a half acre under slats and has also installed an effective watering system, which is an equipment of vital importance during the Florida dry season. The slats used in the construction of the house are twenty feet long and three inches wide and are laid with a 3-inch space between them. A photograph of part of the interior of the house is reproduced on page 13. The large fronds in the foreground of the picture are from four and one-half to five and one-half feet in length.

Since the young ferns, under favorable conditions, grow to the 4-inch size in about four months and three crops can be produced in a year, the returns from a half-acre tract are greater than the uninitiated might suppose. The principal part of Newell & Ustler's business has been the growing and shipping of runners. The runners are planted eight inches apart, in rows 150 feet long, and are allowed to grow until the young plants are all made and are ready to be marketed or transplanted. The runners are shipped in wet moss, with as little soil as possible attached. The 4-inch plants are allowed to hold as much soil as possible, but, since the soil is sandy, it soon dries out. Nevertheless, the plants travel a long distance and are said to arrive in good condition. In the spring season they are shipped chiefly to the south and west; in the winter the shipments go largely to California.

"One great difficulty in the growing of ferns in Florida," say Newell & Ustler, "is the dry season, when the lack of shade or of water would result in certain failure. The Boston ferns seem to thrive better here than almost any other variety, and, after the ground has been cured of sourness, they grow continuously. During winter, precautions must be taken against frosts. As we say here in Florida, we are engaged in a constant gamble with nature, whether we are growing ferns, vegetables, citrus fruits or something else. We have estimated that next fall, from plants bedded now, we shall have a million runners to market. With the right sort of management, an abundance of ferns can be produced in Florida, of a size and quality that would be hard to beat."

The slat house and garden are under the personal supervision of Mr. Ustler, who spent some years under glass in the north and has had much general experience as a grower. Mr. Newell

SCALE ON NEPHROLEPIS.

You will find enclosed a fern leaf that is infested with scale and with white objects that look like the eggs of the scale. Please let me know what is the best means of getting rid of these. I also notice that there are small black ants crawling on the fern. Have they anything to do with the presence of the scale on the plants?

F. J. H. & S.

The nephrolepis frond enclosed with this query was badly infested with scale. The first thing to do with plants in such a condition would be to cut off and destroy all fronds that are in as bad a state as this. Then dip the plants in a nicotine solution. A solution of Nico-fume, one part to 300 parts of water, would be safe to use, though it might affect the tips of the young fronds to some extent. If the plants are protected from the sun after dipping them in the solution, there is less likelihood of injury to the foliage, but it is probable that several dippings may be needed to overcome the pests.

The ants were feeding on the scale insects and, incidentally, would spread them from plant to plant in order to keep up a supply of food for themselves. W. H. T.

PLANTS ATTACKED BY THRIPS.

I am sending under separate cover two tuberous-rooted begonias and one celosia, all grown in the same house. I should be greatly obliged for any information as to what is the matter with them. The begonias were doing splendidly until about a week or ten days ago, when this trouble started. Some are considerably larger than those sent and they are all affected except two or three. There is, however, a later batch in the same house which is not affected. We keep them shaded and ventilate fairly well, but close down tightly at night. About twenty-five out of seventy-five of the celosias are affected like the specimen sent. H. J.

Both the tuberous-rooted begonias and the celosia, or cockscomb, were simply smothered with thrips. These pests will soon destroy a fine batch of begonias, gloxinias, or in fact almost any plants of a soft-wooded nature, and will also attack some with harder wood. They always breed and increase most rapidly in an atmosphere which is too arid. Plants affected as yours are will be of no value whatever this season. Your later batch will, unless carefully looked after, share a similar fate. I would advise throwing away all the earlier batch of begonias and celosias. Dip the late plants in tobacco water or some other insecticide. Keep a moister atmosphere in the house and do not close the ventilators tightly at any time. Spray among the plants freely, but do not wet the leaves if the direct sun's rays will strike them, as they are liable to become scorched. Dip the plants once a week and probably you will be able to flower them satisfactorily.

CYCLAMENS TURNING YELLOW.

I put my cyclamens outdoors in a rather shady place, with the pots plunged in the ground up to the rims, but all of the leaves turn yellow except the center ones. Is this just natural, or is there something the matter with the plants? J. S.

If the cyclamens are flowering plants which you are intending to carry over, it is natural for them to lose a part of their foliage now, as they need a moderate rest through the summer, when they lose most of their foliage. On the other hand, young plants raised last summer or fall should not lose their foliage in this way. The best place for them for the next three months is in a coldframe protected by lath shadings, plunged or partly plunged in coal ashes. Keep the sashes well tilted all the time and on hot days remove them and merely keep the shades over the plants. Spray freely when hot. The plants can be left out until the end of September.

Notes of the Hardy Garden

THE HARDY PERENNIAL GARDEN.

As It Looks in Early July.

June may be truly said to be the month par excellence for hardy herbaceous perennials, the month when they are most fresh and pleasing and when the torrid summer heat has not yet scorched and wilted them to any great extent. Nevertheless, if the plants are in good soil and the soil is kept well stirred, they will be found quite attractive still, and it is really surprising what a lot of heat and drought perennials will stand, provided they have a mulch of even dry earth about them. Some varieties, it is true, must have water or they will be comparative failures. Particularly is this true of the regal Japanese iris, I. Kæmpferi, now commencing to make a glorious show of its many-hued flowers, which rival, and in many ways surpass, the most showy of the orchids. The Japanese irises are sometimes classed as semi-aquatics. This is true only to the extent that they relish an abundant water supply until the flowering season has passed, after which they can be kept drier at the root. It is important, however, that they be kept comparatively dry at the root in winter, or many will rot.

Iris in Sunken Beds.

Fine Japanese iris can be grown in sunken beds at a moderate elevation, which can be practically flooded until the flowering season has passed, and which can be drained in winter, but it is not necessary to go even to this amount of trouble to secure good Japanese iris. In any well prepared herbaceous border they will bloom splendidly if mulched and soaked occasionally prior to and during the blooming season.

Speaking of iris reminds us that the blooming season for the Siberian iris has just passed, but it is not too late to say a good word for this hardy, vigorous-growing and free-flowering variety. It succeeds best in moist land and likes a little shade, but grows well in almost any location. For cutting it is valuable, particularly that beautiful pure white variety, Snow Queen. This does superbly in field rows, but it is to be seen in its greatest vigor on the margin of a pond, swamp or stream. These and the Japanese, as well as the German iris, should be planted early. From the middle of August to the middle of September is much better than a month later, and if set out at that date, a nice lot of flowers are sure to be produced the following season.

The Stately Larkspurs.

The perennial larkspurs now are in their full glory, and what an enchanting display they make! Well established plants are six and even eight feet high, and of almost every conceivable shade of blue. There are many flower faddists who object to certain hardy plants, but those who have any objections to the stately and beautiful delphiniums are few and far between and are surely to be pitied. Such varieties as the Belladonna hybrids, the named hybrids of such specialists as Amos Perry and Kelway, Queen Wilhelmina, formosum, formosum cœlestinum and others are superb, and the dwarfer but none the less charming white and blue shades of D. Chinense are free-flowering and are first-class in funeral work. It hardly needs to be stated that all the delphiniums are fine for cutting and have a seasonable and fresh appearance at this time as compared with the small and faded looking roses and carnations procurable.

First-class delphiniums are to be had from seed; in most cases these are equal to the named hybrids, sometimes superior, and they usually possess greater vigor. The present is an ideal time to sow seed in a coldframe, where it can be kept well shaded until after germination and then full sun can be given by degrees. The seedlings can be pricked off into other frames and wintered there, and planted out in nursery rows in the spring, but stronger plants will be had if they are set out in nursery rows or beds during cool, moist weather and kept well cultivated. Quite a few will bloom a little the first season; the second year, in well enriched ground, all should easily grow six feet high. Where good varieties are already on hand and it is desired to propagate them, the clumps should be carefully lifted, divided and replanted not later than the middle of October, and a week or two earlier would be better.

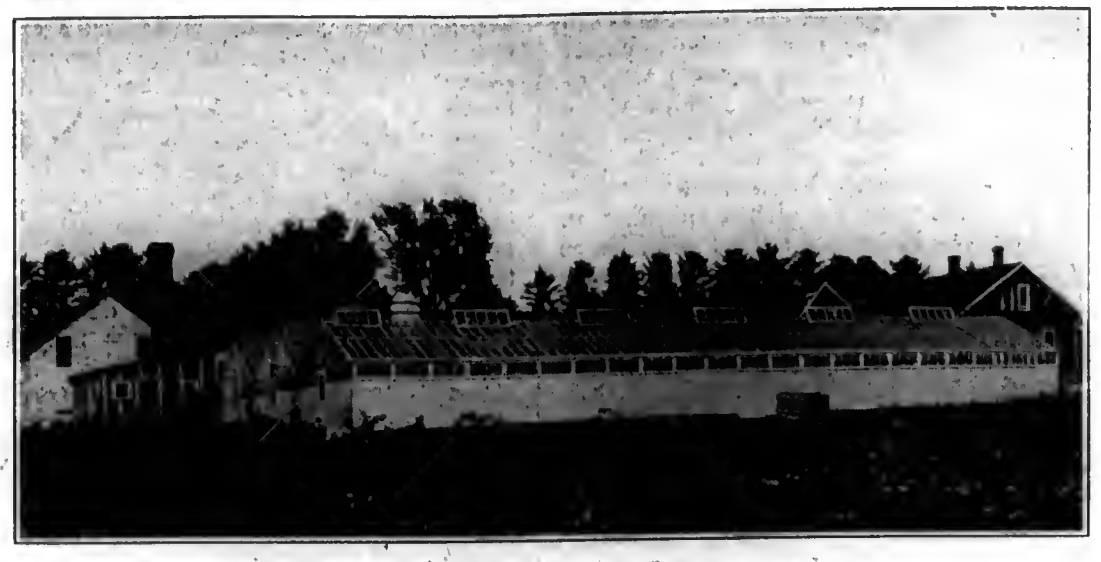
The Madonna Lily.

Associated with the larkspur, and flowering at the same time, is the pure white garden lily, L. candidum, also commonly called the Madonna, Ascension, St. Joseph's and the Annunciation lily. This is perhaps the most beautiful of all our lilies and one which should have a place in every hardy flower border. Bulbs of these, when they need replanting, should be taken up in July, and the planting of either these or imported ones should not be delayed later than the end of September, as they start to make roots and leaves quite early. Lay the bulbs on their sides when planting and they will be found less subject to disease; cover with sand and plant not over four inches deep.



Two Fine Chinese Lilies.

Another lily now in flower outdoors is that beautiful new Chinese variety, L. myriophyllum. This is still rather expensive, but it is such a good grower, so hardy and so free flowering that it will eventually find a place in every garden. Even tiny bulblets throw flowers, and the large white trumpets, suffused with pink and shaded with pale yellow, have a delightful odor. Another new Chinese lily, not yet in flower, is L. Sargentii. This is as vigorous a variety as L. Henryi, sometimes attaining a height of eight feet. Its immense trumpet-shaped flowers are pure white within; the outside is greenish white, shaded deep purple. This is another lily which has come to stay. The ever reliable L. Henryi will soon be opening its flowers. If it is planted deep, its vigor is astonishing. It will make immense bulbs, which, in turn, will produce majestic spikes, carrying twenty-five, thirty-five, fifty or sometimes more flowers. The flowers are of the same form as speciosum, and this has caused it to be often dubbed the yellow speciosum. It is, however, a far more vigorous and reliable garden lily than any of the speciosums.

Campanulas, or Bellflowers.

The campanulas, or bellflowers, are still making a goodly show. The beautiful Canterbury bells, C. Medium, are passing, which reminds us that it will soon be too late to sow seeds which will produce strong blooming plants next season. But the peach-leaved or persicifolia varieties are still good. Of these C. persicifolia grandiflora and grandiflora alba, single; persicifolia hermosa, semi-double blue, and persicifolia Mœrheimi, double white, are a fine quartette. All are hardy, free flowering, full of grace and splendid for cutting. The clustered bellflower, C. glomerata, is a useful border and naturalizing plant. It is just opening its violet blue flowers, which will persist for a couple of months. C. Trachelium, Coventry bells, are now in flower, while on the edges of the border and in the rock garden the Carpathian bellflowers, blue and white, make a beautiful green carpet studded with cup-shaped flowers all summer long. No florist or gardener can afford to make a border without a good sprinkling of campanulas. All are good growers and of easy propagation.

Austin, Tex.—The Hyde Park Floral Co., of which Edgar Hall is general manager, had a good-looking booth at the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Exposition here. The trimmings, molding and lettering were made of willow split and the roof of post oak poles. The company made a hit by distributing its surplus sweet peas and roses among the visiting ladies.

Range of the Restland Floral Co., Mendota, Ill.

THE TYPICAL FLORIST AGAIN.

Such florists as compose the backbone of the trade are typified in the accompanying illustrations, showing the establishment of the Restland Floral Co., Mendota, Ill. The proprietor is B. Katzwinkle. The first house in the range was built six years ago, when he started in business. The city has grown, but the opportunities to sell cut flowers, bedding stock and pot plants have developed much faster than the population has increased. The place now consists of seven houses in good shape, all the stock being sold locally at retail, with frequent necessity to draw additional supplies, especially of cut flowers, from outside sources. All over the country there are hundreds and hundreds of such well-kept, prosperous places, seldom heard of but really constituting the backbone of the business.

NEW ENGLAND QUARANTINE.

The Secretary of Agriculture, acting under the authority of the plant quarantine act, has issued an order broadening the scope of the original New England quarantine against the gipsy and brown-tail moths. It is of great importance because it covers certain florists' stock, which, after August 1, can only be moved after inspection.

After reciting his authority the secretary "does hereby order that (1) coniferous trees such as spruce, fir, hemlock, pine, juniper (cedar), and arbor-vitæ (white cedar), known and described as 'Christmas trees,' and parts thereof, and decorative plants such as holly and laurel, known and described as 'Christmas greens or greenery,' and (2) forest plant products, including logs, tanbark, posts, poles, railroad ties, cordwood, and lumber, and field-grown florists' stock, trees, shrubs, vines, cuttings, and other plants and plant products for planting or propagation, excepting fruit pits, seeds of fruit and ornamental trees and shrubs, field, vegetable, and flower seeds, bedding plants, and other herbaceous plants and roots, shall not be moved or allowed to move interstate from any point in the areas herein quarantined to any point not located in said quarantined areas in manner or method or under conditions other than those prescribed in the rules and regulations hereinafter made, and amendments thereto."

The following towns and all the territory between said towns and the Atlantic ocean are quarantined for the brown-tail moth, namely:

Lubec, Perry, Robbinston, Charlotte, Cooper, Plantation XIX, Wesley, Plantations XXXI and XXX, Devereaux, Plantations XXVIII, XXXIII, and XXXII, Milford, Alton, LaGrange, Medford, Orneville, Atkinson, Dover, Sangerville, Parkman, Wellington, Brighton, Solon, Ebden, New Portland, Freeman, Salem, Phillips, Berlin No. 6, Byron, Andover N. Surp., and Grafton, Maine; Cambridge, Dummer, Stark, and Northumberland, New Hampshire; Guildhall, Granby, Victory, Burke, Sutton, Sheffield, Wheelock, Stannard, Walden, Cabot, Marshfield, Plainfield, Barre, Williamstown, Brookfield, Randolph, Bethel, Stockbridge, Barnard, Pomfret, Woodstock, Reading, Cavendish, Cheater, Grafton, Townshend, Newfane, Marlboro, and Halifax, Vermont; Colerain, Shelburne, Conway, Williamsburg, Westhampton, Southampton, Westfield, and Southwick, Massachusetts; Suffield, Windsor Locks, Windsor, Bloomfield, West Hartford, Hartford, East Hartford, Manchester, Bolton, Coventry, Windham, Franklin, Bozrah, Norwich, Preston, North Stonington, and Stonington, Connecticut.

The following towns and all the territory between said towns and the Atlantic ocean are quarantined for the gipsy moth, namely:

Lincolnville, Belmont, Searsmont, Montville, Knox, Brooks, Unity, Troy, Albion, China, Vassalborough, Augusta, Chelsea, Farmingdale, West Gardiner, Winthrop, Monmouth, Leeds, Turner, Minot, Oxford, Otisfield, Casco, Sebago, Hiram, and Brownfield, Maine; Conway, Madison, Tamworth, Sandwich, Thornton, Ellsworth, Rumney, Groton, Alexandria, Danbury, Springfield, Sunapee, Goshen, Washington, Stoddard, Sullivan, Keene, Swanzey, and Winchester, New Hampshire; Warwick, Orange, New Salem, Petersham, Barre, New Braintree, Northfield, Spencer, Charlton, Oxford, and Douglas, Massachusetts; Burrillville, Glocester, Johnston, Cranston, Warwick, North Kingstown, Portsmouth, and Bristol, Rhode Island; Somerset, Fall River, and Westport, Massachusetts. The towns of Eden, Mount Desert, Tremont, Surry, Penobscot, Blue Hill, Sedgwick, Deer Isle, Vinal Haven, North Haven, Islesborough, Searsport, Stockton Springs, Frankfort, and Winterport, Maine, are also infested and are also quarantined for the gipsy moth.

The gipsy moth regulations provide that Christmas trees and Christmas greens shall not be moved or allowed to move interstate to points outside the quarantined area. Forest plant products and field-grown florists' stock, trees, shrubs, vines, cuttings, and other plants and plant products for planting or propagation, excepting fruit pits, seeds of fruit, and ornamental trees and shrubs, field, vegetable and flower seeds, bedding plants and other herbaceous plants and roots shall not be moved or allowed to move interstate to any point outside the quarantined area until such plants and plant products have been inspected by the United States Department of Agriculture and pronounced free from the gipsy moth.

Deciduous trees or shrubs of the area quarantined for the brown-tail moth, or such parts thereof as bear leaves, including all deciduous field-grown florists' stock, vines, cuttings, grafts, and scions, but excepting forest plant products, shall not be moved interstate to points outside the quarantined area until such plants and plant products have been inspected and pronounced free from the brown-tail moth.

Where inspection and certification are required by the regulations, inspection and certification by an inspector or other agent of the Federal Horticultural Board are meant, and such inspection and certification will be furnished without the payment of fees or charges of any nature. Blanks on which to make application for inspection or for permits will be furnished upon request by the United States Department of Agriculture, Bureau of Entomology, 43 Tremont street, Boston, Mass.

WRONG SORT OF HYDRANGEA.

I am sending you under separate cover some hydrangea blossoms. These never come out any more than the specimens sent. What is the matter with them? They are a beautiful blue color.

J. T.

The hydrangea from which you are cutting always produces heads like those forwarded. The trouble is in the variety and not in your culture. In order to get big heads, which are popular commercially, you must purchase some of Otaksa or, better still, some of the new French hybrids, which are fine and embrace quite a variety of colors.

Kalamazoo, Mich.—The H. A. Fisher Co., in order to add to the interest in the flower tag day June 28, offered ten prizes for the ladies who made the largest sales. The Fisher store was headquarters for the taggers.

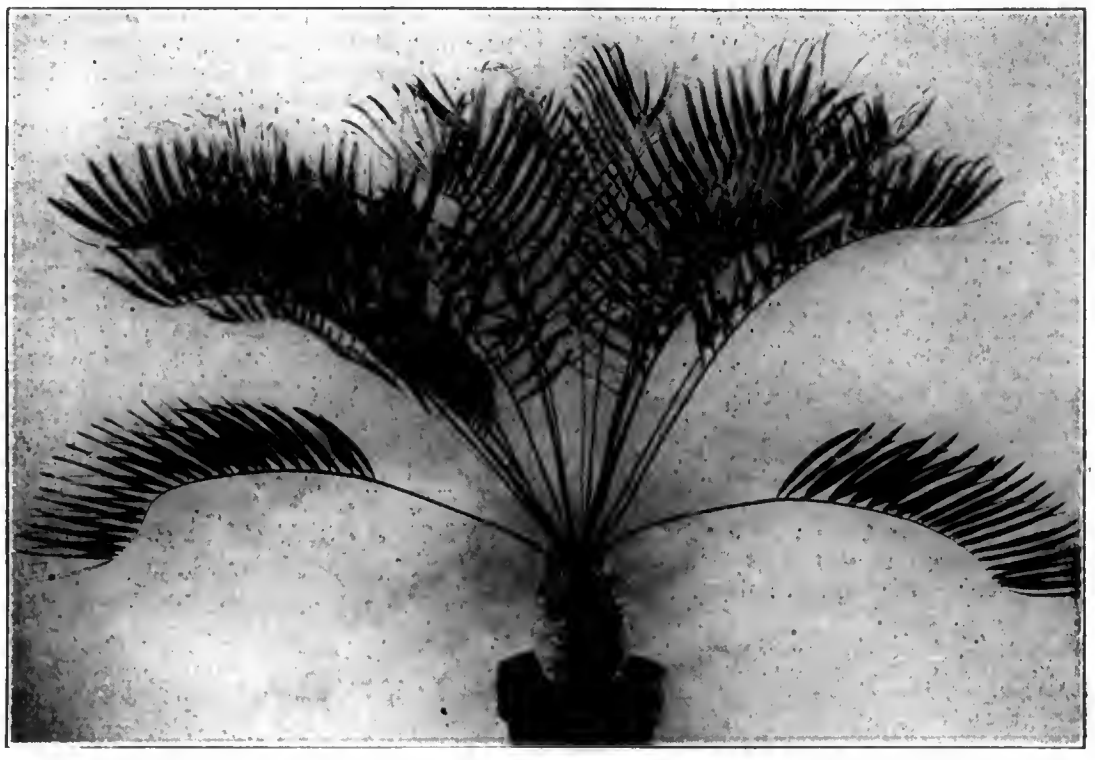
ZAMIA INTEGRIFOLIA.

The Jamaica sago tree, as the subject of this note is commonly known, is the only North American representative of a genus that includes some thirty species, the other members of this group being found in the West Indies, Central and South America, and portions of Africa.

Zamia integrifolia is quite common in parts of Florida, where it is locally known as "Comptie," and plants of it are frequently found in northern greenhouses, and also used for outdoor decoration during the summer.

As will be seen from the plant pictured, it bears some resemblance to a cycas, to which the zamias are closely related, and has the same stout and woody stem, to which are attached a number of rather stiff, pinnate leaves, with narrow leaflets of leathery texture. The manner of growth of the zamias differs from that of the cycas in the fact that the former plants produce their leaves in succession, while the cycas throws up a number of leaves in one growth, thus forming a complete crown of foliage in one operation.



The stems of the zamias are not infrequently sent home by collectors in a similar condition to that in which the imported trunks of cycas are received in this country, namely, minus both foliage and roots, and when arriving in this condition should be treated in the same way as the cycas, being potted into as small pots as may be convenient and placed in a warm and slightly shaded greenhouse, syringed regularly and watered enough to keep the soil moist without getting it sodden before the plants begin to root.

Like the cycas, these plants do not need frequent repottings, but well established specimens will be benefited by an occasional watering with liquid manure during the growing season.

From the fact that the inflorescence of the zamias is in the form of a cone like that of a pine tree, and that the seeds are found between the scales of the cone, usually in pairs, some botanists have concluded that these plants are a sort of connecting link between the palms and the pines, for they combine some features of each.

The stems of the zamias contain much starchy matter, and on this account they are ground up in some parts of the world and the resulting flour made into a kind of sago, from which practice we have the common name, already quoted, of Jamaica sago tree.

This genus also possesses interest in the fact that it is an ancient one, there having been no less than fifteen species of zamia discovered among the fossil plants that have been unearthed in various countries. W. H. T.

Zamia Integrifolia.

THRIPS ON SNAPDRAGONS.

I am sending you some leaves from my snapdragons and also from stevia, which are afflicted with a small black bug which has the tendency, when disturbed, to hop on the leaf. I would like to have you let me know what it is and, also, if there is anything that will destroy it. I suppose it can be killed by hydrocyanic acid gas and would like, if possible, to have you give me the formula for this and state how much it takes to a cubic foot of space.

J. L. M.

The leaves forwarded showed plainly the work of thrips, or hoppers, as they are sometimes called, some dead specimens of these insects also being enclosed. While you could, no doubt, kill these by using hydrocyanic acid gas, there would be great danger of your seriously damaging the plants at this warm season of the year. Snapdragons in particular are susceptible to injury from this gas, even a light dose in winter, with a short exposure, being sufficient to make the tops wilt down even though the leaves themselves may not be scorched.

You have kept your plants in too hot and dry an atmosphere. Had the proper amount of moisture been kept and the foliage well syringed, there would have been little chance for thrips to get a foothold. Syringe your plants freely. Use a nicotine solution at first; then use cold water freely. Formulas for the use of hydrocyanic acid gas can be found in many back numbers of The Review, and this is a good remedy to apply when the weather is cooler.

MORE ST. LOUIS WORKERS.

The accompanying illustration shows the working force of George H. Angermueller, St. Louis. It was prepared from a photograph taken June 28, by Oscar Kuehn, as the employees were about to leave for a half holiday. In the picture, from left to right, are Harry Schlecter, George H. Angermueller, Miss Baumgardner, Miss Georgia Angermueller, John McAna, George Wickmean, W. F. Holtz, Fred Alves, Louis Morganstreet and Eddie McGrath. And we must not forget Spot and Toodles; no difficulty in telling which is which.

Vinton, Va.—O. R. Hedges, the lessee of the greenhouses of C. A. Shaffer & Co., at Alexandria, has moved here from that city.

Houston, Tex.—In order to enlarge the scope of its business, the Henk Dirken Floral & Nursery Co. has incorporated and will establish nurseries and greenhouses to carry on a producing as well as a distributing trade.

Cumberland, Md.—G. Frank Lippold has sold his florists' plant and retired from business. He disposed of his stock of bedding plants at retail. The greenhouses, containing 10,000 feet of glass, are being torn down and the land will be sold for building lots.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The week ending the June record was a great improvement over its three predecessors. Values in roses, valley and carnations were considerably higher until Friday, when the demand perceptibly lessened and the market again returned to midsummer dullness. Valley alone held firm; on Saturday the scarcity was severely felt, and prices rose to the highest level since Easter.

Shipments of roses have decreased and the number of selects and fancies is light. This includes the American Beauties and the novelties. Prices at the week's close were barely steady. The school closings are over, ocean travel is lighter and the month of weddings is but a memory.

Lilies were selling, June 28, at $2 per hundred for the best, but thousands were cleaned out for less. Valley touched 4 cents occasionally. Carnations, when perfect, commanded at times $3 per hundred, in small quantities; $2, however, was the prevailing figure for the best. The sleepy and imperfect stock was practically unsalable. Orchids are abundant and there has been no change from the quotations of a week ago. Few of the sweet peas received would secure prizes at the coming Boston convention. Of the other arrivals of seasonable flowers, stocks, coreopsis, feverfew, phlox, etc., there is no diminution. Buyers dictate prices for these and they sell slowly. Retailers are complaining of a rapid falling off in trade and many of them are already away for their annual recuperation in the mountains or at the seashore.

Plant Growers' Outing.

The seventh annual outing of the New York and New Jersey Plant Growers' Association was held June 24 and 25 at the Delaware Water Gap, Pa. Fifty-five were in attendance. The arrival at the Hotel Kittatinny was in time for lunch. Excursions on the river and in the woods occupied the afternoon and bowling and dancing the evening. The prize winners were: Ladies—Mrs. Baumann, first; Mrs. Schoelzel, second. Gentlemen—A. Schultheis, Jr., first; A. Schultheis, Sr., second. It was after midnight before the dancing ended. Stroudsburg and Portland were visited the second day. All present said it was the most enjoyable affair of its kind the society has held. Secretary Siebrecht says next year it will be an eight days' trip to Bermuda.

Those present were:

Misses—Smith, Louise Dupuy, Dorothy Dupuy, Schultheis, Zeller, Anna Koch, and Kessler.

Mesdames—C. W. Scott, John Scott, and Love.

Messrs.—Dreyer, Fiesser, A. L. Miller, Julius Roehrs, Edward Dupuy, Schultheis, Henry B. Siebrecht, J. G. Kessler, A. Buchholz, Werns and L. Schmutz.

Messrs. and Mesdames—Henry Baumann, Louis Dupuy, F. T. Langan, Herman Steinhoff, Herman Schoelzel, Anton Schultheis, Peter Wagner, Alfred L. Zeller, George Scott, Wm. H. Siebrecht, Sr., Wm. H. Siebrecht, Jr., Charles Koch, Lehnig, Baumann and Winnefeld.

Florists' Club Outing.

The outing of the New York Florists' Club July 1 was, as usual, a great success. The committee was a most efficient one and never before has so great attention been given the details necessary to harmony and accomplishment. Phil Kessler was chairman, and his assistants were Victor Dorval, Harry Weston, A. Buchholz, Louis Schmutz, Jr., W. J. Phillips, Bert Chadwick, Roman J. Irwin, Anton Schultheis, Jr., A. Demeusy, Jr., H. C. Riedel, Paul Meconi.

The attendance was over 300; a large number of those expected remained at home on account of the intense heat. The retailers failed to bring out a strong representation. Aside from the heat the weather was perfect and no accident occurred to mar the happiness of the day. About $400 in prizes was distributed. All the races were strongly contested, but the old favorites were the most successful. The principal prize-winners were as follows:

Drawing for fancy vases, Miss Wittman, Mrs. Powell; tablecloth for ladies' bowling, Mrs. Hornecker; ladies' bowling, open to all, Miss Ilen, Mesdames Schmutz, Phillips, Corebelli, Wittman Chadwick and Georgia; youngest babies, George Cotsonas, Bruce Birnie, Muriel Powell, Raymond Swartz, Evelyn Vocke; oldest lady, Mrs. Jarvis; growers' race, over 50 years, Donaldson, Burlein; growers' race, under 50 years, Smith, Birnie; wholesalers' race, Kessler, Vereke, Kervan; fat men's and seedsmen's races, Joseph Manda; baseball, married men; largest family, Mrs. Einsman; oldest gentleman, Bolles; Press Members' bowling, Lewis, Shaw, Pepper, Falkner; bowling, Sheehan, Irwin, Volke, Traendly, Guttman, Engleing, Handel; prize waltz, Miss Wittman and partner, Mr. and Mrs. Weber; wheelbarrow race, Smith, Kingston, Shaw.

Various Notes.

The movement for Sunday closing has at last won success. Last Sunday, June 29, was the first day on which the agreement went into effect.

The Horticultural Society of New York will hold an exhibition on Saturday and Sunday, July 5 and 6, at the Museum building of the New York Botanical Garden, Bronx park. Prizes are offered for collections of outdoor roses, Japanese iris, sweet peas, flowers of herbaceous plants, flowers of shrubs and trees, and assorted vegetables. Norman Taylor will lecture at 4 p. m. Saturday on "The Hempstead Plains, the Natural Eastern Prairie."

Wertheimer Bros. were moving on Saturday into their new and larger

"WHO'S WHO—AND WHY"

THOMAS H. JACKSON.

DOWN in one corner of the stationery of the New York Cut Flower Exchange, in modest type, one reads "T. Jackson, Mgr." After seven years in the position Mr. Jackson recently was reappointed for an eighth time. The officers of the concern are John Donaldson, president; Victor S. Dorval, secretary, and C. Beckman, treasurer. Their manager was born in "the tight little isle" whence came so many of those who now are leaders in the trade and last summer he took his family home for the first long vacation he has had in years, for "T. Jackson, Mgr., is one who constantly is on the job.

store at 19 to 25 East Twenty-fourth street. This establishment is complete in its facilities and conveniences; even shower baths on the roof are being promised their visitors, and New York headquarters accorded them when in the city. Mr. and Mrs. Sydney Wertheimer will shortly return from their honeymoon trip to Europe.

Interest in the Minneapolis convention grows. There will be a good company from this vicinity and undoubtedly a special car. The transportation committee met last week and decided upon the D., L. & W. route to Chicago, and the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul from that city.

Harry A. Bunyard is in Boston completing arrangements for the sweet pea convention and exhibition.

Herman Weiss is now located in his new and roomy store at 103 West Twenty-eighth street. Barney Jacobs, for twelve years with George Saltford, and lately with Walter Siebrecht, is now in the service of Mr. Weiss.

There are now twenty wholesale florists' houses on Twenty-eighth street west of Sixth avenue. Seven years ago there was but one. The veteran J. K. Allen was the pioneer.

A call at the Polyclinic hospital last week found L. W. Kervan rapidly convalescing. He expects to be at home by the Fourth of July, but would rather be at Gettysburg with his old comrades.

J. K. Allen was one of 250 of the publicity committee of Kearney, East Newark, Harrison and Arlington, that made an 85-mile auto trip last week to Lake Hopatcong, booming the desirability of New Jersey as a home resort for overcrowded New York. It required thirty-five touring cars to accommodate the enthusiasts.

Walter Siebrecht moved, June 28, to his new store at 114 West Twenty-eighth street, which he will occupy until September. He will then move to the ground floor now occupied by Russin & Hanfling.

Woodrow & Marketos opened their branch store at Narragansett Pier June 30. Mr. Woodrow and family have taken a bungalow for the summer at Edgemere, L. I.

George Orth and Matthias Kassner, of H. E. Froment's force, left June 28 for a two weeks' holiday in the mountains.

John S. Nicholas has been seriously ill during the last week, and is still confined to his home. The completion of his various enterprises has been a long and hard strain and he contemplates a rest at the seashore for the summer.

Much sympathy is expressed for John Newall, 286 St. Nicholas avenue, in the sudden death of Mrs. Newall June 26. On the evening of June 25, she was knocked down by an automobile and her skull fractured.

Joseph E. H. Morichard, salesman for the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co., left June 28 for a week's outing in Montreal and other Canadian holiday resorts.

H. Riedel and family are summering at Bath Beach.

Al. Bowler, of the Badgley, Riedel & Meyer force, left June 30 for a month's holiday at Chicopee Falls, Mass. Mr. Meyer is enjoying a four days' rest this week in the Catskills.

Nicholas Schreiner's brother died June 5, and June 27 Mrs. Schreiner lost her mother.

John Trinett, of the Stumpp & Walter Co., sailed June 28 on the Cameronia to Scotland with his wife and family for a few months' trip in England, Ireland and Germany.

Mrs. J. W. Blakeley, of Elizabeth, N. J., died last week at 158 Madison avenue, aged 59. Her husband has been in the florists' business there for over fifty years.

H. M. Robinson, of Boston, was a visitor in New York June 28.

J. C. Silbert, of the Henry M. Robinson Co., of New York, left June 28 for a month's holiday in the Maine woods with his family.

F. A. Kuehn, formerly with Siebrecht & Son, of Fifth avenue, is now proprietor of a store at 621 Central avenue, Newark, N. J.

Frank J. LeClair, formerly with Roman J. Irwin, is now representing Dujardin & Lodwick, importers, of 248 Washington street, New York.

W. C. Smith, of Marion, N. C., was a recent visitor, the guest of the Kervan Co.

Christian Madsen, of Woodridge, N. J., sailed June 5 for Copenhagen to attend the golden wedding of his parents there. He will spend three months in Denmark and Sweden.

William Kessler and family will spend the summer at Fair Haven, on the Shrewsbury river.

J. J. Coan, manager of the Growers' Cut Flower Co., is enjoying a two weeks' holiday in the mountains.

John H. Troy, of the Rosery Co., East Thirty-fourth street, took a prominent part in the celebration of the two hundred and twenty-fifth anniversary of New Rochelle, the city where he resides.

George Blake, of Bonnet & Blake, Brooklyn, is at Gettysburg this week, having gone there to meet his father, from Rochester, who participated in the great battle half a century ago.

A. Watkins has resigned his position with W. E. Marshall & Co.

J. Austin Shaw.

The American Institute has issued the premium lists for its next two exhibitions, to be held at the Engineering building, 25 to 33 West Thirty-ninth street. The first of these is to be September 23 to 25, when late summer flowers, fruits and vegetables are called for. The chrysanthemum show is to be held November 5 to 7. Anyone wanting copies of the list can obtain them by addressing W. A. Eagleson, secretary.

PINCHING MUMS.

I have benched my mums and now they have stems about eight inches long, of good, healthy growth. Shall I let them grow, or would you suggest pinching them down once more? Flowers are wanted about the latter part of October. J. S.

It all depends on whether you want large or medium flowers. If your trade is for rather moderate-priced flowers, it would pay to take out the tops and allow two or three shoots to grow on each plant. It would make no difference in the flowering time of the plants whether they are pinched or not. C. W.

Wilkinsburg, Pa.—Wm. M. Turner, a local florist, has been receiving a great deal of newspaper publicity in Pittsburgh as the result of a suit for divorce which Mrs. Turner is contesting.

...NEWS NOTES...

Lynchburg, Va.—J. J. Fallon has closed his store on Main street for the summer and will transact all business at his greenhouse office.

Marquette, Mich.—E. R. Tauch left July 2 on a trip to Holland and Germany to visit his mother and to look after some purchases of Dutch bulbs.

Grand Rapids, Mich.—Henry Smith gave a talk on his experiences with peonies before the Grand River Valley Horticultural Society June 17.

Sheridan, Wyo.—Chas. W. Lowry has purchased a half interest in the Sheridan Music & Floral Co. and transferred his headquarters from Thermopolis to this place.

Fulton, Ill.—Arthur Still is erecting a range of greenhouses on a tract of land which he recently secured here. The houses will be used largely for vegetables, including cucumbers.

Sedalia, Mo.—Leon S. Hine, formerly a grower for Pochlmann Bros. Co., Morton Grove, Ill., now is in charge of the growing department for the Archias Floral Co.

Berlin, Conn.—The private greenhouses of C. M. Jarvis will be closed after July 18. The gardener, T. B. Mullins, will enter the employ of R. B. Viets, at New Britain, Conn.

West Grove, Pa.—Robert Pyle, president of the Conard & Jones Co., delivered an illustrated lecture at the annual show of the Syracuse Rose Society, June 19, at Syracuse, N. Y.

St. Paul, Minn.—Four or five acres showing over 100,000 peony blossoms last week attracted many people to the plant of the Hoyt Nursery Co. An electric lighting system operated by the company gave a good view of the grounds in the evening.

Algona, Ia.—Mr. Curtis, of the Curtis Floral Co., of Hampton, Ia., has decided to close out his business in this town. In spite of the able management of Miss Dodd, there was not enough business to warrant the continuation of a separate branch here, in the face of so much competition as there is in this city.

Ithaca, N. Y.—At the last meeting of the trustees of Cornell University, the work of the department of horticulture was divided between the two departments of floriculture and vegetable culture. Dr. A. C. Beal was appointed professor of floriculture, and Paul Work will be in charge of the work in vegetable gardening. Cornell is said to be the first institution to have distinct and separate departments of floriculture, pomology and vegetable gardening.

Ipswich, Mass.—George C. Butler, for the last four years superintendent of the Wells estate, at Southbridge, Mass., and gardener for Senator W. A. L. Bazeley for eight years previous to that time, has accepted a position as superintendent of the estate of George E. Barnard, at this place. The Barnard estate, Mr. Butler says, is in exceptionally fine condition and has three times received the prize offered by the Massachusetts Horticultural Society for the best maintained property in the state.

GASSER'S GOOD WORD.

The advertising you placed for us in last week's issue of The Review for a store man and also a greenhouse manager, has brought us a flood of applicants from all over the country and it will be a hard matter for us to pick out the right man to fit the position. The positions we offer are exceptionally good opportunities for the progressive florist of today and one reason they will be hard to fill is because we have had men of sterling worth holding the two positions for the last four years, who have now formed a partnership and will go into business for themselves. They will take over the entire plant and store of the Jas. Eadie Co., and men with the caliber of Frank Schoen and Frank Friedley are bound to make a success of the new firm.

J. M. Gasser Co.

WE WILL, WITH PLEASURE.

Will you kindly publish a paragraph in your paper to the effect that any contributions and donations will be gladly received for the games and sports which will be held at the outing during the S. A. F. convention in August. These prizes will have to come from the trade and any assistance that can be given us will be greatly appreciated. Address communications, etc., to C. N. Ruedlinger, Chairman of the Sports Committee, Minneapolis, Minn.

C. N. Ruedlinger.

OBITUARY.

Edward Schumann.

Edward Schumann, senior member of the firm of Edward Schumann & Sons, was born April 17, 1846, at Trautmann, near Cincinnati, O., and died June 29, 1913, within half a square of the old homestead. He was engaged in the florists' business for about twenty-five years, at first by himself and after 1905 in partnership. His specialties were violets, sweet peas and pansies. The partners now remaining, Edward A. Schumann and Chas. M. Trautmann, will carry on the business. Another son, Fred C. Schumann, is located in Denver, Colo. Mr. Schumann was a man of kindly disposition, loved and respected by all who knew him.

Samuel M. Sibley.

Samuel M. Sibley died of apoplexy Wednesday evening, June 25, at his home, 1959 West Fayette street, Baltimore, Md. Mr. Sibley had been a traveling salesman for many years, having been connected with the Leonard Seed Co., of Chicago. He was 56 years old and a member of Ben Franklin Lodge of Masons. Besides his widow, Mrs. Catherine E. Sibley, Mr. Sibley is survived by two daughters, Mrs. T. H. Tracey, of Cheltenham, Pa., and Mrs. Otto W. Gall, of Binghamton, N. Y.

Sheridan, Wyo.—The plant of the L. M. Best Floral Co. was visited by the Sheridan Manufacturers' Association on its monthly outing June 24.

South Milford, Mass.—W. D. Howard is adding a new section, 65x303, to the greenhouses on his estate. The new space will be used for carnations. With this addition, Mr. Howard will have six large greenhouses.

The Convention Program

THE PROGRAM of the twenty-ninth annual convention of the Society of American Florists, to be held in Minneapolis, Minn., beginning August 19, has been so shaped that the business sessions of the convention will occupy the greater part of four days, instead of the customary three, and the final outing and sports will occur on Saturday instead of Friday. Thus the entire program of business and pleasure will extend from Tuesday, August 19, to Saturday, August 23, inclusive, and will cover a period of five days instead of four, as in the past.

It will be noted, however, that there will be no morning session on the first day of the convention, but that the opening meeting will be called to order at 2 p. m. Probably the majority of attendants, especially visitors from a distance, will heartily approve of that arrangement, as it may be a considerable advantage to them to be free to spend the first half day as best suits their convenience—in renewing friendships, in "getting their bearings" and adjusting themselves to their new surroundings, or in attending to any preliminaries that may seem to them to be important. Then they can settle down to convention business promptly and with a will.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.
Incorporated by Act of Congress, March 4, 1901.
Officers for 1913: President, J. K. M. L. Farquhar, Boston, Mass.; vice-president, Theodore Wirth, Minneapolis; secretary, John Young, 54 W. 28th St., New York City; treasurer, W. F. Kasting, Buffalo.

RESULTS.

We give them. You get them.
We both have them.

NOT a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending The Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar-bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper.

MOST of the big growers are in a position, and inclined, to celebrate the Glorious Fourth, having completed replanting operations. The smaller growers do not plant so early.

IT will be necessary for many New England florists to have their places inspected by the U. S. Department of Agriculture. The new quarantine regulations are summarized on page 15 of this issue.

THE American Gladiolus Society has issued a schedule of premiums for the exhibition to be held in connection with the S. A. F. convention at Minneapolis in August. Copies may be had by addressing L. M. Gage, secretary, South Natick, Mass.

WITH temperatures running 20 degrees above normal, as they have day after day in the latter part of June over wide stretches of the country, it is not to be wondered at that the flower business has been dull. Trade will pick up again with the other swing of the weather pendulum.

CERTAIN publishers object strenuously to the newspaper law recently sustained by the U. S. Supreme Court. The Review does not object to the law; it is by no means so drastic as the measure by which other businesses are regulated. And the gaudy literature of some of the publishers slow to comply with the law makes it appear desirable to compel weekly papers to publish sworn statements of average circulation, just as daily papers now are required to do.

THE THING THAT COUNTS.

Practically every mail brings The Review a letter expressing some advertiser's satisfaction with the results obtained through the purchase of Review advertising space. The purpose of reproducing some of these letters each issue is to inspire others who have not yet awakened to an appreciation of the opportunity The Review affords. There is an old saying that the only way to judge the future is by the past, and the only way to judge what advertising will accomplish for a non-advertiser is by what it has accomplished for those who have been consistent users of space. It makes no difference what is advertised in The Review; results almost always are excellent. Like this:

The results obtained from our advertisements of palms were extremely satisfactory.—Avenue Floral Co., per E. W. Eichling, New Orleans, La., June 27, 1913.

We get good results from our advertisement of flower pots in The Review.—Mt. Gilead Pottery Co., Mt. Gilead, Ohio, June 27, 1913.

MINNESOTA PEONY SOCIETY.

The Minnesota State Peony Association was organized June 24 at the home of B. T. Hoyt, Hamline and Hoyt avenues, St. Paul. Only temporary officers were elected, B. T. Hoyt being designated as acting president. L. J. Boughner and Henry Patthey, of Minneapolis, and Mrs. H. C. Tillotson, of Lake Minnetonka, were appointed a committee to draft a constitution and by-laws to be presented at a second meeting within a few days. C. S. Harrison, of York, Neb., was present and was the principal speaker.

The organization will include both amateur and professional growers. It was announced that a determined effort will be made at the national association meeting, to be held in Chicago June 10 and 11, 1914, to secure the 1915 peony convention for the Twin Cities.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

The closing week of June was anything but an active one for this market, due mostly to the extreme heat of the last ten days. This section seldom experiences the continued torrid weather that has crippled the local market. The high temperature was in direct contrast with a year ago, when cool weather prevailed throughout the month. Both the demand and the supply have been light for the last ten days, as a result of the heat. As to supply, there is little good stock on the market and the shipping stock is decidedly short of the present demand. Not that the demand has been heavy, but weak as it has been, the supply of first grade stock has dwindled steadily until it is hard for the wholesalers to get enough that will hold up. This is due solely to the heat, for there are quantities of roses of the inferior grades that are not easy to move without selling to the street men and elevated-railroad-station operators. It has been almost an impossibility for the growers to get the stock into market before it opened. While it might be cut tight, it suffered on the way to the city.

Carnations are about in the same class, only the good carnations are harder to find than the good roses. Still, there have been quantities of the poor ones that could be handled only with difficulty and at such prices as the buyer cared to offer. For the few good ones that came in the returns have been all that could be expected. Carnations were in much lighter supply June 30, indicating the approach of the end of their season, hastened by heat. With both asters and gladioli a matter of future consideration, the roses and carnations are the only flowers on the market and will continue popular. There are some odds and ends in the way of miscellaneous stock, but they are worthy of only brief mention.

American Beauties continue to come on the market in numbers and there is some excellent stock obtainable, although the majority of the Beauties seem to have been reached by the

Special Notice to Buyers of

BEAUTIES

OUR DAILY CUT IS 6000 TO 8000

GOOD BEAUTIES are not in large supply on this market, but we have by far the largest summer supply in the history of the house—a cut of thousands each day. If you have been disappointed on any order sent elsewhere, try Amling next time. Not only is our supply the largest in the west, but the quality is unexcelled. We are especially anxious to hear from the buyers who need daily shipments, no matter how large. If you can use a dozen Beauties per day, or a hundred Beauties per day, or any other quantity, we want you with us this summer.

SPECIAL QUOTATIONS ON QUANTITIES.

FANCY ROSES

We are ready with a special crop of high quality summer roses. Good roses have become so scarce that medium and long stems carrying quality flowers sell on sight, but we aim never to be without some good roses in the ice-box to go out on late shipping orders. Let us know your needs as early in the day as possible, but call on us at short notice if you must. We have large supplies of Killarney, White Killarney and Bulgarie, an especially large lot of Mrs. Ward and soon will have a big crop of Radiance. You will find us rose headquarters now and all summer.

FANCY VALLEY

You can depend upon us at all times for valley. If you run short, a wire to Amling will bring the valley you need.

ORCHIDS

Our Cattleyas are not surpassed for quality by those to be found anywhere else in this country. It is home-grown stock and will reach you fresh, with full keeping quality.

CARNATIONS

It is remarkable how well our carnations are holding up for so late in the season. We do not recall having had so much good stock at the beginning of any previous July. If you need carnations, order of us.

You can get here all the summer flowers—Sweet Peas, Gladioli, Daisies, Coreopsis, Gaillardias, etc., of excellent quality.

sun. Mrs. Charles Russell has made its appearance and sells well. Killarneys are plentiful in the shorter lengths. While Maryland shows excellent qualities, there are not enough good ones to supply the local demand. Richmond, Mrs. Taft and the yellow roses are not so plentiful as they have been and what good ones the local retailers can find they are ready to take at a reasonable price. Lilies are abundant and the prices obtained for these are lower than they have been for some time. The crops appear to be working off and returns are improving. Sweet peas have been picked in large numbers, but there is no special flurry on these at the present and their soft condition does not afford the wholesaler the chance to move them to any great advantage. The indoor season is about over. Valley holds up well, with the supply not any too large. Cattleyas are abundant, for they are not in large request. Peonies are about out of the market, all cleaned up except for one lot that has been held back to let the others go first and get a clear field. Gladioli are coming stronger every day. A few asters have appeared. Shasta daisies from Michigan are so plentiful, and in some cases so spotted, it is difficult to show satisfactory returns. The Michigan candidums arrived last week, by the thousands; it was impossible to sell them. Some moved a majority of the receipts by selling on any offer, while others held for the regular prices and dumped the greater part of their consignments.

The greens market is quiet, the supply, except of ferns, unusually light.

Foley Wins Suit.

The suit of the Foley Mfg. Co. vs. City of Chicago, reported in The Review for June 19, resulted in a verdict for Foley of $22,500. The case was on trial for ten days, before Judge Pomeroy, the judgment being entered June 27. As previously related in this column, the suit was brought to recover damages to the plant at Western avenue, Artesian avenue, Twenty-fifth and Twenty-sixth streets, caused by the C., B. & Q. R. R. in the elevation of its tracks in accordance with an ordinance passed by the city council. The track elevation deprived the Foley concern of the use of its switch track, which had permitted the placing, at one time, for loading or unloading, as many as ten cars. It not only compelled the company to load and unload its cars elsewhere, at considerable expense for time and teaming, but the track elevation reduced the value of the lumber yards for drying purposes, as the railroad constructed embankments fourteen feet high, thereby cutting off the usual southwest winds of summer.

It is understood that negotiations are pending for the sale of the real estate and buildings, after which the company will be reorganized and the business continued at a more favorable location than the present one has been since the track elevation. It is said P. J. Foley some time ago took options on some desirable sites.

The Oldest House Retires.

Monday evening, June 30, T. T. Clark, receiver for E. H. Hunt, closed the doors on the order of the Superior court. His statement to the court shows $1,800 in cash, a small quantity of merchandise and the uncollected accounts as an offset to liabilities of approximately $11,000. A notice has been given that the accounts remaining unpaid July 3 will be sold, subject to the approval of the court, and bids are solicited. A list of the accounts may be inspected at the office of Holden & Buzzell, 901 Hartford building. Receiver Clark is authority for the statement that $3,000 of the accounts are collectible. The only other asset is such good will as goes with the right to style oneself as "Successor to E. H. Hunt," a privilege to which several are said to aspire.

The passing of this old concern is a matter for general regret. The house not only was the outgrowth of the first cut flower business in Chicago, but for many years was one of the most important in the market. The business was established by E. H. Hunt in 1878. It was incorporated in 1906, after Mr. Hunt's death. His widow was president of the corporation and his stepson, C. M. Dickinson, was treasurer. Mrs. Hunt and Mr. Dickinson are now on a ranch in Montana, forty miles from the nearest postoffice, Terry. Mrs. Dickinson and son left Park Ridge to join them last week.

The Weather in June.

The June business merely reflected weather conditions—it was a month of excessive heat, superabundance of sun and marked deficiency of rainfall. The maximum temperature, 99 degrees, was the highest ever recorded at Chicago in June; also there were eight days during the month when the maximum reached 90 degrees or above, while no previous June had over six such days. There were two short cool intervals during which business revived. The mean temperature was 70.6 degrees, against a normal of 66.3 degrees. The sunshine averaged twelve hours and twenty-four minutes per day, or eighty-two per cent of the possible, as against sixty-nine per cent as the normal. The precipitation only slightly exceeded one inch, less than one-third the normal.

[SECOND EDITION]

It sold so much better than was expected that the First Edition, intended to last a year, was sold out in eight months.

This Album was published in response to many requests from Florists who felt the need for an up-to-date book to be used in taking orders for Funeral Designs, Wedding Decorations and Bouquets, Table Decorations and all cut flower work where it is not practicable to show the customer the finished article as it will be when ready for use. With this Album you can show the finished work, in beautifully printed pictures.

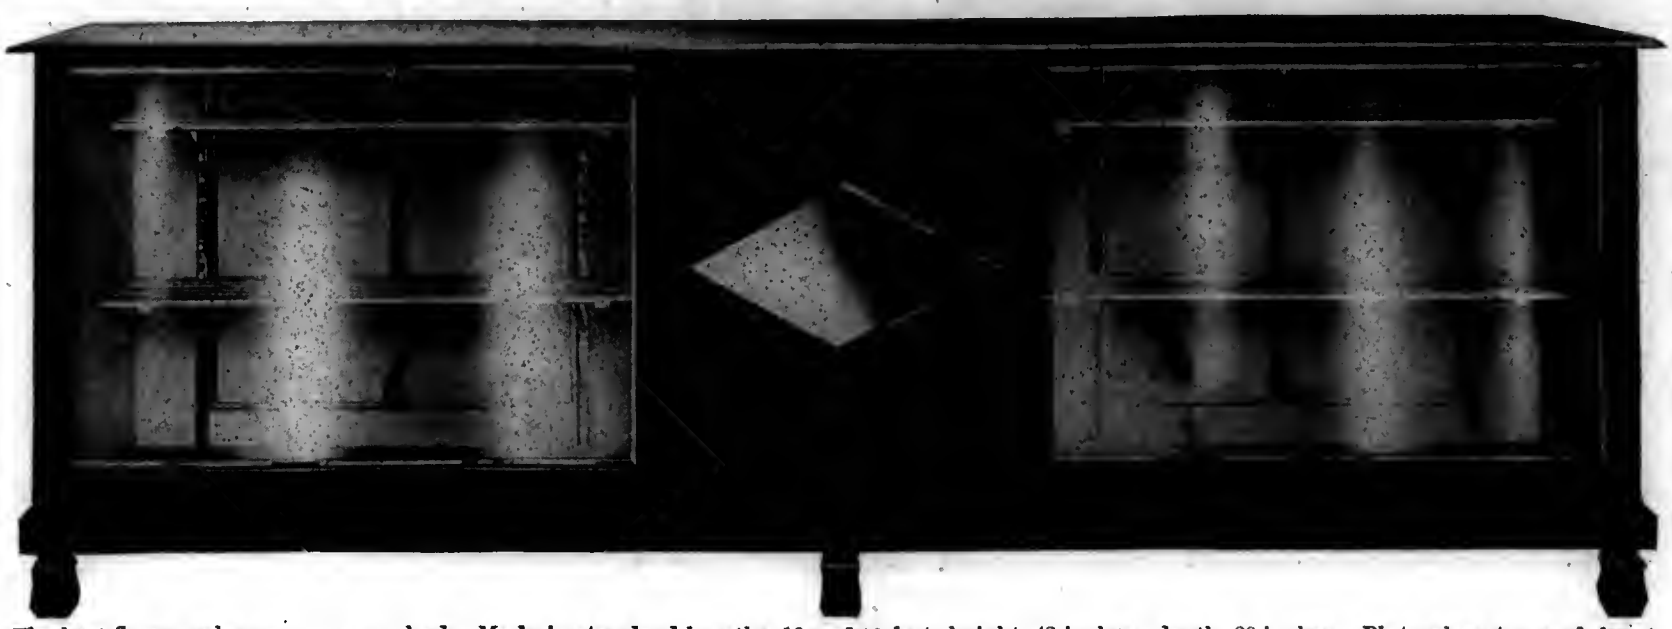
The Album has been THOROUGHLY REVISED for the Second Edition and contains a large number of designs not shown in the wonderfully successful First Edition.

NINETY-SIX PAGES, nearly 300 designs and decorations, beautifully printed on heavy glazed paper, handsomely bound in a cover that will stand wear.

75c PER COPY POSTPAID

$6.00 PER DOZEN BY EXPRESS



The price has not been raised for the Second Edition, although everybody says the First Edition was worth more money, and this is a better book in every way.

The Market.

Stock on the local market is entirely too plentiful and, in some cases, as, for instance, carnations, many hundreds went to waste. There has been a good call for roses, peas and valley, the last named being much used for the numerous weddings. Carnations are already small, which accounts for the small demand for them.

Various Notes.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Rahaley and the baby packed their belongings June 19 and moved to Canada for the summer. Mr. Rahaley has rented a pretty cottage on the Detroit river front, just opposite Belle Isle.

The L. Bemb Floral Co. put another delivery car into service June 30. This is the third car the company has purchased, all three of which are in service.

The following down-town retailers have decided to close at 5:30 p. m. during the summer months: E. A. Fetters, Gus H. Taepke, W. B. Brown, The Flower Shop, John Breitmeyer Sons and B. Schroeter. Some of these will also close at 6 p. m. Saturdays for the summer. About thirty of the largest retail merchants in the city will close at 6 p. m. Saturdays during the summer and a movement is now on foot to close at this time on Saturday the year around.

The Michigan Cut Flower Exchange will close at 5 p. m. during the summer, commencing Monday, June 30. Saturdays they will remain open a little later, no definite closing time being given.

The next regular meeting of the Detroit Florists' Club will be held Monday evening, August 4, when the officers for the ensuing year will be elected.

H. S.

The following was in the Detroit Free-Press for June 25:

Bloodshed as a result of the wrecking of the building at 157-159 Bates street, the site of the new Palace theater, was averted Tuesday afternoon only by the interference of the police.

Enraged by what he termed the carelessness of the wrecking crew, Albert Pochelon, proprietor of the L. Bemb Floral Co., occupying the building next to the structure being wrecked, rushed into the alley and engaged in a heated altercation with W. H. Burgess, who is superintending the wrecking for the Burgess-Ray House Wrecking Co. The two men were separated by Patrolman Fred Kaiser, who had been summoned from police headquarters in anticipation of trouble, apparently just as they were about to come to blows. While the two were arguing one of the Italian laborers employed by the wrecking company had picked up a brick. He was aiming it at Pochelon's head, when he was observed by the patrolman.

"Drop that or I'll run you in," shouted the policeman.

Pochelon looked up and saw the Italian with the brick clutched in his hand.

"Load my shotgun! Load my shotgun!" he cried to a group of his clerks who had gathered in the alley.

He was quieted by the patrolman, who remained on the job to prevent further trouble.

Charleston, S. C.—F. W. Kummer, whose store is known as the Arcade Floral Shop, has moved a few doors north from his former location and is now at 309 King street. The increase in business made larger quarters necessary and the new store fulfills all the requirements, both as to size and general suitability.

The Market.

Although cut flowers are not coming into the market in large quantities, there are enough of all varieties to fill the somewhat limited demand, as business has taken its usual summer slump. There is the usual run of funeral work and June was prolific in its demand for wedding and college and seminary decorations and bouquets.

Various Notes.

Mrs. Mary McCabe and her son, John, had a narrow escape from serious injury when the horse they were driving ran away and threw them out of the vehicle. It was but a short time ago that they had a similar accident.

Among the visitors in town were I. Rosnosky and Bob Shoch, of Philadelphia, and J. W. Grandy, of Norfolk, Va.

Charles Scarborough, with Gude Bros. Co., has returned from his home in New Jersey, but will leave again the end of this week to stay until late in the fall. Mr. Scarborough's parents and two sisters recently were injured as the result of an automobile striking the carriage in which they were riding. He was called home by the accident.

Gude Bros. Co. is observing the summer schedule of early closing and will not be open after six o'clock evenings.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Eastern Market.

The week ending July 2 has been worthy of the coming Fourth. There has not been enough business to distract attention from the approaching holiday. The quantity of flowers coming into town has fallen off, but not nearly so much as the business, which is extremely light. Gladioli are becoming quite important among the cut flowers; America, Augusta, Brenchleyensis and May are all coming in freely, both from outdoors and indoors. They are decorative and meet with fair support. Valley has been in moderately active demand all through the week. So, too, have white roses. Kaiserin is much less plentiful than the White Killarney. Maryland is the summer rose par excellence. The color improves with heat and the size holds well, provided the plants are given enough food and water. There are Beauties, both eastern and local, a few Richmond and some Killarney to complete the assortment.

The carnations that have survived the several hot waves are fairly good; in fact, surprisingly good for July. Easter lilies are a staple summer flower now. The quality is good. There are a number of white flowers from outdoors, candytuft, alyssum, feverfew, achillea. All sell in limited quantity. Then there still are some coreopsis and cornflower. Peonies are about over. Asters have come; in fact, came two weeks ago; mostly pink, with a few white, but so small as to barely suggest the coming glory. Sweet peas still are abundant. Cattleyas, both gigas and Gaskelliana, can be had in numbers; also the white Dendrobium formosum.

Club Meeting.

The July meeting of the Florists' Club was devoted to the serious consideration of the National Flower Show in 1915. After thorough discussion the question of holding the show here still is unsettled. The committee appointed to see John Wanamaker about the use of one of his floors reported progress. Another committee was appointed to find the best available hall. The matter will be decided at the August meeting.

Modern Ideas.

The telephone bell rang. "Can you go over to Roelofs with me this afternoon? It is the last chance for awhile." Work had been heavy; the Senator's invitation had been unavoidably declined; even the picnic had been missed. "All right," went over the wire, and Roelofs it was that late June afternoon.

There are a few places in this country that are as progressive as Roelofs, but it is doubtful whether there is any place in the neighborhood of Philadelphia that excels in progressiveness this newly built plant of the Joseph Heacock Co. I do not refer so much to the magnificent greenhouses and their contents as to the machinery used in running them. This machinery has been largely augmented this month; it was in active operation for the first time June 24. The 6-inch artesian well has been reinforced by a 10-inch well sunk to a depth of 200 feet. The water in this new well rose to within six feet of the surface, rendering a deep well pump unnecessary. Its capacity is over 200 gallons a minute, which makes it unlikely that it will be lowered by any amount of pumping. Next came the ice-making machine, a cold storage plant with its complicated mechanism and coils of ammonia-filled pipes. This improvement, with its mammoth ice-box, has just replaced the old refrigerator cooled by natural ice. The new box is 20x8x12. It is lined with cork and faced inside with concrete. As yet there are no shelves. Robert Jamison, who manages Roelofs, says that the advantage of cold storage over ice is that you can take flowers out in the same stage in which you put them in, which is impossible with ice when the weather is warm. Next came the dynamo, to furnish power for the ice-making machine. Two 150 horse-power horizontal return tubular boilers are being installed to aid the two 100 horse-power boilers that have furnished the steam until now. It is a magnificent array of modern greenhouse machinery.

The two 600-foot houses will show some slight changes next season. Lady Hillingdon, Mrs. Aaron Ward and Radiance have done so well that they have been increased to double their number. White Killarney has been cut down to make room for them; Killarney, too, just a little. Richmond remains the same. This still leaves Killarney as the important rose of the place, in numbers equal or nearly so to all the others together. White Killarney comes next, then Richmond, then Radiance, which looks extremely well now; then the yellow and the copper.

Time forbade a visit to the dairy, where further improvements are being completed. The dairy supplies all the fertilizer used in the greenhouses and all the milk used in Girard College.

Various Notes.

Charles Henry Fox moved four doors south, from 215 to 223 South Broad street, June 25. This move is made necessary by the expansion of the Ritz-Carlton hotel. Mr. Fox will occupy 223 during July and August, while he is putting his new store at 221 South Broad street into shape for the fall. Mr. Fox plans that the exterior will resemble his old store in every respect, while the interior will show many improvements.

YOUR NEW YEAR

The last day of June closes the business year for all of us. With the beginning of July we commence the new year. Will it be a prosperous one? That depends partly on circumstances, chiefly on ourselves, whether we make use of every opportunity. The temptation at this season is to cut down expenses unduly. Don't do it—have enough stock on hand to attract business. A few new Ferneries, some pretty Vases, Sunshine Baskets, Magnolia Leaves, Fern Leaves, Cycas Leaves and Wheat Sheaves are sure to be useful and to increase your receipts. May we send them to you?

The Gateway to the South.

The closing week of June was fairly good locally. There were quite a number of large affairs that utilized the better stock. Average prices, however, were, at the best, only fair, because of the large amount of poorer stock, which sold at almost any price the wholesalers could get for it. The number of flowers coming in is rapidly declining to the usual almost short July supply. Shipping business is good.

The rose supply, while still large, is shortening considerably; choice stock finds a fair market. The continued hot weather has had its effect on carnations. They have decreased in size until now they are much smaller than normal. There is a strong demand for sweet peas, but most of the receipts in this line have everything but actual quality or good condition. The few good ones that come in are snapped up quickly, while many are entirely unfit for anything but the ash barrel. The supply of lilies is large and their quality is excellent. The gladiolus cut is increasing and they are proving good property. The green goods supply is ample.

be deplored. But if good men, who are honest and courageous, are not willing to tell their fellowmen, and especially those fellowmen who are engaged in the same business as themselves, their experiences in the conduct of business, the cost and expense entering into their business and the losses sustained by bad debts and other causes, it seems to me as if the men engaged in business have not yet reached the stage where they are willing to "do unto others as they would have others do unto them."

It has been said that comparison is odious. Therefore, I beg your pardon for making a comparison with another line of business than the seed trade; but in order to bring this matter firmly before you and fix it in your minds, it is necessary to tell you something about what the printers have been doing in the last five years.

Lessons from Another Trade.

In the central part of the United States, where I live, a few years ago it was not an uncommon thing for four printers to differ $500 on a $2,000 job of work, although in most of the towns and cities of that part of the country union wages were paid, union hours were enforced and each printer should have known to a certainty what it would cost him to put a job of work through his shop.

One or two enterprising printers, who possessed educated brains and thoughtful minds, gathered information pertaining to the different departments of their business. After compiling this information and using it in their shops for six months, they were astonished—nearly all of them were scared—because they found they were not making a profit above the cost of operating their business. Some courageous man among them called a meeting of the master printers, and four or five of the men who had compiled cost systems gave the result of those cost systems to the other master printers present. Most of those master printers scoffed and laughed at the figures and said that "the man who made them had certainly been frightened without a cause."

Comparing Notes.

After two days' deliberation the convention recommended that each master printer present keep a strict record of his cost and overhead expense for twelve months, and then they would have another meeting and compare notes. Some of the wise members of the association decided that it would be well for them to raise their prices a trifle, which they did, although other printers in their towns still maintained the same old prices and turned out the same average job of work.

Within a few months the men who raised their prices and increased the efficiency of their shops were turning out better work than the average, and consequently, even though prices were somewhat higher, they were reasonably busy throughout the year.

When the twelve months had rolled around, the majority of those present at the first meeting of the employing printers' association were on hand and willing to give their experience of the past twelve months. Many printers who had not been invited to the first convention were invited to the second, and when these reports from all parts of the country were read there was much less amusement and criticism, and more thoughtful reflection and desire to gain knowledge on this important subject.

Better Output, Better Prices.

Discussion of the reports was carefully conducted and consideration was given to the thought that the public would not stand for the increased price which it was necessary to charge in that line of work in order to make a profit for the man who owned the business.

The men who had proved the efficiency of their shops and who were turning out better work and who had been fairly fortunate during the past year, counseled that every master printer should endeavor to turn out better work and make a higher charge for it. The unanimous opinion of the convention was in favor of increased efficiency and better service, and the printers who attended that convention went home fully determined to do everything they could to better the quality of work turned out by their shops, and to do their part in upbuilding the common welfare of their community.

They Looked Prosperous.

Since that time, three other conventions have been held, and I have been informed that the last convention was attended by a large number of men, who wore much better clothing than those who attended the first convention. I have also been informed that the average increase in cost on a certain job of work has not been more than ten per cent. In the opinion of men who ought to know, the class of work now being turned out is at least forty per cent nearer perfection than it was before the first convention of employing printers. If this statement is true, a great deal of waste has been done away with, because every one of us knows that the work we received from the printer ten years ago was miserable, and we often wondered why people bought goods from us when we sent them such poorly printed literature.

If we are going to do our part in putting the seed business on a higher plane and giving more efficient service to the public, it will be necessary for every man connected with it to give freely of his experience. Service given freely is always returned from seven to ten fold; service given sparingly is sparingly returned. Service counts for almost everything that is desirable, and when given in such a manner as to benefit a general line of busines, the giver is surely going to receive much more benefit than he gave.

NEWS OF THE SEED TRADE

ONIONS for seed in Ohio are not looking any too well.

BEANS are looking fine to date. Weather conditions from planting to late June were ideal.

THERE have been good rains in parts of Michigan and Wisconsin. Not all the peas will have been hard hit by heat.

THE weather has been extremely dry and hot for over a month in the principal seed growing sections of the middle west.

THE death of Sam Sibley, for many years traveler for the Leonard Seed Co., Chicago, is recorded in this week's obituary column.

J. W. EDMUNDSON, of the California Seed Growers' Association, San Jose, Cal., spent July 1 in Chicago, en route home from the seed trade convention.

THE temperature at Sacramento June 30 was 92 degrees in the shade with a 16-mile wind. The damage to the crops up the river must have been considerable.

REPORTS from Holland at the beginning of June, when lifting of tulips had been begun, were not of optimistic character. Crops will not be up to last year.

THE onion set crop at Chillicothe is not any too flourishing. Harvesting has been begun at Louisville. At Chicago the present outlook is for not over half a crop, less if rain is long delayed.

THE board of public works of Evansville, Ind., temporarily turned down the petition of the Ohio Valley Seed Co., for a switch from the Southern Railway tracks into its property on Indiana and Rowley streets.

CONTRARY to all early expectations, the turnip seed crop at Nashville, Tenn., has proven almost a failure. Just as the plants were in full bloom, there was a freeze that caused blighting and just before maturity the aphis got on them so badly that there were some fields unfit to cut at all. The leading grower there is said to be delivering ten per cent on his contracts. From present indications there will be a short crop of cow peas, even if there should be plenty of rain from now until the end of the season. There are many fields that have already started to die.

MOST seed stores will close from Thursday, July 3, to Monday, July 7.

OF the Barteldes Seed Co., Denver, J. R. Kern and J. M. Wiesel are joint managers.

APPARENTLY the peas will get their usual backset again this year. The three weeks following June 20 ordinarily are the critical time with the crop and the weather has been unusually hot and dry this season.

Charles C. Massie.

THERE are reports in the daily papers of rains in California but telegraph advices July 1 say there has been no precipitation of consequence in the seed growing sections. Rain at this time of course would do at least as much harm as good.

A VERDICT of $3,000 has been returned against the widow of the late W. W. Rawson, the Boston seedsman. Katherine McLeod, the nurse who attended Mr. Rawson, was injured by a fall on his stairs. She brought suit. The Superior court found for the defendant; but the Supreme court, June 20, returned a judgment against the widow.

SEED TRADE CONVENTION.

Cleveland Meeting Concluded.

In The Review for June 26 there was a full report of the first two days of the thirty-first annual convention, which opened at Cleveland June 24; report of financial and membership strength, papers read, committee reports and a general survey of the business before the convention, which principally related to seed legislation and the parcel post. showing of continuous growth that has been characteristic of its recent years.

The Parcel Post.

The discussion of the parcel post occupied the greater part of one of the sessions and brought out the same divergent views previously expressed. Complaint was universal; nobody was satisfied, but the reasons for dissatisfaction were various and the remedies proposed were of all sorts and kinds. While the discussion was going on the postmaster general issued an order that will do away with one serious complaint—he directed that on and after July 1 ordinary postage stamps and parcel post stamps can be used interchangeably, letter stamps on parcels and parcel stamps on letters. This will let seedsmen clean up the embarrassing accumulations of ordinary stamps that have resulted from the operation of the season just closed. Some of the argument was for the improvement of the present system under which seeds and plants do not take the parcel post rates at all, while others wanted simply to have seeds and catalogues classed with other merchandise under the present zone system. Still others wanted a parcel post on the zone plan, only with fewer zones, but the majority were not in favor of either of these propositions and in the end a resolution was adopted favoring the abandoning of the present arrangements and the inauguration of an entirely new parcel post under a flat rate law, a no-zone plan. It was recognized, of course, that there is no immediate prospect of such a radical change in the law, but it was thought to be sure to come, sooner or later.

"The trouble is," said Secretary Kendel, "that it takes an enormous amount of time to look up each package and find out what zone it goes into. To a small firm which only sends out a half dozen parcels a day, this is of little moment, but to a firm sending a thousand, the time consumed by the clerical force in looking up the zone, soon amounts to a great deal of money. A flat rate to all places would eliminate this expense."

Crop Reports.

For the last two years the feature of confidential crop reports has been made much of at the convention, growers being urged to supply the latest information under the pledge that it would not be made public except to the members in executive session. This year the crop reports were not featured in the program, perhaps because practically all such news is of a most discouraging nature. In spite of the fact that the previous efforts were not made, some crop reports were received. L. Dæhnfeldt, of Odense, Denmark, sent a mail report and supplemented it by cable June 23, sending a copy of the cable to The Review. It was:

"Mangels, carrots, promising; cabbages, cauliflowers, spinaches, middle; rutabagas, beets, turnips, radishes, kale, below middle."

Visit to Painesville.

One of the pleasantest afternoons ever spent by the members of the American Seed Trade Association was that of June 26. At the adjournment of the convention two special cars on the interurban railroad were in waiting to take the party to Painesville, where fifteen automobiles met them and took seed firms of the United States and Canada and an aggregate annual business of many million dollars. Mr. Massie's election to these positions is regarded by seedsmen as an honor not alone to him, but to the Minneapolis seed business, because he is a product of the local industry. He has been engaged in the seed business in Minneapolis for twenty-one years. He came from Scotland in 1891, a lad of 19, with no qualifications but a common school education and bringing up on a farm. He began work with the firm of which he is now one of the heads, his first duty being turning a fanning mill in its seed cleaning department. Since that time he has served in practically every department, been traveling salesman, made journeys to Europe and seed centers elsewhere to study methods and has been head of several of the firm's departments."

Silver Pink News

FOR A YEAR OR MORE I have been telling the virtues of my Original Silver Pink Snapdragon from seed. Many have accepted our story, some have doubted, and a few (mostly competitors) have knocked us good and hard. We had our reputation at stake, knew our business and attended strictly to it. Today our patrons do the talking, and the sailing is plain and easy for SILVER PINK—the one great Snapdragon of the age.

Washington, D. C., June 13, 1913.

G. S. Ramsburg, Somersworth, N. H.

Dear Sir: Replying to yours of June 10 in reference to Silver Pink Snapdragon, beg to advise that we have had very satisfactory results from seeds. First: With the exception of a few golden sports, the color is uniform and perfect. Second: Second crop on the plants has beaten anything that we have seen. Third: In reference to disbudding, they grew so fast and blossomed so profusely that there was positively no need for disbudding.

We remain, very truly yours,
Gude Bros. Co.

Dover, N. H., June 20, 1913.

Mr. Ramsburg: Kindly duplicate my last year's order for 500 Silver Pink Snapdragon from seed. Never had so many blooms from Snapdragon before, and it gives me pleasure to tell others of your fine stock.

Very truly, C. L. Howe.

Kennebunk, Me., June 19, 1913.

Mr. G. S. Ramsburg.

Dear Sir: Will say in reply to your inquiry about Silver Pink Snapdragon from seed that it was very satisfactory. The flowers were very nice, with only a few golden sports in the lot. I wish to reorder 200 plants.

Very truly yours, J. O. Elwell.

Most anyone will say that a thing is beautiful, but it requires a multiple of good qualities to attract the attention and receive the indorsement of such men as the above, who are sound, hard-headed business men who are not growing plants wholly for pleasure, but who would justify their time by the largest increase of dollars. Note that their reorders are for plants from seed, while they could have made countless thousands of cuttings from the plants they grew.

I would have you note the character and standing of the men who so enthusiastically indorse this great Snapdragon. Gude Bros., Washington, D. C., are among our leading business florists and have to do with many of the greatest business and social functions in our country at the National Capital. They grew Silver Pink from seed last season and have bought seed for another big lot this season. C. L. Howe, Dover, N. H., owns and conducts the largest wholesale and retail flower business in all New England, with stores in several principal cities. J. O. Elwell is a prosperous and up-to-date grower, with a strong list of high-class trade, at Kennebunk, Me., a fashionable seaside resort. Many more could be added—but what's the use? Silver Pink from seed is the greatest money-maker of the lot, producing twice as many blossoms as any variety from cuttings. We put the price low and mean to keep it there. You don't have to mortgage a house to have a bed of Snapdragon. From one to three packets of seed will fill most requirements. The price is $1.00 per pkt. of over 500 seeds; 3 pkts., $2.50, delivered.

Plants from seed now ready, at $4.00 per 100; $35.00 per 1000, by express.

SOW SEED NOW for plants to follow early mums. All business cash, please.

NOTE.—Full cultural directions free to new and former customers. To others, 25c in stamps.

HEAT IN OLDER PEA DISTRICTS.

It has been tremendously hot and dry in the pea-growing districts of Michigan and Wisconsin for the last week of June and great damage has been done the crops, especially the later varieties and later plantings, that were just in flower when the hot wave struck. Here are the official temperatures, maximum, at three stations:

June, 1913.	Green Bay.	Grand Rapids.	Alpena.
24	84°	86°	72°
25	80°	88°	82°
26	84°	88°	86°
27	94°	94°	78°
28	84°	94°	66°
29	94°	96°	80°

THE PEAS ARE HIT.

"The terrific hot spell of the last week is having its effect on peas and is sure to do great injury to the late varieties; the early varieties came through without getting much hurt, as they were far enough advanced and came in pod just about the time the hot wave struck." This is the report of a Michigan operator who believes his peas are earlier than the general crops throughout the state. He adds, "From what we hear, the hot weather is burning up the crops.

The KENILWORTH Giant Pansy

seeds are all grown by myself and are offered in the following mixtures and separate colors:

KENILWORTH STRAIN—The flowers are of perfect form and substance: many of the immense flowers are from 3½ to 4 inches; it is a striking collection of beautiful colors and markings, rich with shades of red, brown, bronze, mahogany and many others too numerous to mention. Light, Medium or Dark Mixtures.

KENILWORTH SHOW—An extra fine strain of large flowers; the immense flowers are of circular form and great substance; a beautiful collection of colors and markings.

KENILWORTH CUT FLOWER MIXTURE—Is a distinct class by itself, surpassing all other strains as a cut flower or for exhibition purposes, for inside or outside growing: the large flowers are carried erect above the foliage on heavy stems, 7 or 8 inches long, in the most graceful manner, and stand the hot, dry weather well.

MASTERPIECE—A remarkable type; the curled, wavy petals giving the flower a double appearance, its large flowers of great substance, on long, strong stems.

ORCHID FLOWERED, Mixed—A dwarf free bloomer with a range of delicate colors that do not exist in any other pansies, a remarkable combination of light rose, shell pink, blush mauve, fawn, light brown, orange and chamois.

We have not heard much from Wisconsin, but we understand they have been having the same kind of weather over there, and we should think it would have the same effect with peas at this time of the year when they are in their critical state. We have no news from our crops in Ontario, except to say that the Canadian grown peas do not cut much of a figure, as they are grown in such small quantity in comparison to what they grew in other years. The latest news we have from California is to the effect that pea crops are badly damaged, some entirely ruined. On the whole, it is stated, by the best authority, that California will not harvest one-third of a crop of peas. We have no reliable news from Oregon, but the peas grown in that section do not cut much of a figure one way or the other. As to crops in Idaho and Montana, will say that peas were backward in Montana, and the early varieties just in bloom while the late peas have just fairly started. In Idaho our crops are showing up well in the Twin Falls district, as well as our crops near St. Anthony, but we do not look for so good a crop as last season for the reason that it was too dry this spring and peas were late in coming up. In many instances it was necessary to irrigate them to get them to come up, and many peas are thin on the ground. This, of course, will cut the crop down some and we could hardly look for as good a crop as last season from that part."

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

Portland, Ore.—William S. Sibson, the proprietor of the Sibson Rose Nurseries, acted as judge at the annual rose show at Sedro Woolley, Wash., June 24.

Logan, Utah—The Cache Valley Floral Co. is doing a thriving business and, to accommodate its growing trade, is now building an addition, 12x50 feet.

Astoria, Ore.—The Astoria Florist, Chas. E. Whiton, is planning to tear down his old greenhouses and build two new houses, 27x100 feet. One will be used for carnations and the other for chrysanthemums and pot plants.

LOS ANGELES, CAL.

The Market.

Stock is still cleaning up fairly well and there is little change from last week in the variety offered. Gladioli are becoming rather too plentiful, but they have probably never been better than this season. Several varieties of statice have been shown as novelties and a few nice dahlias have been seen. Orchids have been scarce some days and the gigas varieties are practically over in local houses. Roses are good, both from indoors and outdoors, though mildew is too prevalent in some places. Carnations and centaureas are plentiful and there is the usual assortment of small flowers from outside. Some elegant outdoor Easter lilies are in and a few rubrums have made their appearance. Water lilies are not much shown, but the few seen are good.

The New Park Greenhouses.

While I had heard a great deal about the new greenhouses at Eastlake park, I had never seen them until last week, when I had the pleasure of a look through with Park Superintendent Shearer and Mr. Gowans. While at first glance the work looks a little heavy, it is certainly not of the character described by self-appointed critics here. As Mr. Shearer points out, the main buildings are not propagating houses, but conservatories, where the general public can enjoy a sight of palms and other plants from temperate climes without stewing in hot and moist houses. And I can personally vouch for the fact that they were pleasantly cool during one of the warmest June days we have had, while the light is well broken up and diffused through the rolled glass. They are houses that a cultivator who knows his business can maintain in a good condition. The ventilating and other gear is all that could be desired. The park commissioners have a good deal of work before them and the appropriations are not too large, so it will do no good to be carping at them.

Regarding the propagating houses, I would prefer larger, wider houses, with less cement floor work and each standing separately, to admit side air. There will probably be difficulty in keeping them cool during hot weather without undue shading. Regarding the clearing away of a lot of the useless shrubbery and opening the park up, this is undoubtedly good landscape work. Much of the old, trashy stock was too thickly planted in the first place and the shrubs have been fighting for a living ever since. A good expanse of lawn, well kept, will be a decided improvement.

A fine new boathouse has been built in Hollenbeck park and, as showing that Mr. Shearer is of open mind and does not wish to run down his predecessors, he was loud in his praise of the work of the late Mr. Tomlinson, well known here many years, who arranged and planted this beautiful little park.

Various Notes.

Manager W. Wern, of Wright's Flower Shop, has purchased a fine Henderson touring car, which he says he finds exceedingly useful, and from which he and Mrs. Wern get lots of pleasure. Few men stick more closely to business than does Mr. Wern and he deserves all the pleasure and good health that automobiling will bring him. There has been a continuous round of wedding and commencement orders right through the month here.

Business is reported good at the new Williamson store. The firm has obtained a good deal of work from customers of the new German-American bank.

The Freeman-Lewis Co. made a magnificent urn for the opening of the German-American bank—something entirely unique and greatly superior to most of the work in this line. The design was about ten feet high, worked out in centaureas, and the urn was filled with fine Radiance roses. The base was of Easter lilies and there was none of the flatness usually characterizing this kind of work. C. Lewis was responsible for this immense piece and it was surely "some task."

For the opening of the German-American bank Murata & Co. supplied 10,000 greenhouse carnations, to be given away as souvenirs.

H. Reeve Darling will leave shortly with the Sierra Club for a long jaunt through the high Sierras, starting from San Jacinto. The party will return July 30, when another big trip will be undertaken, Mr. Darling going as "guide, philosopher and friend." Few people know the high mountain regions better than Mr. Darling and his services are always in request.

Dr. A. D. Houghton, well known in this city as a clever botanist, traveler and horticulturist, was married in Chicago, June 23, to Miss Florence Gildersleeve. The honeymoon trip was over the Great Lakes, and Dr. and Mrs. Houghton will be at home to their friends here late in August.

A. J. Beverley, of Santa Barbara, is in town, demonstrating his excellent sprayers, which are being well received here.

Business keeps up well at the Los Angeles Flower Market and the changes made in the arrangement of the store are bearing fruit in the ease of handling the trade. H. R. Richards.

not much worse than it is usually at this time. The weather is all that could be asked for. Cool days and cooler nights make conditions that are ideal for both the grower and the retailer. Seldom do we have roses that are of such good form and color as those of this year. This is true also of all the seasonable flowers. Prices, however, have no standing at present. The daily demand is the only factor in the negotiations between buyer and seller and it is needless to say that all values are thrown to the winds many times during the morning hours. June has redeemed itself in the matter of weddings this year. The early part of the month was devoted to school commencements, but as soon as these were over, there came a large number of wedding decorations that were well distributed among the stores.

As a consequence, valley, orchids and white roses have been well used up for the last few weeks and little or nothing has gone to waste. A large quantity of longiflorums are being brought into town, but they do not move quickly. America gladioli are seen by the thousand and, although they do not seem to sell as well as they did last season, they are being used lavishly for window and other decorations. They cost the retailers but $1.50 per hundred, which is much cheaper than they have ever been sold here before. Bride gladioli, iris and peonies are over for this year. Other lines of stock do not show any change.

Business has been good, it being the week of the high school commencements. While the movement to dispense with flowers at graduation is well under way, there are quite a number of people who do not heed the notice.

Flowers are not overplentiful. Roses are inferior and such varieties as Maid, Killarney, Ward and Hillingdon are about all thrown out. Richmond is declining rapidly. Carnations are gradually becoming scarce and of poor quality. Peas are plentiful, but the rains of the last week have injured them to a certain degree. Shasta daisies, delphiniums, sweet williams, poppies and gaillardias are overplentiful.

SEATTLE, WASH.

The Market.

As usual at this season, there is not much doing in cut flowers. The cars from suburban districts have many passengers carrying in flowers to their friends, so that the few who do not have gardens are kept well supplied by the many who have, and there is consequently not much demand for flowers at the stores. Funeral work and weddings, however, have been plentiful and there has not been much unsold stock. Carnations are not so low in price as they have been at this time and good roses are ready sellers.

The Rose Show.

With an attendance of 40,000 people, an ideal spot to hold a show, fair weather and, for the most part, satisfied exhibitors, the second annual rose show of the Mount Baker Park Improvement Club may well be said to have been an unqualified success. The exhibits by amateurs were an improvement on last year's show and prove that there are many good and enthusiastic rose growers in this city. Their roses in many instances would compare favorably with those of professional growers. The bloom of Melanie Soupert which won the sweepstake prize and gold medal for best individual rose was a beauty.

The trade was fairly well represented. Some notable exhibitors were conspicuous by their absence, but those present more than made up for it. The H. B. Burdett Co. had an artistic display, but owing to neglect in finishing was not in the prize list. The display of the Rosery certainly deserved its place on the prize list. The Burns Floral Co. was well represented and had a most attractive stand. Thomas Wylie put up a show of perennials that received considerable attention. Rosaia Bros. had a good background of palms and roses and used sweet peas for the centerpiece. The Seattle Landscape & Nursery Co. had a varied collection of roses, shrubbery, alpines and perennials and the booth was crowded for most of the two days. J. J. Bonnell, the Aabling-Ebright Co. and the Burdett Co. all had good displays of shrubbery, new roses, etc. Following is the prize list for the trade:

Potted plants and cut flowers—The Rosery, first; the Seattle Landscape & Nursery Co., second.
Lawn shrubs—J. J. Bonnell, first.
Long-stemmed roses—The Rosery, first.
Blooms—The Seattle Landscape & Nursery Co., first; J. J. Bonnell, second.
Perennials—Thomas Wylie, first.

Various Notes.

Rosaia Bros. are erecting a new rose house, 40x100 feet, at their plant at Thomas. This looks as though they were satisfied that roses can be successfully grown under glass here.

J. J. Bonnell is shortly to make a trip to Europe. He plans to visit his native place and some of the botanical gardens and nurseries as well, combining business with pleasure.

C. Heffner has opened a flower shop on the corner of Pine street and Westlake.

C. Hefty was a visitor here last week on his way to Vancouver from Portland, Ore.

John Gill, of the E. Gill Nursery Co., West Berkeley, Cal., was here calling on the rose sellers last week.

C. L. Wilcox, at Houghton, has been growing cucumbers. Seeing the error of his ways, he now is taking them out and planting carnations.

Charles Muench is opening a flower store in the new Joshua Green building, on Fourth avenue at Pine street.

PECKY CYPRESS LIVES LONG.

In view of the fact that cypress is almost universally recognized as the most durable and most serviceable wood for greenhouse construction, it will be interesting to the trade to know that government statistics show one-third of the cypress in the United States to be diseased with a fungus popularly known as "pecky."

The effect of the disease is not entirely injurious, since it is believed to act as a preservative upon the wood which remains, and to hinder decay. It is a common saying that "pecky cypress never rots." The fact seems to be undisputed that it lasts at least as long as unaffected wood. It is not, however, as strong, because of the per-

GLASS CUTTERS BY MILLION.

Probably every greenhouse owner has a glass cutter in his stock of tools, but few probably have given a thought to the enormous sale these articles have. Smith & Hemenway, New York, who manufacture the Red Devil brand so largely used in this trade, in a note regarding the introduction of a new self-oiling cutter, say their sales of glaziers' tools annually run upwards of 2,500,000.

AMERICAN SWEET PEA SOCIETY.

It Pays

To Pacific Coast Florists:

What stock have you for sale to the trade? Is it moving as it should? No?

Then tell the trade about it by using the Pacific Coast Pages of The Review.

Pacific Coast advertisers almost invariably report good results. Like this:

Say! That ad's a humdinger for getting the business.—Everett Floral Co., Everett, Wash.

I sold all the Mum cuttings advertised, and you will not hear from me again until I can get some more stock ready. Shall root 100,000 Carnation cuttings for next season, as I know The Review will sell them for me.—Frank Wilhelm, Los Angeles, Cal.

Please cut out of our advertisement in The Review the cyclamen seedlings. We sold all our surplus cyclamen seedlings as a direct result of our advertisement in your paper.—Spokane Greenhouses (Inc.), Spokane, Wash.

We want to say that our last advertisement in The Review brought us orders from both the Atlantic and Pacific coasts. We had, strangely enough, on following days, orders from Salem, Ore., and from Salem, Mass.—State Floral Co., North Yakima, Wash.

We are well pleased with the results obtained by advertising in the Pacific Coast Department of The Review. We sold out clean and refused many orders. The Review surely gives results. —Van Slyke & Seamons, Tacoma, Wash.

NINE PAGES OF RETAILERS' CARDS

This department for the cards of Leading Retail Florists — those florists who have the facilities for filling the orders sent them by other florists — has made possible the recent rapid development of this branch of the business, a branch of the trade now established for all time and so helpful that its volume will keep on increasing for many years.

Are you sending and receiving your share of these orders? You can send your share (and make 20 per cent profit without effort) if you let your customers know you can perform this service for them. To receive your share—well, The Review's department for Retailers' cards remains the one way of getting prompt action on the order in hand.

To be represented costs only 70 cents per week on a yearly order. This is for one-inch space. Other spaces in proportion.

ST. LOUIS.

The Southwestern Market.

There seems to be plenty of stock at the wholesale markets. Fancy grades of roses and carnations, however, are scarce in comparison with other stock. The retail trade is, of course, quite dull, as the flower-loving people have gone north to summer resorts and the only thing that keeps the florists going is funeral work, which has been plentiful. The wholesalers say that the demand for white flowers has been steady all week and that good stock sells readily at any price.

The growers are about ready to pull out the old stock. Prospects are that stock is going to be scarce, as the field-grown stock is poor, owing to so little rain. They will begin to cut gladioli from the outside this week and then the supply will be heavy.

Prices on all stock coming in are low. Sweet peas have gone to the bad and carnations are small in flower. Roses are about the best flowers that come in at present and the demand for them has been heavy. The store men keep themselves busy cleaning up and making necessary alterations during the dull summer months.

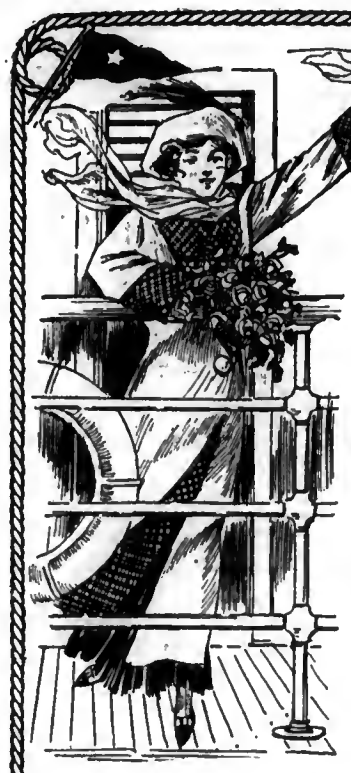
Various Notes.

Harry Balsley, of the Detroit Flower Pot Co., spent a few days here last week.

The staff of the Windler Wholesale Floral Co. spent the Saturday half-holiday at the baseball park, watching the Cardinals and the Pirates.

Since the season closed, F. C. Weber has had a force of carpenters at work building a new office and other necessary improvements.

Otto Bruenig, of the H. G. Berning force, is on his vacation and is taking a trip east for ten days. He is a brother to Mrs. Berning.



City Forester Jule Koenig spent Saturday, June 28, at Collinsville, Ill., with a party of Masons doing degree work for a local lodge there.

David Geddes says one must read The Review from the first to the last page or he will miss a lot of good things. What is the other fellow doing?

William Ossick, chairman of the trustees, says that a number of special picnic prizes have been offered by the local florists, but more can be used. Arrangements are all completed for the annual outing July 17.

Edwin Denker, state vice-president of the S. A. F., reports that the St. Louis convention party will travel by boat. The fare will be $28 for the Oscar Kuehn, head of the wire work department of the W. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co., has taken a lot of splendid photographs at the Missouri Botanical Garden. All of his days off are spent in this kind of work.

The Lady Florists' Home Circle spent Wednesday and Thursday, June 25 and 26, as guests of Miss Matilda Meinhardt at her cottage at Chautauqua. They returned home Thursday evening and all had a splendid time.

Frank Weber, of the H. J. Weber & Sons Nursery Co., says that the long dry spell was hard on the young nursery stock and that there was considerable loss. The recent rains saved a lot of the stock. Mr. Weber expects to take a trip east this summer.

Mrs. Elizabeth Jane Halstead, mother of Dr. A. S. Halstead, president of the St. Clair Floral Co., of Belleville, died last week at her home in Santa Barbara, Cal. The local florists extend their sympathy to Dr. Halstead.

C. E. DeWever left June 30 for Chicago for a week's stay on business matters. Mr. DeWever has a fine plant in the country and will soon begin to cut his outdoor gladioli, of which he has 75,000. He has also many thousand field-grown roses.

George Schriefer, head of the cut flower department at C. A. Kuehn's, says he will pitch the wholesalers' team to victory at the annual picnic this month. Mr. Schriefer has the Mathewson fade-away ball working to perfection.

Among the Belleville florists, E. W. Guy, Gust Grossart, H. Emunds, the St. Clair Floral Co., A. G. Fehr, Walter Ogle and Mat. Schoenberger, all had a

The St. Louis Florists' Club will hold its regular monthly meeting July 10, in Edwardsville, Ill., at the plant of the J. F. Ammann Co. The members will meet at the Eads Bridge at 12:30 and go in a body. All members are expected to make this trip, and a good time is assured to all who come.

BOSTON.

The Market.

The passing of June, with its weddings, class days, graduations, commencement exercises and other functions, and the arrival of much warmer weather, have reduced the cut flower trade to its usual midsummer ebb. Fakers are now the principal flower buyers, and salesmen who frown on these helps to the market, when prices are soaring, are now glad to see them coming around and wish they were more numerous, for they handle a lot of flowers which would otherwise be consigned to the rubbish barrels.

Roses are not of good quality. The hot weather is proving too much for them; low prices prevail and good clearances are out of the question. Some nice summer Beauties, Tafts, Wards and Kaiserins are seen. Carnations are getting beautifully less, both in number and in size. A few fancy flowers make $2, but 50 cents per hundred is a more general price. Sweet peas have had a hard time of it lately and are selling low. The local peony crop was finished this week. It has not proved particularly profitable. Lilium auratum is seen on some stands. Cornflowers are abundant. Gladioli, with some growers, are over. English iris is seen in small batches. Of such flowers as stocks, feverfew, snapdragons and marguerites there is considerable waste. Trade for lily of the valley and gardenias is poor, but cattleyas are less abundant and are moving quite well. Business in green goods is quiet.

Various Notes.

Moses Penn, the well known Washington street florist, and Miss Arnold, of Boston, were married at Ottsfield Hall, Roxbury, June 24. The newly married couple were well remembered by a large circle of friends and received many handsome gifts.

Interest in the Minneapolis convention is steadily growing locally. Booklets with the official tour have been issued. The party will leave Boston August 15, visiting Montreal, St. Anne's, Toronto, Niagara Falls and Chicago, going thence to Minneapolis via the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul R. R., with a choice of routes returning. The tour has been arranged under the auspices of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston and the Horticultural Club. All who plan going with the New England party should communicate with W. P. Edgar, Horticultural hall, who will give all information needed.

David Welch, of Welch Bros. Co., left for Liverpool June 24 on his annual European trip, and plans to return about the last of July.

Most of the retail stores are closing for the summer at 6 p. m., except on Saturday, when they close at 8 p. m.

The local executive committee of the American Sweet Pea Society met at Horticultural hall June 28 and completed the prize list for the exhibition to be held July 12 and 13. A substantial subscription to the general fund, sufficient to liquidate all indebtedness, was reported; also quite a number of special prizes for the coming show. Those present were: President William Sim, Secretary Harry A. Bunyard, James Wheeler, Thomas Roland, Robert Cameron and W. N. Craig. Everything ling roses of his own raising at the Arnold Arboretum. Among these are Lady Duncan, fine bright single pink, large size; Professor Sargent, Mrs. W. C. Egan, Dawson and others. Rosa rugosa repens alba is highly thought of here. Some pretty new things are flowering in the collection sent from western China by E. H. Wilson. In the greenhouse Mr. Dawson, who is a past master in the art of propagating difficult subjects, showed me plants of Acacia pubescens from grafts in August, 1912, which are now from twenty-seven to thirty inches high. The Market.

There has been a perfect stream of weddings and funerals during the last two weeks and business has been good all along the line. The weather has been unfavorable for outdoor plants, as it has been unprecedentedly hot and dry. There have been local showers, but nothing that would at all break the drought. As a result, there are no more peas and the gladioli are being held back. Asters are appearing in one color, white, in small numbers. They are selling readily, however. There are still a few carnations to be seen and, in spite of the poor summer quality, they bring $5 or $6 per hundred.

There is a good supply of lilies of all kinds at present. They are fetching about 10 cents on the average. We see more auratums than is usual on this market. Roses are in good supply, especially the two Killarneys and Kaiserin. They are selling between $6 and $8 per hundred. American Beauties are scarce and of inferior grade.

Various Notes.

Joe Brown, of the Lischey Nursery and Greenhouses, is removing three old houses and replacing them with two modern ones. His business has been extremely good this season.

Geny Bros. are cutting some good asters at present. They say that they have been quite busy lately.

The Joy Floral Co. is cutting gladioli freely at present. The company has the Skinner system of irrigation on most of its land and so is not suffering from the drought.

McIntyre Bros. have been making some improvements on their new place this summer. This firm is the oldest in the city and one of the oldest in the country, having remained in the same family uninterruptedly. They say that their business is growing in a healthy way right along.

We noticed a lot of good gloxinias at Haury & Sons' last week. They find these good summer sellers and money-makers. F. B.

THE FLORISTS' MANUAL, by Wm. Scott, the greatest book ever written for florists, sent by The Review for $5.

WE have disposed of nearly 100,000 carnation plants this spring. Please discontinue the ad in The Review. The plants were fine, but we think much of the success in moving so many of them was due to your valuable paper.—The Florex Gardens, North Wales, Pa.

NEWS OF THE NURSERY TRADE

THE new regulations for the extended New England quarantine will be found on page 15 of this issue.

AN idea of the size of the spring business of the Jewell Nursery Co., Lake City, Minn., may be gained from the weight of its shipments, which were 2,000,000 pounds freight, 33,375 pounds express and 1,500 pounds parcel post.

RETAILERS' PROTECTIVE.

The American Retail Nurserymen's Protective Association held its annual meeting at Portland during the joint convention of the American Association of Nurserymen and the Pacific Coast Nurserymen's Association. A year of successful effort was shown by the reports and officers were reëlected, as follows:

President—H. W. Marshall, of Marshall Bros., Arlington, Neb.

Vice-president—B. J. Greening, of the Greening Nursery Co., Monroe, Mich.

Secretary and treasurer—Guy A. Bryant, of Arthur Bryant & Son, Princeton, Ill.

GOOD AUTUMN COMING.

"Especially ornamentals." Time after time one will hear those words used by nurserymen who are talking of the stock that was in request last season, or the lines they expect to have a big run on next season. This is from C. M. Hobbs & Sons, Bridgeport, Ind.

"The demand for stock this season has been about as usual. We did not have so much to offer, on account of the dry summer and severe winter of two years ago. We had little first-class stock left on our hands after the shipping season was over.

"We cannot tell what the sales will be for fall at the present time, but from the general outlook we believe they will be better with us than this spring. Apple and peach seemed to be slow sale in the last spring season, but most other stock, especially ornamentals, was in great demand. We look for a good fall delivery."

MISSOURI INSPECTION LAW.

The attention of nurserymen, agents and dealers in fruit trees and general nursery stock is called to the inspection law which was passed by the Missouri legislature last winter. This new law becomes effective this summer, and all interested in the growing, selling, shipping, importing and planting of fruit trees, vines, shrubs and other nursery stock should write to the chief inspector of nurseries and orchards, Columbia, Mo., for a copy of the law and instructions as to how to comply with its provisions. The law requires that all growers of nursery stock in Missouri apply to the chief inspector before July 1 for an inspection of their stock. This applies to all growers, large and small, whether the stock is shipped, sold locally or used for home orchards or for public parks. This inspection will be made during the months of July, August and September, and growers will prevent unnecessary delay and extra expense to themselves if they notify the chief inspector at once.

All dealers in nursery stock must apply for a dealer's certificate in case they grow no stock, but buy and sell. Also all agents for Missouri nurseries or for nurseries in other states, who simply take orders, must apply for an agent's certificate and file necessary papers.

GOOD MAIL ORDER SEASON.

"The spring season of 1913 was one of the most satisfactory in the history of the Stark Bros. Nurseries & Orchards Co.," according to A. B. Howell, mail order manager at the big plant at Louisiana, Mo., and that means something, for the business goes back to 1816 and has, consequently, seen ninety-seven spring seasons. "We made the closest clean-up we have made for years," adds Mr. Howell. "The large commercial planter was not so much in evidence as usual, but the home orchard planter bought much more largely.

"In apple and one or two other lines there was a little surplus over the country and we noticed considerable price cutting in different sections. However, we held our prices up and practically cleaned up our stock at regular catalogue prices.

"As to the coming season, it is just a little bit hard to judge, but indications are for a good business in all lines."

FLOODS HELD RESPONSIBLE.

The March inundation, according to W. C. Reed, of Vincennes, Ind., was at least partly responsible for the falling off of business this season in the section north of the Ohio and east of the Mississippi. That the business was not up to the usual volume is the general report, but in most cases other causes are alleged. "It is partly due to the floods," said Mr. Reed, "for they demoralized shipping for about two weeks. Cherry trees cleaned up closely, with a tendency toward higher prices. Apple and peach showed some surplus in some varieties, while plum and pear were decidedly scarce. Prospects for the coming season are good. Buds and older stock are making a splendid growth, better than for several years. Cherry promises to make up well, but the supply is not nearly so large as usual. Of peach the supply is not so heavy as usual in this section, with a heavy demand, owing to a good crop of peaches. Apple trees are in somewhat larger supply than usual, with the prospect for a fair crop of fruit."

A GOOD SEASON AT BRYANT'S.

So many nurserymen found the 1913 spring season not so good as usual that it is a pleasure to hear an occasional man say it was the best yet. And when this report comes from such a firm as Arthur Bryant & Son, Princeton, Ill., it means something, for the concern dates back to 1845. This is what Guy A. Bryant says:

"Relative to the season's business, will say that it has been good, especially in shrubs and ornamentals of all kinds. Our sales were much larger than usual. There was a heavy surplus in apple and peach all over the country and, as a consequence, many of them were unsold and found their way to the brush pile. Other fruit trees were in good demand and few were left at the close of the season's business. We made about our usual planting of grafts and fruit stocks and a heavier planting of ornamental stock. The prospects are for a good demand in all lines during the coming season."

CONSERVATISM IN ORDER.

That the trade will cut down its production, especially on certain classes of fruit trees, and increase on ornamentals is the view of E. S. Welch, proprietor of Mount Arbor Nurseries, Shenandoah, Ia. This is the situation as he sizes it up:

"We find, in comparing this year's business with last, that our volume is about the same. Collections to date have been fair, and stock has generally given excellent satisfaction. Conditions seem to have been favorable for growth, and we anticipate good stands among our customers.

"We have noted a healthy increase in the sales of ornamental stock, which has made up for the shrinkage in sales of fruits, especially apple and peach. There was considerable surplus in these, resulting in low prices before the season's trade was over.

"The outlook for future business appears encouraging to us, although I think buyers will be conservative and there will be a tendency among nurserymen to reduce their plantings."

THE PENNSYLVANIA BILL.

The bill recently introduced in the Pennsylvania legislature is a most ingenious device for compelling nurserymen to do what few of them are willing to do—guarantee stock after it has left their hands; and not only to guarantee it while in the hands of others, but to back the guarantee with a bond. But let Wm. Pitkin tell it; he is chairman of the legislative committee of the A. A. N.:

"Within a few days I have received a copy of a bill introduced in the Pennsylvania legislature which is intended to provide a method whereby the planter or grower in Pennsylvania may be protected from damages resulting from planting trees not true to name. In substance, the law provides that any nurseryman may file with the secretary of agriculture a bond of $2,000 or more, which bond shall be held for indemnity in case any grower can show that he has been damaged by falsely labeled trees. If he can show such damage he will be entitled to $1 per tree for each year between the date of planting and the date of fruiting. It provides, however, that before such method goes into operation against the nurseryman the purchaser shall have informed the seller, before buying, that he wishes to buy in accordance with this indemnity plan, and at the same time the buyer must inform the secretary of agriculture of the number and kind of trees that he has purchased, and the name and address of the nurseryman. It is then the duty of the secretary of agriculture, provided the nurseryman has filed such a bond, to furnish the nurseryman, at the expense of the purchaser, with indemnity tags, to be placed on the trees when they are shipped to the purchaser, and when the purchaser receives the trees and plants them he is then to remove the labels and attach them to a stake driven into the ground beside the trees. Then, within a week from the time of planting, the purchaser must send to the secretary of agriculture, and also to the nurseryman, a chart of the orchard, showing the exact location of each tree. This chart is to be checked up by an inspector of the agricultural department within six months from time of planting. When the labeled trees first produce fruit, if the owner doubts the accuracy of the labeling, he must notify the secretary of agriculture, who shall cause the bearing tree to be inspected, and if anything wrong is found in it the orchardist can bring suit and collect against the bond for an amount equal to $1 per tree for each year since the original planting.

"There is nothing in the bill which, if it becomes a law, will compel the nurseryman to give bond and thus insure his trees, but the law makes it the duty of the secretary of agriculture 'to report to all inquirers and make special published mention, at least once per year, of all nurserymen who shall take advantage of this opportunity to bond themselves in Pennsylvania, and no grower shall make claim for damages under this act who has not purchased his trees of a properly bonded dealer.'

"The last paragraph shows what they are trying to do. In plain English, they propose to establish a list of 'good' nurserymen and advertise such a list generally throughout the state, and warn their citizens that they must buy of the nurserymen represented in this list, otherwise they will have no redress should varieties prove untrue, indirectly attempting to force every nurseryman to file a bond for fear he will be on the black list and unable to sell his goods.

"The law provides that the nurseryman must attach official labels to the trees before sending them out.

These labels must remain on the trees until the purchaser has planted them. Then the purchaser may detach and fasten them to a stake driven in the ground near the trees, and then send a chart of his premises to the secretary of agriculture and the nurseryman, which chart is to be checked up and verified by an inspector at any time within six months from date of planting. We fail to see what protection the nurseryman has between the time the purchaser receives the trees and the date he sends the chart to the secretary of agriculture. During that time he can mix up the labels, and the nurseryman has no guarantee that the labels and the chart agree with the labels as attached at the nursery. It certainly is an unwise and dangerous piece of legislation, which, if enacted, would tend to drive every responsible nurseryman out of the state."

CLEVELAND, O.

The Market.

Torrid weather has played havoc with cut stock. Carnations are still good for this date, but not as firm as they have been. Good, tight roses are scarce, most of the stock on the market being open. Outside stock is excellent. Shasta daisies, coreopsis, larkspur, rambler roses, gypsophila, etc., are coming into the market in large quantities and sell well. Valley has had a good call; large funeral orders last week, coming at the same time as the late June weddings, created a brisk demand. Green goods are in fair supply.

Various Notes.

Charles Russell, of the Jones-Russell Co., and Miss May McGorray were married June 30 and are enjoying a trip to Boston and Montreal and along the St. Lawrence river. They will be at home September 1 in their new residence on Clifton boulevard, Lakewood.

Fred C. Witthuhn is due to land on German soil this week and he intends to stay in the Fatherland till early October.

Mum planting is nearly over and young stock is scarce. The late planters are liable to be disappointed if they

Some years ago the business was owned jointly by Mr. Rohmer and Ivend Krohn, but early in 1910 Mr. Rohmer withdrew from the partnership and removed to Hinsdale, Ill. In January, 1912, Mr. Krohn died. A little later, when the business was offered for sale, Mr. Rohmer decided to purchase it and resume operations here.

SPECIAL NOTICE

We are receiving inquiries since we cut out our ad of Xanthosoma Illustris in The Review if we could still supply plants of them. In reply we would say that we still have some nice plants, and we wish every florist would give them a trial this season, as we know they will be pleased with them. They make nice pot plants as well as outdoor plants. As hardy as the common Elephant Ear and much handsomer, as the leaf is of a dark, velvety black in color.

20 nice plants for $1.00, all charges paid. If you haven't room for twenty, then try ten, but try them anyway.

COLUMBUS, O.

The Market.

Trade has fallen to the regular summer basis and the extremely hot weather is telling on the stock. There was a good run on work for weddings during the latter part of June and there were a few good-sized decorations; these, with a sprinkling of funeral work now and then, helped to make a fair showing for June. For several days the outdoor stock has been suffering badly from the intense heat, as well as from the dry weather. Roses are fair, considering all the conditions, and the supply is about equal to the demand. The demand for Beauties has dropped off, as well as the supply, and the quality has been rather low. Carnations are still to be had, but the quality is poor and the prices have fallen accordingly. A good deal of the old carnation stock has been taken out of the benches and the growers are getting things in shape for another season's planting.

Sweet peas are coming in from outside and are of good quality in most cases. The demand for valley has been rather light since the decrease in the number of weddings in the latter part of June. There are still a few straggling orders for window and porch boxes, with little stock left to fill them, as everybody has sold out closely in that line of plants.

Everyone reports a prosperous season and nearly all have made out their inventories.

Various Notes.

I. D. Seibert and a party of friends have left for Lakeside, Lake Erie, for a week's outing. Several of their acquaintances made the auto trip from here with them.

G. H. Woodrow is able to be around a little at present, but is still far from well.

E. Metzmaier reports everything as prosperous as he well could wish.

Sherman Stephens has finished a big season.

Graff Bros. are well satisfied with past business, but say the bottom has dropped out now.

The Livingston Seed Co. has had a busy season in all lines.

There is some talk of trying to get the florists to close at 6 p. m. on Saturday, but nothing has been done as yet.

The HIT of the Season

In the past season every first-class flower store the country over had calls for bouquets made up with a certain small pink rose. In some stores it was sold under the name of

MIGNON in others as SWEETHEART

The real name of the rose is

and we believe we supplied all the cut buds except for one lot grown in the east from plants obtained from us last year. We shipped cut buds to New York, Chicago and many other cities. The rose was the hit of Fifth avenue and its fame spread throughout the country, resulting in a demand for the buds in every store that caters to the good trade. It is in great request for corsage bouquets, Colonial bouquets, boutonnieres, etc. Appreciating that because of our distance from the largest markets we can not handle the demand for cut buds, we have prepared to supply young plants to growers who know a money-making novelty when they see it.

PITTSBURGH.

The Market.

The hot weather here last week is having its effect on stock generally, although roses and carnations are still fairly good and the month's business has been quite satisfactory, from all reports.

In the wholesale district, stock is shortening up considerably, but with fine gladioli, lilies, valley and fairly good roses and carnations, the wholesalers feel that they will be able to take good care of trade until the season starts in autumn. The retailers are finishing up their weddings and arranging their vacation schedules and there is not much to say about them. The extreme heat last week got to all shipped stock, Beauties and peas suffering the most.

Various Notes.

The Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co. is receiving some exceptionally fine America gladioli.

The John Bader Co. is putting up a house 25x120 for ferns. Lord & Burnham Co. is doing the work.

DAYTON, O.

The Market.

Last week there were a good many weddings, which materially increased the florists' business. There was much, also, to be done in the way of funeral orders. Several large farewell parties given by the schools brought an unusually large demand for corsage bouquets. These three items combined kept the florists busy and made it possible for each one to report a most satisfactory week. Flowers are as plentiful as they usually are at this season of the year and are of good quality, considering the extremely hot weather. The entire month of June was a busy one for Dayton florists and all feel much satisfied with results. The weather throughout the month has been hot and dry.

Various Notes.

Joseph I. Schaeffer has reported right along that his trade this spring was the best he had experienced since being in business. He has recently verified his statements by purchasing a fine new five-passenger automobile.

The Advance Floral Co. had an extremely pretty display of cattleyas last week. One handsome specimen had nine blooms on it.

Miss Elsie Bartholomew spent last week in Lima, O., as a delegate to the Ohio State C. E. Convention.

Miss Bertha Cornwall, of Harper, Kan., is a guest at the home of Mrs. Ruby Leslie for the month of July.

A fine new white-enameled refrigerator is the latest addition to the Main street store of the Heiss Co. since the flood. The other refrigerator was washed out of the store during the flood.

Besides numerous large funeral orders, W. G. Matthews had an unusually brisk demand last week for corsages, which were used in the farewell parties at the high schools.

Mrs. B. Haschke speaks quite favorably of last week's business. Funeral work was the chief factor.

M. D. Schmidt & Son also had an encouraging business last week.

D. J. Adsit, of Jamestown, O., was in town June 30 with a large order of plants for the National Cash Register Co. Mr. Adsit states that this order cleaned up all his bedding plants, and he furthermore says that his bedding plant trade has been exceptionally fine this season. The greenhouse department of the National Cash Register Co. has used great quantities of plants this season in beautifying the city and covering up much of the damage caused by the flood. R. A. L.

PEONIES.

"PEONIES FOR PLEASURE."

This book of "Peonies for Pleasure" gives information on peony history, soil and plants to use, how and when to plant, fertilizers and how to apply, and describes the most extensive planting of really valuable peonies ever gathered together under the sun; describes old and new as well as the plebeian and aristocrat of the peony family. If you want information on the plant that stands next to the rose in beauty, that is practically known to the amateur as simply a red, white and pink peony, then send for "Peonies for Pleasure."

We also issue a special wholesale price list of peonies for fall sales, 1913. Send for both of these booklets.

THE KENTIA SEED INDUSTRY.

At least that portion of the trade in America who are engaged in growing palms from seeds will be interested to know that the government of New South Wales has appointed a board of three members to assume the management and control both of the affairs of Lord Howe Island and of the kentia palm seed industry there.

According to an official announcement: "The board desires that publicity be given to the fact that the industry in question is now under government management and control, and free from monopoly on the part of any person or persons who formerly controlled the trade.

"The board takes charge, under the terms of the authorities given it, of the island and the trade thereof. Palm seeds and other products of the island may be collected and sold only with the authority and by direction of the board.

"The board has now successfully entered into the palm seed trade, and a number of orders for seed have already been executed by the board, with satisfactory results both to the islanders and to seedsmen. The fact that seedsmen are placing large orders with the board and that the residents of the island are unanimously supporting the policy adopted by the board is sufficient warrant for the board being optimistic as to the regularity of the supply of island products in the future, and the general success of the palm seed industry. It is desirable that the future prospects of the industry should be generally made known, especially so by reason of the fact that the unsettled conditions of the industry prior to the inception of the board were calculated to deter buyers from sending orders to their Sydney agents.

"The operations of the board have been confined to the execution of orders in Sydney, and in the fulfillment of those Sydney orders all seedsmen receive equal consideration; no monopoly is granted, and orders are received from any reputable firm which accepts the conditions of sale, payment being cash. Moreover, it has been determined by the board that the prices charged by it for the island products shall remain firm until the end of the present year, and that the prices for next year shall be announced in October of the present year. This should enable seedsmen to place orders with some feeling of security.

"Any further inquiries in regard to this matter should be addressed to the Lord Howe Island Board, Chief Secretary's Office, Sydney, New South Wales."

Greenhouse Heating.

SUBSCRIBERS are invited to write the Editor of this Department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. But please do not ask The Review to make a choice of apparatus for you. The greenhouse heating equipment advertised in this paper is, we believe, the best for the trade to buy, and each article the best in the special field of its adaptation.

THE FUEL SITUATION.

During the last week the coal trade has been, to use an expression everybody will understand, "up in the air." The situation on smokeless has been about like the situation on white carnations just before Mothers' day—all sorts of stories in circulation about scarcity and high prices. But, like the prices of the man who has no white carnations he cares to sell, quotations are largely fictitious. Some of the concerns that supply the greenhouse trade with smokeless coal are saying little, but are keeping right on with their business, arranging to take care of good trade the same as usual and gathering in the cream of the business in this field. Others are doing nothing but scaring off the buyers.

The excitement has been over the not unexpected announcement that the United Mine Workers of America had called a strike for July 1 in the West Virginia fields. Of course every coal man knew that the union does not include any large proportion of the miners and that nothing like a complete cessation of production is possible, but just how far the row will go no one could tell—and even now it is too early to have any reliable information. However, the effect on the market was immediate. Smokeless coal at once became the leading factor. So many people believed there will be a shortage and began buying smokeless coal that a shortage was created almost over night. Open prices at once took a jump. With the circular standing at $1.25 for mine run at the mouth of the shaft, the trade in Chicago had been getting $1.35 and at once began asking $1.40 to $1.50—one man even went so far last week as to say he expected to see the best grades of smokeless coal sell at anywhere from $1.50 to $2 per ton at the mines this fall. Of course such talk is bad for all concerned, except for the good, reliable firm that knows its own strength and which can see the advantage of selecting its customers under the cover of the flurry and arranging to take care of them for the season on an equitable basis.

Not by any means all the excitement is created by those who are large handlers of West Virginia smokeless coals (the output of these is about 12,000,000 tons per year). The Indiana and Illinois block people are not slow to aid the talk of a soaring market for the higher grade fuel; it gives them a chance to boost their own prices. As a matter of fact, most of those who sell Indiana and Illinois coals are not anxious to book future business at this time, preferring to see how far prices will go.

Some of the large growers who have bought smokeless coal in the past have already announced that they will go back to the cheaper article if the price of smokeless keeps on going up and their lead is likely to be followed by many.

BUILDING AND PIPING.

I am expecting to build greenhouses in the fall. Will you kindly give me some instruction and advice through The Review? The lot to be used as a site is eighty feet long from east to west and fifty feet wide from north to south. There is a street at the east end of it. Which would be preferable, two houses, each 20x80, running east and west, or shorter houses running north and south? How thick should concrete walls be for the outside, and what proportions of sand, cinders and cement would be best? If steam heat is used, how many lines of 2-inch pipe will be needed for each house, to maintain a temperature of 70 degrees in winter, in this Pennsylvania climate? The houses will be separate. Which would give the better results, placing the pipes under the benches or on the walls? If the houses are twenty feet wide, five feet high to the eaves and twelve feet high to the ridge, will the roof pitch be sufficient? W. B.

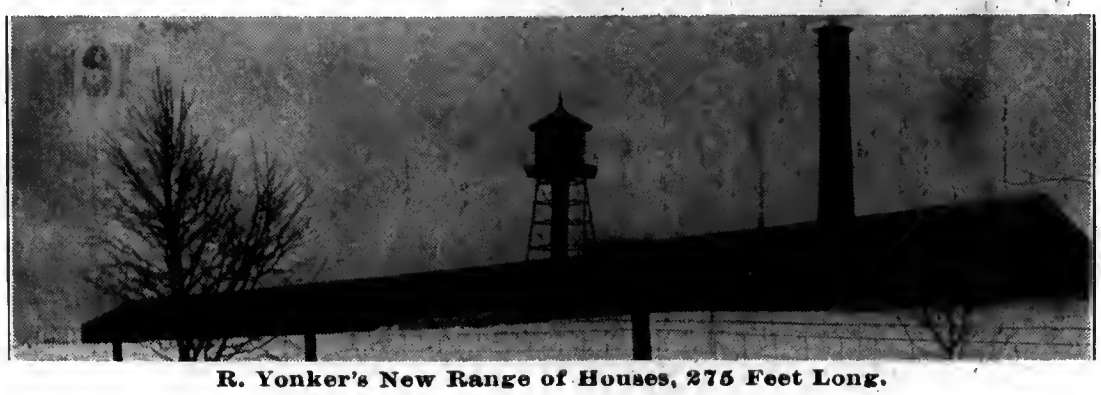
So far as the mere direction goes, it will make little difference which way the houses run, and unless there is some reason, which is not apparent from the letter, for running them north and south, I would suggest building two houses 20x80 feet.

A grout wall eight inches thick should answer, provided the ridges of the houses are trussed, or supported by posts, so that there will be no lateral thrust. The proportions of cement, sand and cinders will vary considerably with the fineness of both sand and cinders. If both are fairly coarse, one part of cement would answer for two parts of sand and four parts of cinders. There should be enough sand to fill all of the spaces in the cinders, and as the fineness of the sand increases the more cement will be required, but it is not likely that anything stronger than a 1-2-2 mixture would be necessary. As soon as the forms can be taken down from the walls, the exposed surfaces should be plastered, using one part of cement to two of sand. This will tend not only to improve the appearance and the strength of the walls, but by keeping them dry will lessen the destructive action of frost and prolong their existence.

The pitch suggested would be about 35 degrees. This would be ample and a height of eleven feet to the ridge would give a pitch of 30 degrees, which answers fairly well. My idea would be to make the walls six feet high, with three feet of glass in the south wall, and have the ridge twelve feet high.

To heat a house twenty feet wide to 70 degrees with steam would require one 2-inch overhead flow pipe and twelve 1¼-inch returns. If 2-inch pipe is to be used, I would suggest two 2-inch flow pipes and eight returns. A part of the returns, perhaps half, should be on the walls and the others under the benches.



ONE ADDITIONAL HOUSE.

I should like to ask you how much piping will be needed to heat a greenhouse twelve feet wide, five and one-half feet high at the sides and eight feet high at the center. There will be two feet of glass in one side; the other side will adjoin an old greenhouse. I wish to heat the new house to 55 degrees, and the outside temperature sometimes falls to 20 degrees below zero in this part of Ohio. The house will run north and south. I expect to put in 2-inch flows. How many 1¼-inch returns will be required? I have the 1¼-inch and 2-inch pipe on hand.

W. S. L.

The letter does not give the length of the house, nor does it state whether steam or hot water is to be used for heating.

For heating the house with hot water, the needed amount of radiation for 55

R. Yonker's New Range of Houses, 275 Feet Long.

Some years ago Mr. R. Yonker, of Grand Rapids, Mich., built a small greenhouse for growing vegetables under glass during the winter season.

In those days the greenhouses were of low construction and a house 20 feet wide was considered a big greenhouse.

HIS FIRST KROESCHELL.

The business for the first season was very encouraging and the following year several additional houses were added, and a Kroeschell hot water boiler was installed for the heating.

THE NEW RANGE.

The business has grown from a very small beginning, and today Mr. Yonker has the most up-to-date range of vegetable houses in the state of Michigan. The new houses erected for Mr. Yonker are of iron frame construction, each 34 feet wide and 275 feet long. The eaves or gutters are 11 feet high; this permits the placing of the heating pipes 6 feet or more above the beds.

THE NEW KROESCHELL SYSTEM DOES NOT REQUIRE A DEEP BOILER PIT; THE BOILER MAY BE SET ON THE SAME LEVEL AS THE GREENHOUSE WALKS.

The first boiler Mr. Yonker installed was, of course, placed in a deep boiler pit. The No. 15 Kroeschell boiler is set in shallow pit, the floor of which is only 24 inches below the level of the greenhouse beds. The old boiler pit was partially filled in and now can be used for growing either mushrooms or asparagus.

The boiler is placed about 50 feet from the end of the 275-foot houses. The packing shed is equipped with every labor-saving device and is large enough for loading the large market wagons indoors. The packing shed is artificially lighted by gasoline lighting system and, of course, also is provided with telephones.

In one corner of the service building you will find the neatly equipped office of Mr. R. Yonker; all business is transacted from this point.

THE KROESCHELL PIPING SYSTEM.

The Kroeschell 4-inch Threaded Tube Piping System is used for the new iron frame houses. The coils are 275 feet long. Each return line is controlled by 2-inch gate valve. The entire system is operated by gravity circulation.

The mains for the new range consist of two 7-inch pipe circuits for flows and two 7-inch pipe circuits for returns.

The piping for the old houses was not changed; new 6-inch pipe circuits for main flows and returns were installed to connect same with the new boiler.

The 275-foot houses are connected and open across the entire range. These houses are planted with a crop of one variety—an even temperature is necessary at every point. This is accomplished by Kroeschell short circuits on continuous piping.

The Kroeschell heating department can be proud of this heating system and it surely is a masterpiece.

P. S. (We predict that as our competitors gradually become acquainted with the Kroeschell features of Hot Water heat engineering they will be universally used.)

A WORD OF PRAISE FOR THE BOILER.

The range of Mr. Yonker covers a ground space of one square acre, and the glass exposure of these houses is in the neighborhood of 54,180 square feet. The entire plant is heated by the No. 15 Kroeschell Boiler. We challenge any boiler manufacturer or his agent to equal the fuel economy of the Kroeschell at this place.

GET THE KROESCHELL BOILER, IT IS MADE RIGHT AND HONESTLY RATED.

EMPHATICALLY YES! THE KROESCHELL GIVES ENTIRE SATISFACTION.

Your No. 15 Boiler has been able to take care of the houses very easily.

We use Pocahontas coal, mine run. This coal should be fired with an intermission from one to not more than three hours to give the best results.

"Does the boiler give entire satisfaction?" We will state emphatically: Yes! It has given perfect satisfaction.

In regard to the piping system, would say that we do not see any room for improvement. Also in this case we are perfectly satisfied.

We noticed that the circulation in your boiler tube piping system is much quicker than the old 2-inch piping systems, although the water travels at least twice the distance with the new system that it does in the old.

Grand Rapids, Mich., January 30, 1913. (Signed) R. YONKER.

degrees could be obtained from two 2-inch flow pipes and ten 1¼-inch returns. In case the house is more than fifty feet in length, and especially unless the returns are two feet or more above the top of the heater, it will be desirable to use a mercury circulator, or to have a closed system with the water under pressure.

For heating with steam, use two 2-inch mains and five 1¼-inch returns, or if the house is less than 100 feet in length put in one 2-inch flow and six 1¼-inch returns. If two flow pipes are used, they can be placed upon the wall plates, or the single flow pipe could be a foot or so under the ridge. The returns could be on the walls or under the benches. As a rule, it is well to have from one-third to one-half of the returns under the benches, as the bottom heat thus furnished aids in drying out the soil on the benches in case of dull weather or overwatering and generally hastens the growth of the plants.

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

Business last week was good, in spite of the intense heat. The outdoor flowers keep the market well supplied. Sweet peas are becoming less plentiful. Carnations have been abundant, but some of the growers have now dumped over half of their stock and are getting their benches ready for the planting of their young stock. Roses are still selling well and are holding up well in quality, in spite of the heat. Gladioli seem to be the best sellers on the market.

To Organize a Club.

A petition for the purpose of organizing a florists' club in this city is being passed around to obtain florists' signatures. The club is intended for the bettering of the conditions in the florists' trade in this city. Please be a progressive and do not wait till "the other man" signs, because it will be impossible to secure many signatures at that rate. The petition will be at the store of the Geo. M. Kellogg Flower & Plant Co., 1122 Grand avenue, till July 9; after that date it will be at the store of Henry Kusik & Co., 1016 McGee street. It all depends upon your signature, whether or not we shall have a club. Every florist in the city please sign, as you are wanted in the club.

Various Notes.

A. F. Barbe is building three greenhouses, 140 feet long, and expects to build more this summer if he can get these finished soon enough.

Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Ellsworth own some land adjoining Forest Lake, west of the city, and are making a most enjoyable use of it. They go out there every morning and come back in the evening, and the fishing is said to be good.

The Geo. M. Kellogg Flower & Plant Co. says that cut flower stock is scarce at the greenhouses. The firm has torn down five old greenhouses and will replace them with four new ones, covering the same extent of space. Mr. Thomas, of this firm, is away on vacation.

Henry Kusik & Co. report business as being quiet, except in the wire and supply department, where there is a rush to get orders out on time. Gladioli have been their best sellers, though roses are still in good demand.

The W. L. Rock Flower Co. had a busy week. Funeral work was the heaviest item. Fred Fromhold, of this firm, is on a three weeks' vacation.

Samuel Murray was exceedingly busy decorating last week and also had some nice funeral work.

Arthur Newell has been busy all this week with funeral work and decorations. He decorated for the first wedding ever held in the Elks' club rooms here and the decoration was one of the largest of the season.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

The Market.

This market has just passed through a week of commencements and weddings, as practically all the schools had their graduations last week. The weddings were numerous, but there were no particularly large ones. Roses are scarce; since the coming of hot weather the price has almost doubled. Carnations are really wonderful for this time of the year. Cattleya gigas was in great demand last week. Sweet peas are getting scarce. Garden flowers are plentiful and find ready sale for various functions. Sweet-williams and larkspurs are used a great deal now for decorating, etc. A considerable amount of funeral work recently has added its quota to the volume of June business. There are no blooming plants to be had just now.

Various Notes.

Miss May French visited Suffield, Conn., last week.

Window boxes, vases and tubs, filled with blooming plants, vines, etc., and placed in the windows and other recesses of some of the leading business places, have called forth much comment as to the effort Springfield is making to beautify its business section.

The father of Carl Meacham, of the firm of Meacham & Hassell, passed away June 24. Richard Campbell, of the Flower Shop, sang at the funeral.

Superintendent Clark, of the department of streets, advocates the abolition of tree belts where the streets are narrow and the grassy strips between the sidewalk and the curb cannot be kept in good condition. He contends that the tree belt in such cases detracts from, instead of beautifying, the street.

John Donaldson will take a two weeks' vacation early in July.

Mark Aitken and family have moved from Glen road to Magnolia terrace. He has sold his home on Glen road.

Miss Sidonie Fischer leaves July 3 for a week's vacation.

A. N. Pierson, Inc., of Cromwell, Conn., is shipping some good Cattleya gigas and special valley to this city.

Visitors: S. S. Skidelsky, of Philadelphia; M. Adler, of New York city.

TANKAGE

PRACTICALLY every grower now finds that one of his chief problems is an adequate supply of first-class Fertilizer—the available quantity of barnyard manures is inadequate and street and stable manures are poor, impure and of uncertain value, though expensive. Large growers are meeting the need of a safe, sure, well-balanced fertilizer of unlimited supply by using

PROVIDENCE.

The Market.

The florists, both growers and dealers, report a normal business for last week. All have been busy, but have had no such trade as was reported for the preceding two weeks. Graduations are over and about all the business is for funerals, an occasional wedding and a few cut flowers. There is an ample supply for all demands.

Various Notes.

William B. Hazard and Nels G. Pierson enjoyed a visit to the plant of A. N. Pierson, at Cromwell, Conn., last week.

John Johnston, of Johnston Bros., was in Boston several days last week, in search of novelties.

Albert Holscher has got his new greenhouses on Hartford avenue ready to begin glazing.

Edgar A. Nock, who has a fine place near Roger Williams park, is contemplating purchasing a large farm in East Providence and putting up a range of houses for the growing of orchids.

The George Johnson Forestry Co., of this city, has just completed a contract for spraying the public trees at Bristol.

Edward Murray, with Small & Sons, New York, but previously employed in this city, has been spending his vacation here and at Newport.

William H. Tarbox, of West Greenwich, reports his extensive fields of dahlias on the shores of Lake Carr as progressing quite satisfactorily. He is spending a few days with old friends at Springfield, Mass.

Orrin Smith, Jr., of Pawtucket, has been drawn for petit jury duty on the Superior Court for Providence county.

The Market.

Trade was quiet last week. The demand for cut flowers is gradually falling off and it looks as though the regular summer business had come to stay. There is plenty of stock of all kinds to be had and the prices have dropped about one-half. In fact, it is a case of take what you can get without losing a sale.

The funeral of a prominent young man in town was held June 25, to which there were sent many handsome floral tributes. Every flower shop here was represented and a number of designs came by express from out-of-town florists. The closing exercises of the city high school, June 26, were the last of the season. For a side-line at this time of year the retailer has a steady demand for reed and colored raffia, as many of the young people spend their idle time at and take a great interest in basket weaving.

Various Notes.

W. A. Hammond, of West Orange street, received a good funeral order June 26, over the wire from a New England state.

The Rosery flower shop, on West King street, has the windows neatly decorated with ferns and foliage plants, which make the shop cool and airy looking.

At H. A. Schroyer's there are some attractive baskets of outdoor flowers which catch the passers-by.

Barr & Co. have the finest summer window decoration that has ever been shown in the city. It is talked about by every one and surely draws the crowds. It is a miniature landscape garden scene with natural water effects and small Japanese gardens elevated in the water, appearing as islands. The plants used are all small ones, such as Japanese maple trees, golden arborvitae, boxwoods and variegated California privet for hedges.

Miss Elizabeth Krouse, one of the salesladies of B. F. Barr & Co., has started for Atlantic City on a vacation.

Visitors last week were: Mr. Swartz, representing H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, and F. A. C. Vosters, with Harrison's Nurseries, Berlin, Md.

THE FLORISTS' REVIEW

CAXTON BUILDING
508 South Dearborn Street
CHICAGO

Advertising forms close TUESDAY

The latest hour at which advertisements, or changes of advertisements, can be accepted is 5 p. m. Tuesday.

Barnesville, O.—C. L. Corbin is erecting two more houses, 22x108 and 20x58, of Foley construction. Mr. Corbin's spring stock was completely sold out early in the season, making it necessary to reject many orders, and the additional glass was greatly needed.

CYPRESS SHINGLES BEST

That boiler room must be covered, and if you would have the entire Greenhouse job uniformly standard, Cypress shingles must be used. No other wood will withstand the action of the elements like Cypress; all the most notable endurance records in the history of shingles were made by Cypress shingles.

Read from the report of the U. S. Gov't., in Bulletin No. 95, Forest Service, Department of Agriculture:

A shingle roof on a house at Greenwich, Conn., was said to have lasted 250 years; another in Brooklyn, N. Y., was recorded to have lasted 228 years, and still another at Clifton, Staten Island, was still doing business after 200 years of continuous service. Cypress shingle roofs at New Orleans, La., that are 100 years old are no curiosity—plenty of them.

There is no discount on a Cypress shingle roof.

Here's One of Our 60-Foot Flat Rafter Houses

It is a house that will interest you. It is an easy house to heat, easy to build and easy to operate

Iron Frame Flat Rafter House, built for J. B. Tilt, Chicago

YOU ought to get acquainted with our iron frame houses, no matter where you live. Our prices are so reasonable it will pay you to compare figures. When it comes to design and construction, you will be surprised to find how much more up-to-date our houses really are.

You would build no other type if you could visit every greenhouse factory and look over the different greenhouses themselves. You would then be able to decide quickly that the Moninger flat rafter is the only type any greenhouse owner ought to have.

Honestly, you owe it to your good business judgment, to your pocketbook and to your customers to investigate.

The flowers seldom measure less than 3 inches in diameter, comprising the following colors: White, rose, flesh, crimson, blue, violet, etc. The plants are of a very robust dwarf habit, which, combined with the mass of giant blooms, makes this strain exceedingly valuable.

DOLLAR BOXES AND SUMMER SALES

DURING the slack summer months the enterprising retailers are on the lookout for special sales ideas to keep moving as large a volume of business as possible. One of the best that has been devised is that of dollar boxes. Many florists use these boxes to draw business the year around; some make them a regular line, but others only advertise them as bargain attractions for certain days. When there is a superabundance of stock on the market, particularly of roses, carnations, and the like, the boxes may be made up and sold at a fair profit. On the other hand, if the line is made a permanent one, the florist may be forced to make up his dollar boxes with little profit when prices are high. But in the summer, when business is slack and flowers plentiful and cheap, this objection will not arise.

The retailer who wishes to use this means of keeping up his trade in the hot months may handle it in either of two ways. He may make it a special summer feature and run it straight through the months of July and August, advertising it broadcast as a summer bargain, or he may use it only on occasional days, either those of his own choice, as they go by, or for a fixed day of each week.

Necessity of Advertising.

In any case the necessity of advertising will be the same. Strong advertising in the best local paper is the only means of making the boxes a paying proposition. Florists located on busy streets in the large cities can draw many customers from those passing, by means of attractive window display. Perhaps they can catch enough business that way to be able to make the dollar boxes a success without using the newspapers, but those not so fortunately situated must depend upon the newspapers to advertise the boxes. Anyway, the quickest method is to use a strongly designed or at least a well illustrated advertisement in the best paper of the town. It not only will spread the news of the offer among all old customers but bring it to the attention of many more besides. The accompanying illustration shows a particularly striking advertisement used recently by H. Reeve Darling, of Los Angeles, Cal., to advertise his dollar boxes. The original was four columns wide and ten inches deep. A designed advertisement like this, made from a pen-and-ink drawing, catches the eye and clings in the memory better than almost any arrangement of type alone would do.

Usually one of the most important items to put in a conspicuous place in an advertisement of this kind is the telephone number. A good many retailers depend only a little on the actual callers at the store. The number of customers who make their purchases in person, with many stores, is only a small per cent of the whole. The florist makes a name for himself through his goods or his advertising—presumably both—and the customers give their orders over the telephone, leaving the details to the good taste of the florist. It is of the utmost importance, therefore, that an advertisement bringing notice of a new feature and bidding for a new clientele should have the telephone number is a most noticeable position. A line or two, in addition, calling attention to the telephone and delivery service of the establishment will not be misplaced.

Window Displays Bring Business.

Although the larger part of the advertising of such a feature as dollar boxes probably must be through the newspapers, a good deal can be accomplished by means of attractive window displays. A few boxes made up in the most pleasing style and placed in the foreground of the window display will draw attention to the special feature. Cards bearing appropriate inscriptions will add to the effectiveness of the display.

The flowers used will, of course, be those which are most plentiful at the moment. Almost anything can be used, except that garden flowers, like asters, must not predominate. Roses and carnations are the staples, of course. One of the special advantages of the dollar box is that it offers a means of disposing of short-stemmed flowers. The number to the box depends entirely upon the kind, quality and cost of stock available and varies from a half-dozen to two or three dozen. If good Beauties with short to medium stems are used, the number, needless to say, will approach the former; if short Killarneys cut from young stock, such as are plentiful just now, make up the box, the number may be the latter. In summer the Killarneys probably form the bulk of the boxes. Sweet peas, snapdragons, carnations, pansies, violets, mignonette, daffodils, jonquils, stevia, etc., are used for variety during their seasons. The enterprising florist will make endless combinations.

Keeps Business Moving.

The primary advantage of the use of dollar boxes is that it keeps stock moving and gives employment to members of the store force who would otherwise be idle. Aside from a certain amount of funeral work there is not much doing in the hot months. The store must be kept going, however, and employees are still getting wages. It is only good business that the investment should be made to yield as much as possible, and, moreover, it is highly desirable to keep the people in the habit of buying flowers as regularly as possible, even though the margin of profit upon the business is not large. The profit upon dollar boxes it not great, but it counts large in the dull summer months. If well advertised, the business should take care of a good amount of stock and make the shop present a fairly busy appearance, which, in itself, is always profitable.

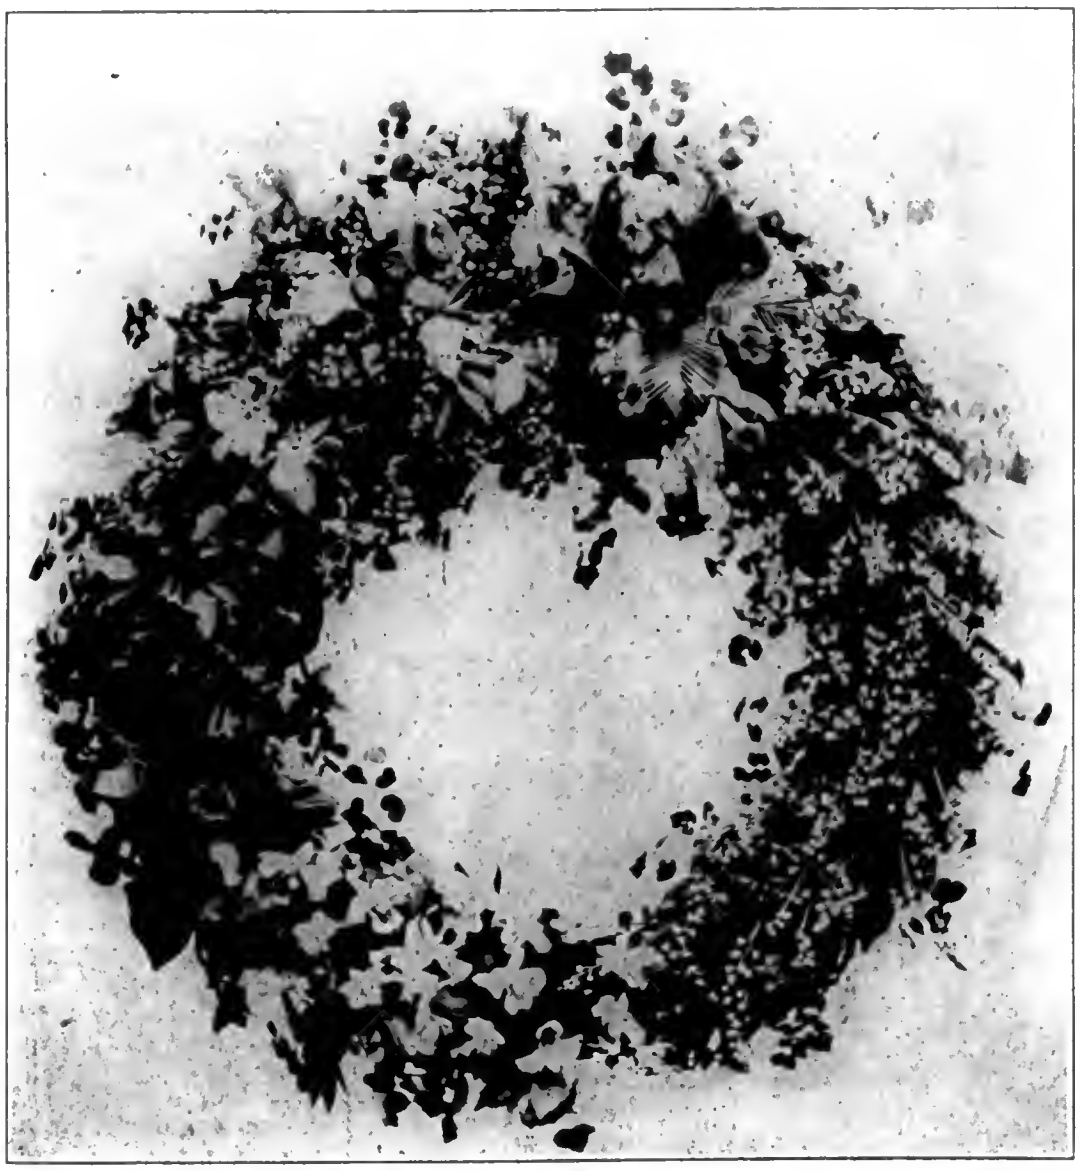
Formerly one of the drawbacks to the trade in dollar boxes was the expense of delivery. The small margin on these orders was often much more than eaten up by the cost of a single delivery to a distant part of the city. Recently Uncle Sam has removed that handicap. The parcel post will handle these scattered deliveries as well as a messenger boy or automobile. The nominal local rate of postage and a special delivery stamp carry the package in quick time and as well as the more expensive modes of delivery. The parcel post has in this way made dollar boxes more profitable than before as a business line.

Advertising Possibilities.

More valuable than the profit they bring are the advertising possibilities of the dollar boxes. By heavily advertising his dollar boxes for a certain season or for certain days the florist attracts the notice of people who have not before known of him, and he gains customers who have not before bought in his store. These people receive good value in the dollar boxes, and appreciate it. Another time they will come for larger and more profitable work and in time come to be regular customers of the florist who caught their eyes with a summer bargain attraction.

Another and quite as profitable result of dollar boxes is the creation of new flower buyers. Cut flowers are liked and desired by many people who forego them because they consider them an extravagant luxury. They treat themselves to many other extravagances, but are not in the habit of buying flowers. To them, however, a bargain is a bargain, and the sight of a box of flowers to be had for a dollar makes many of them purchasers. A few, perhaps, will always look for dollar boxes, but the larger number will come in time to buy flowers for many special occasions and will add themselves to the list of regular customers. Thus the dollar box is an educational as well as an advertising and a business feature.



ORCHIDS AND VALLEY.

The accompanying wreath of orchids and valley was the work of the Fleischman Floral Co., Chicago. It was made on a base of Mexican ivy and, with some small cycas leaves and suitable ribbon, made a rich and beautiful arrangement.

NEW PARCEL POST RULE.

Every few days the postoffice department makes some modification of the parcel post regulations, so that the system rapidly is getting into such shape that florists can use it to advantage. Plants and seeds pay the same old rates, but get all the other advantages. Cut flowers, supplies, etc., take the zone rates. With special delivery and the use of ordinary stamps the system is much better than at the start. Now, also, a new rule with regard to insurance is in force, as follows:

"A mailable parcel on which the postage is fully prepaid may be insured against loss in an amount equivalent to its actual value, but not to exceed $25, on payment of a fee of 5 cents, and in an amount equivalent to its actual value in excess of $25, but not to exceed $50, on payment of a fee of 10 cents in stamps, such stamps to be affixed. The amount of the insurance fee shall be placed on the receipt given the sender and on the coupon retained at the mailing office."

A KANSAS CITY DECORATION.

The illustration on page 7 represents what was probably the largest wedding decoration ever arranged in Kansas City. The occasion was the Rieger-Zimmerman wedding, which occurred at the Independence Boulevard Christian church June 14. The photograph was somewhat of a disappointment to Mr. Carter, of the William L. Rock Flower Co., who executed the decoration. On account of improper staging the photographer failed to bring out the size of the chancel, which held the arrangement. Three hundred plants, 1,000 lilies, 3,000 Dorothy Perkins roses and 1,000 peonies were some of the flowers which were used.

The decorations at the house were on the same scale, including many orchids, pots of bougainvillea, caladiums, hydrangeas, American Beauties, hundreds of Ward roses and delphiniums. Twenty-four people were in the wedding party and the bouquets were probably as handsome a lot as ever was arranged for a Kansas City wedding.

RUTS.

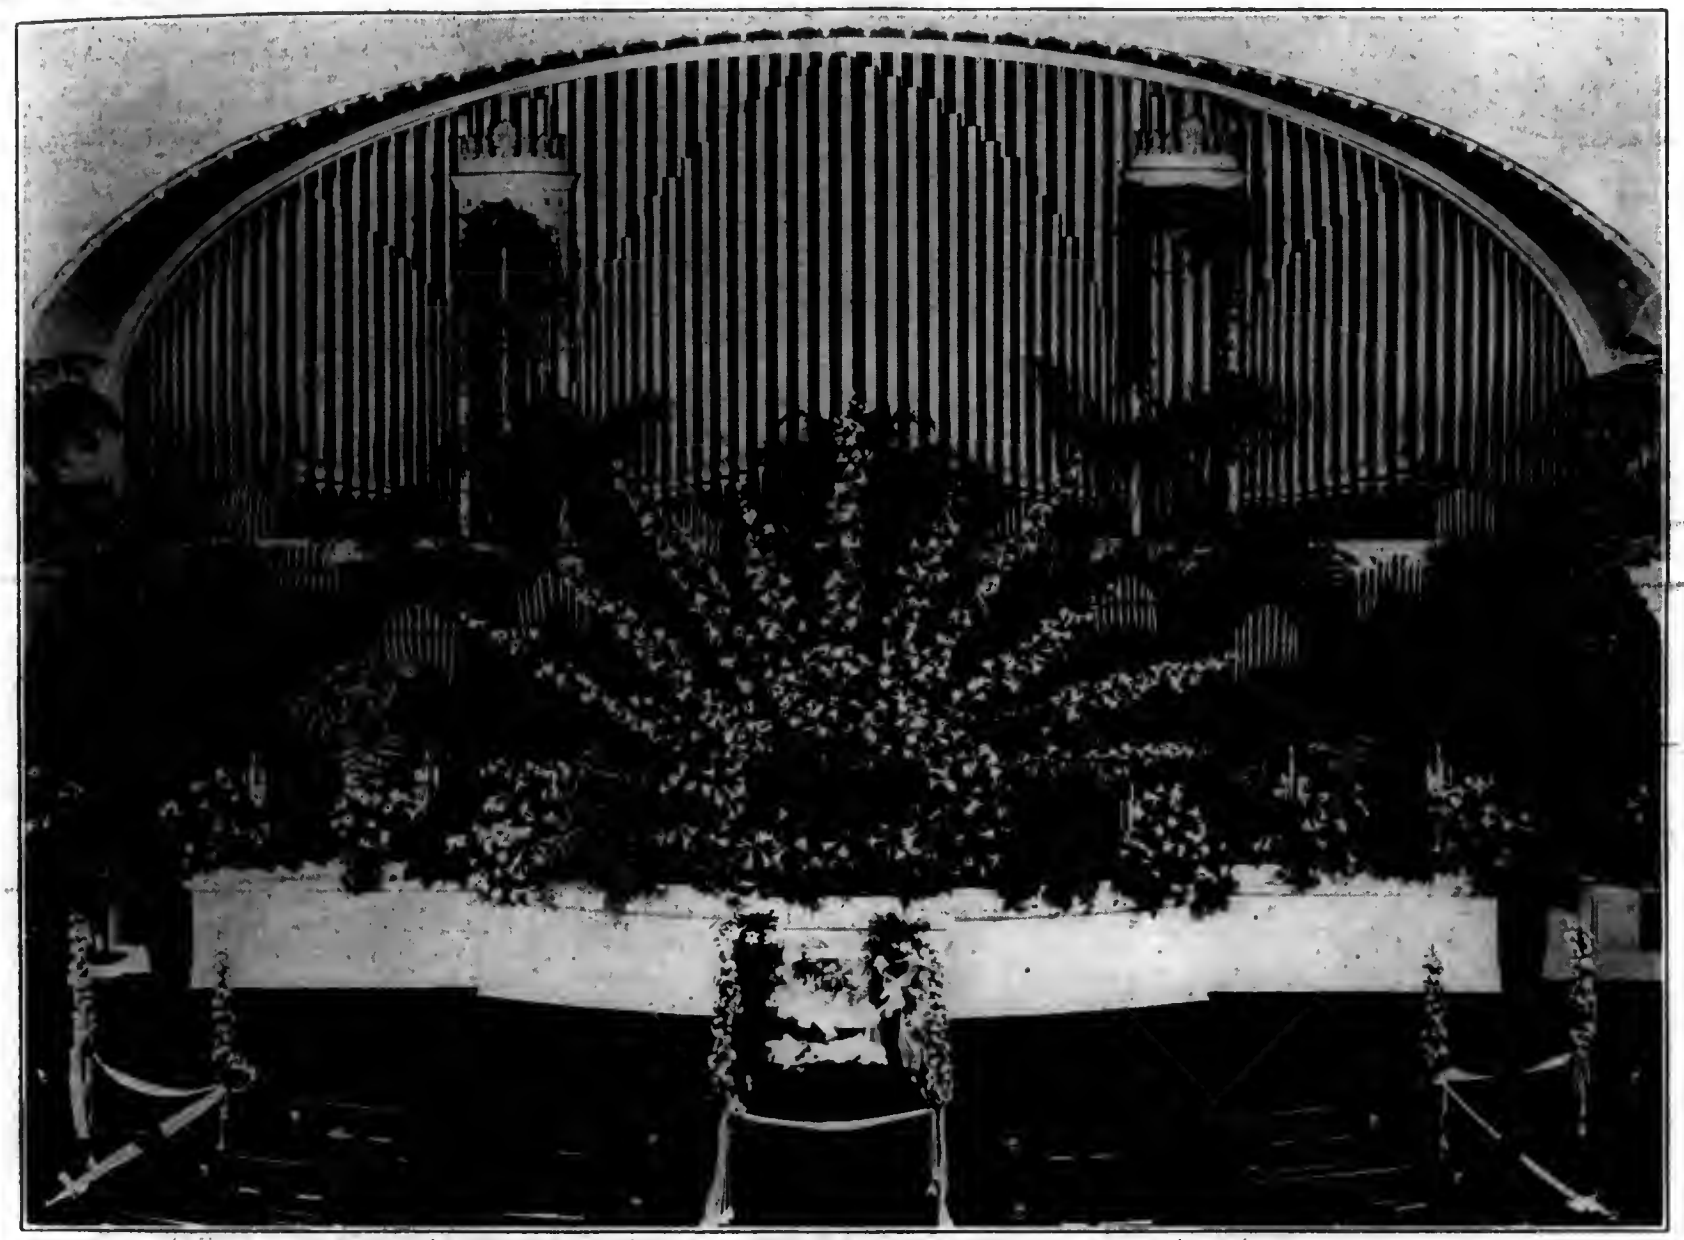
Up in North Dakota, we have heard tell, the roads are most excellent, but for one thing—ruts.

There is no dust, because the Dakota winds look after that by-product of travel. Mud, too, is a quantity to be left out of the reckoning. The bane of the North Dakota road is the rut, the common, garden variety of rut.

Complaint, not loud but deep, like the ruts, takes possession of the Dakotan's soul as his automobile wheels seek the ruts and the vital anatomy of his machine is swept away by the mound between. Or he may be marooned on this same hump as his engine races merrily on, availing nothing.

Ruts are a nuisance, anywhere. We all are bound to get into them, and we wonder why they, and mosquitoes, were invented.

The successful driver of an automobile or a business is he who avoids the ruts and drives full speed ahead on the smooth pathway on either side.



For just as driving outside the Dakota ruts is most excellent, so we may drive outside the ruts which beset us in our business.

And we know what ruts are, ourselves.

A FLORIST'S INVENTION.

Florists who ship funeral work and know, therefore, the difficulty of fastening designs securely and quickly to the bottoms of the boxes in which they are shipped, will be glad to learn of an invention by W. C. Scovell, a florist of Malta, O. The usual way of making holes in the bottom of the box, passing the ends of a cord or wire through the holes, over a wire in the bottom of the design, and fastening on the outside, is slow and laborious.

To do this work speedily and without damage to the design, W. C. Scovell has had made a pair of pliers, shown in the accompanying illustration. The tool is seven inches in length and is made of steel. It has a groove in the inner face of the jaws, which shows most noticeably in the one at the left. In this groove is placed a staple, or double-headed tack, as is shown at the right in the illustration. The staple is placed over a wire of the base on the bottom of the box, a prong on each side, and held firmly by the pliers, while a few sharp taps of a hammer on the end of the pliers drives the tack in place. The wire is thus securely fastened, without damage, in but a few moments. The speed, simplicity and absence of injury to the design, which are afforded by the use of this tool, cannot but commend it to all florists who have much funeral work to pack for shipment.

Mr. Scovell offers the benefit of his idea to the members of the trade and says he hopes this explanation of his invention will enable florists to expedite this part of their work by the use of the tool.

WINTER GERANIUMS.

Geraniums that are wanted in 5-inch and 6-inch pots for Thanksgiving and Christmas sales should now be in 3-inch and 4-inch pots. They should not be allowed to become potbound or to get badly dried out. Should they get potbound, loosen the balls with a pointed stick when potting them on. Use a little stronger compost when you give the plants their final shift. Some old hotbed manure or well rotted cow manure is good, and a 4-inch pot of fine bone to each wheelbarrow load of soil can also be added. Pot firmly, but be sure to leave a good saucer for water. As to growing winter geraniums outdoors or under glass, the doubles, such as Nutt, Ricard, Poitevine, etc., do finely outdoors if plunged in a bed of coal ashes. On the other hand, many of the fine single varieties keep much cleaner under glass. They are benefited by a light shade during extremely hot weather; heavy shade draws them too much and produces soft growth.

WORMS IN BENCHES.

Will you please tell me the cause of worms in soil on benches? I have had them so thick that the soil was alive with them. A. J. L.

The worms usually come in the manure. They can be destroyed by soaking the benches with clear lime water, by dropping carbon bisulphide in holes twelve to eighteen inches apart each way, a small teaspoonful in each hole, immediately covering after applying it, or by watering with one of the remedies which exterminate larvæ in the soil. Vermine, used at the rate of one part to 300 parts of water, will be found effective. Before filling your benches, if you could sterilize your soil all insects and weed seeds would be destroyed. If this can not be done use the carbon bisulphide or Vermine.

CARNATIONS IN THE SOUTH.

The Special Treatment Needed.

My southern observation has been confined to a district in Tennessee, near the southern boundary of that state, and has extended over a period of one year, from July 1, 1912, to the moment when I am writing this article. Though Tennessee is not in the extreme south and though the city in which I am sojourning is only the "gateway to the south," yet for me and for the carnation, both of northern habits and culture, this state is south enough to make us dream longingly of white flakes and ice-covered lakes, and this "gateway" is hot enough to make any northerner leap back, in thought at least, all the way to the north pole. I am thus stating the case, not with the least intention to criticise the south and its climate, but simply to give some idea of the conditions which carnation growers must meet.

Stem-rot in the South.

When I first came to the south the people told me that the carnations here were severely attacked by stem-rot. Often before the blooming season was over, half of the benches would be devastated by the disease. At first thought, one would infer that here in the sunny south the carnations would suffer the least from this disease. Wherein lies the cause? This was the first question that occupied my mind. The soil here cannot be the sole cause of the trouble. The land has good drainage and the necessary nourishment. If in some places it lacks lime, this can easily be supplied. The climate, on the other hand, cannot directly encourage the fungus to multiply and spread. The fungus would be more likely to thrive in a damp and cool atmosphere. Anyway, the stem-rot fungus in the south can not enjoy more liberty than in the north. The virulence of the fungus spore here is far less than in the north.

Less Resistance to Disease.

Then I came to the conclusion that the cause of the stem-rot must be found in the plant itself, and only there. And this is the reason: When the carnation, with its northern habits, is brought to the south, it undergoes a physiological change in its cell structure, as I shall try to show farther on. To a great extent, the cell loses its vigor; it becomes less immune; in other words, its resisting power against disease is diminished. The carnation cell loses more of its vigor than does the fungus spore. That is why the fungus, though less virulent than in the north, is more dangerous here in the south.

Seen Under a Microscope.

I am particularly interested in the study of the plant cells. I sincerely believe that there, and only there, are hidden all the mysteries of life yet to be revealed in our modern biological laboratories. With this idea in view, I made several microscopical observations, using a compound microscope, with a power varying from forty to 975 diameters, and a micrometer eyepiece. I compared the size of the cells in southern and northern Enchantress. During October and April the cell of the southern Enchantress was smaller, with a thicker cell wall and proportionately less protoplasm than in the northern plant.

An examination of the epidermis has shown that the stomata, or breathing pores, of the southern carnations, are smaller than in the plants from the north. Only during January did the cells and stomata of both southern and northern carnations approach each other in structure and size.

Watering in the South.

So my few early microscopical observations have convinced me that the carnation cell here in the south is less active and that all the processes of digestion and assimilation are therefore slower. From this reasoning a natural conclusion followed: That the carnations must be treated in a most temperate way, with caution in watering and extreme caution in feeding. It will sound strange to say that here, under the scorching sun, the man with the hose must be more careful than in the north, especially during the first period after housing the plants. Frequently I allowed the benches to remain almost dry and, on an average, I used less water here than in the north; I mean during the fall and winter.

Feeding in the South.

As to feeding, I must say that nowhere in the United States can the gospel of temperance be more useful than here in the south. By this principle I was governed throughout the year. Nowhere else can strong stimulants do more harm to carnations than here in the south. Weak liquid manure, applied often, and bone meal once in three weeks or a month, are sufficient. Of course, once in a great while a little nitrate or sulphate will be of great service. But beware of doping! Liquid manure and bone meal to the extent mentioned, however, will never give the plants stomach trouble. Remember that a plant is a living, organic being, largely subject to the same natural laws as are we human beings, and as we must eat no more than our digestive systems permit, so we must observe the same precaution in feeding the carnation. Here, again, I am speaking with special reference to the south, where the carnation is not at home and where it can not enjoy the festivals provided for it as it would in the north.

Results Are Best Proof.

What are the results of such treatment? Here they are: Now, at the end of the carnation season, our benches are full of thrifty plants, with no sign of stem-rot, stigmonose or external disease; and, best of all, we are now cutting blooms in such quality and quantity as ought to be satisfactory to any modern florist.

As to the size, I will state that we

THE WEEKLY FLORISTS' REVIEW

As experience is the best teacher, so do we learn fastest by an exchange of experiences. Many valuable points are brought out by discussion.

Good penmanship, spelling and grammar, though desirable, are not necessary. Write as you would talk when doing your best.

WE SHALL BE GLAD TO HEAR FROM YOU

Modern Carnation Houses as they are Built by Growers of Cut Blooms in England.

frequently placed our Enchantress alongside those from Chicago and we could not tell the difference—that is, when the shipped carnations arrived in first-class condition. It must be admitted, though, that my statement about the size is true only with regard to our Enchantress, for one house of our Beacons did not come up to the standard. This, however, I can partly attribute to the fact that the improper piping did not allow us to keep down the temperature in the Beacon house during the first part of last winter. In all other respects the plants are in perfect condition to this day.

The Value of Fresh Air.

I should like to remind some of the southern florists of the value of fresh air. Take full advantage of the cool nights where you can enjoy them. Some growers have a confirmed habit of lowering the ventilators in the evening. Don't do it. It is handicap enough that even some of the so-called modern greenhouses are far from being fully effective in their ventilating systems. Leave your ventilators wide open, as long as you are sure that the frost will not kill your plants during your summer months.

A few more words in regard to the size of the southern carnations in general. I have in mind an experiment and would invite some other florist to take it up in a small measure. It is as follows:

A Proposed Experiment.

Select a carnation bench in any of your houses and have a canvas covering prepared for it, so that it can be easily put on or removed. Then, as soon as the hot season comes, or even during the early fall if warm enough, have the canvas stretched over the bench—let us say from 10 or 10:30 a. m. to 3 or 3:30 p. m., and during these hours spray the canvas on the top every now and then. This is for two purposes: First, it will keep off the scorching sunlight during the hottest part of the day, and second, the moisture evaporating from the canvas will, to a certain extent, cool down the atmosphere of the house. I am sure this plan will work. Just try it.

In conclusion I will say that I see no reason why the southern florist should not attain to the modern standard in carnation growing as soon as he is able to discover methods of culture that are suitable to southern conditions.

CARNATIONS IN ENGLAND.

When the American carnation first gained popularity in England the growers used the British method, pot culture, but of late the American system has come into vogue and a constantly increasing proportion of the stock is grown planted out in benches. How closely the British growers are following the methods employed on this side of the Atlantic will be seen from a scrutiny of the accompanying illustration. It shows a view in the plant of Allwood Bros., known as the Wivelsfield Nurseries, Haywards Heath, Sussex, England. One of the members of the firm obtained his training in America, reversing the usual order. This is a comparatively new plant and corresponds to the American style rather more closely than do the older ranges, but it shows what is being done in this direction. The houses are detached. The one pictured is 50x200, with raised benches to accommodate five rows of plants, supported by twine crossing wires that run between the rows, lengthwise of the benches. One of the features that will be noted is the arrangement for supporting the wires. This consists of uprights of iron pierced with a row of holes into which a cross rod can be inserted at any height that suits the grower's need. The tiers can be added, one by one, as needed. The house is much like those used in this country, but one detail that will be noticed is the reinforcement along the south wall, where every seventh bar is bolted to the curved angle iron post.

THE SOIL AND THE FEED.

How many pounds of pulverized sheep or cattle manure would you advise me to use to an ordinary wheelbarrow load of rotted sod? Which do you consider the best manure for carnations? Which would you prefer to use in a liquid form? Would you scatter shredded cattle manure on the bottom of the benches, and about how thick?

A. O. C.

We use stable manure entirely in making up our carnation soil. This is added several months before we want to use it and is thoroughly incorporated with the soil, either by plowing or by turning with shovels if it is piled up. We consider this far better than to mix in a lot of manures and fertilizers just before the soil is to be used. We do not use shredded cattle manure at all, as we think that we get equally good results, if not better, from stable manure and pulverized sheep manure. By using the stable manure to build up the fertility of the compost, and later using the pulverized sheep manure to stimulate growth, adding an occasional dose of slaked lime, we get an ideal combination of fertilizers. Instead of the shredded cattle manure on the bottom of the bench, use long stable litter. You can safely put on an inch of this, and with excellent results. If you use shredded cattle manure at all, use it as a top-dressing when the plants need feeding.

For making liquid manure you can use the shredded cattle manure or sheep manure, but why use liquid manure at all? The dry manure is much more easily and quickly applied and the results are fully as good, if not better. We have not used liquid fertilizers for years. Some of the chemicals, such as nitrate of soda, etc., must of course be applied in liquid form, if they are used at all. A. F. J. B.

Notes of the Hardy Garden

THE HARDY PERENNIAL GARDEN.

Pentstemons and Phloxes.

The pentstemons are not sufficiently appreciated as border plants. Several varieties are now in bloom and all are quite persistent bloomers. P. digitalis, pure white, with the throat shaded violet, is now at its best; so is P. pubescens, of a more somber, rosy purple hue. P cæruleus, of a pleasing dark blue color, is one of the best now in season. The well-known beard tongue, P. atropurpureus, with its white-throated red flowers, is a graceful grower, and the charming P. barbatus Torreyi, brilliant scarlet, should be included in every up-to-date collection.

The first of the suffruticosa phloxes, Miss Lingard, opened a week or two ago. Its shiny green foliage and its compact spike of flowers, pure white, with a delicate pink eye, make it one of the finest phloxes in cultivation. The decussata section of phloxes have buds well advanced and by the middle of July many will be open. In periods of severe drought phloxes sometimes suffer, especially if planted in light soil. In deep, well enriched land they withstand a lot of drought. It will pay to water them artificially rather than see them wilting and losing foliage. Taken all in all, the phlox family is the most generally useful of all the hardy perennial flowers.

Clematis and Columbines.

Clematis recta, pure white, forming a dense bush and now passing, is one of the finest white perennials for cutting and every florist should grow it. There is a double form that is even more beautiful than the single. C. Davidiana, pale blue, is now opening. Unlike C. recta, this variety rather likes some shade. The aquilegias are now almost over, but that most reliable of all the long-spurred varieties, A. chrysantha, is still producing some of its golden yellow flowers.

The hardy garden pinks, forms of Dianthus plumarius, are delightful, old-fashioned, sweet-scented border plants, bringing to many of us happy recollections of our earlier days in other lands, where they grew with greater abandon than here. There are some fine named varieties of these hardy garden pinks and none of the old-fashioned borders are complete without them. All are propagated easily by division of the roots.

Late-Flowering Spiræas.

Some of the spiræas are still in full bloom. These all like a deep soil and, unless fairly moist, they will soon pass. S. Aruncus, the various forms of S. Japonica, S. Queen Alexandra, S. lobata, and one or two others are now in flower, as are some of Haerens' new hybrids, which make beautiful border plants.

A few of the many other perennials still in fine flower are: Salvia pratensis, rich blue; Allium roseum, of a pleasing rose color; Polemonium Richardsonii, sky blue; Lychnis Chalcedonica, scarlet; L. Haageana, in various colors; L. Viscaria splendens, double rosy red, and L. vespertina fl. pl., double white. These are all quite persistent bloomers, especially the last named. Malva moschata alba, pure white, makes a neat plant, as does Heuchera sanguinea, with its numerous graceful spikes of red flowers. Among the hemerocallis, or day lilies, H. aurantiaca major, deep orange; H. disticha fl. pl., double orange; H. rutilans, golden yellow, and one or two of the newer hybrids are flowering. The useful H. Thunbergii, golden yellow, is just opening.

Asters, Foxgloves and Others.

Scabiosa Caucasica, lavender blue, is a fine perennial. So is the graceful Gillenia stipulacea. Some of the earlier asters, like Himalaicus and speciosus, forms of alpinus, have been in flower for some time. The bulk of these come later in the season, however. Erigeron Coulteri, lavender, is one of the best of its family, and Stokesia cyanea, with its large sky-blue flowers, will bloom until fall. The digitalis, or foxgloves, which have been making a stately show, are now passing, except in the cooler, shadier woodlands. Now is the time to sow seeds of these to bloom in 1914. Digitalis ambigua is a useful variety in early July. Centaurea dealbata, bright rose, and the several forms of C. montana now blooming are all useful border plants. Incarvillea Delavayi, where well watered, still flowers well. To winter this successfully, give it well drained soil, but water freely while growing, in order to secure strong spikes of its rich, rosy flowers, which are not unlike large gloxinias.

Anchusa Italica Dropmore and Perry's variety, of a glorious gentian blue, will each flower for some time longer. Baptisia australis and Thermopsis Caroliniana are just passing. Some of the forms of Chrysanthemum maximum, of the Shasta daisy type, are opening. So are some of the heliopsis. One or two of the heleniums are in good flower. Among œnotheras, fruticosa major and Youngii are each flowering. Valeriana officinalis, some of the kniphofias, or tritomas, the persistent flowering Viola cornuta, Yucca filamentosa, and quite a few other perennials add to the glory of the early July borders. I have omitted hollyhocks, which, in themselves, will soon make a regal display. Now also is the time to sow these for the coming year.

THE LILIES' LAMENT.

The German Society of Lily of the Valley Growers and Exporters has published an illustrated poster which contains, in addition to some nice pictures of lily of the valley, the following notes supposed to be addressed by the lilies to all who handle and deal in them:

1. Never let my pips be uncovered or exposed to sunshine and wind.
2. Cover me with earth or other shading materials, and let me have always the necessary moisture.
3. Cover me in winter time with short manure.
4. Do not hurt me, when separating my principal roots or in sorting, and you must never break off my flank pips but cut them.
5. Let me never be suffocated among weeds when growing; I want light and sunshine.
6. Protect me against frost during transport.
7. Let me have sufficient moisture when you preserve me in cold storage boxes or barrels.
8. Always use fresh grown moss for packing, and spread coarse sand between my roots.
9. Always use boxes instead of baskets for packing, and take care that my flank pips are not pressed against the sides.
10. Never call me first quality when I am only second or third; when I am an "early-flowering" I do not belong to the first quality.
11. Inform every buyer whether I am an early or late flowering variety, and if I am grown on humus, sand or loam (clay) soil.
12. Do not sell me too cheap, or else it will not pay you to grow me.

Interior of the Farmington Greenhouses.

VALLEY FOR SEPTEMBER.

Will you kindly tell me when to plant valley pips to get them in for September 21? A. G. B.

Cold storage valley should easily come into flower within three weeks of the time named. As the weather usually is quite warm in September, no bottom heat should be necessary. Keep the pips dark until the spikes are fairly well advanced; then gradually give more light in order to get some foliage and better substance in the flowers.

THE FARMINGTON GREENHOUSES.

The three greenhouses recently built by the Farmington Greenhouse Co., at Farmington, Mich., which are shown in the pictures on this page, are each 20x100 feet and of pipe frame construction. When the photographs were taken the houses were vacant; now they are all planted to cucumbers. Plans are now being made for another three houses, doubling the space under glass, and for a plant house in addition. When these buildings are completed cut flowers as well as vegetables will be grown. The products of these greenhouses find an excellent market in Detroit, which is eighteen miles away.

The manager of the plant is Edgar H. Steele, who was formerly manager of the Black Hall Greenhouses, at Black Hall, Conn., and also of the Andrews Estate Greenhouses, of Elmwood, Conn. The officers of the company are: President, W. P. Payne; vice-president, E. G. Hartwell, and secretary-treasurer, Mrs. W. P. Payne.

BEDDING PLANTS.

[A paper by E. W. Byer, of Lancaster, Pa., read at a recent meeting of the Lancaster County Florists' Club.]

Bedding plants are so nearly endless in variety and are used in so many different ways that I hardly know where to start in my discussion. But, since I must make a beginning somewhere, I will first consider a few of the tender plants.

Abutilons can now be had in all colors. Some are much freer bloomers than others and some grow six feet tall, while others trail. On some the leaves are plain green; on others they are variegated. A. Savitzii and Souvenir de Bonn are among the most satisfactory bedders. These plants root easily from tender shoots or can be grown from seeds.

In ageratums there are many colors, but the dark blue is the best. The compact kinds have the preference and give excellent satisfaction as bedding plants for a sunny situation. They can be grown cheaply from seed and also from cuttings, which can be potted up without rooting them in the sand. They grow into salable plants in a short time and can be sold at a reasonable price.

Alternantheras still have some sale, but are not so much in demand as they used to be, when more carpet bedding was done. They are still used to some extent for borders around beds, where a low-growing plant is needed. Old clumps can be divided into small pieces, and the cuttings root readily if taken with a joint near the end. Grow the two colors, red and yellow.

A Fine shade of Blue.

Browallia speciosa major is not as much grown as it should be, for it will surely sell, since its color is a fine shade of blue that is not often seen. There is also a white one which is equally good and which, I believe, will sell equally well. They grow rapidly from seed and a small quantity of seed will supply you with plenty of plants.

In begonias, those of the semperflorens type are the ones you want to grow and you can recommend them to your customers as sure satisfaction-givers in the way of bedding plants, growing finely either in sun or shade. Plant the seed early and, if the plants are properly cared for, you will surely get your money back with plenty of profit, besides pleasing your customers.

Caladium esculentum hardly needs more than the briefest mention. It is quite a showy plant when grown in rich soil and supplied with plenty of water. It is well to recommend it to people who want a mass of foliage for tropical effect. The fancy-leaved caladiums are quite different from the large-leaved type, for they delight in a shady or half shady place and will there make a bed that can not fail to attract attention. They should be grown in an equal mixture of leaf-mold, soil and thoroughly rotted manure. In a soil of that kind they do finely, indeed.

Some Standbys in Cannas.

In cannas the list of varieties is almost endless and new sorts are constantly being added, some of which may be better than the majority of the older kinds. Still, some of the old standbys, such as Florence Vaughan, Mme. Crozy, Mont Blanc, Pennsylvania, and other equally well known sorts, seem to be with us to stay. It is well to try out a few new ones once in a while, as this helps to keep up the interest and you may occasionally strike something really good, which will bring more money for you. You can keep the old clumps over winter in any place where potatoes keep well. In spring they should be divided into one-eye pieces, started in moss or soil in a warm greenhouse and then potted into 3-inch pots and grown along into 4-inch, if that size is wanted. These make fine, salable plants and do well when planted out.

Coleuses are used in endless quantities, but as best sellers I would recommend Golden Bedder, Verschaffeltii, Queen Victoria and Beckwith's Gem. These kinds will meet about all the calls you will have for quantities. There are dozens of other sorts that can be sold in a small way, but they do not sell like the ones I have named. The fancy or large-leaved sorts are intended mostly for pots, as the wind breaks the leaves badly when they are exposed. Coleuses are easily rooted; in fact, the cuttings may be taken off almost any place and potted up, and they soon make nice plants. If you want new kinds, sow seeds and you will have a great variety.

For a Shady Location.

Fuchsias are now more in demand than they were some years ago and they make fine bedding plants for a shady situation. They can readily be grown from cuttings, which should be taken quite early in the spring and potted along just as fast as they need the room.

Geraniums are about the best selling bedding plants grown and I think the program committee should get a paper on them from some of the Lancaster geranium growers.

Lantanas are among the showiest of bedding plants, making a great amount of growth and producing a fine lot of flowers. They now sell freely and at average prices. Since they are not hard to grow, I should think they might profitably be pushed more than they are. Use the dwarf kinds. Take cuttings of the tender shoots early in spring and pot along as needed.

There is always some demand for that dainty plant, the lobelia. The compacta varieties are the ones to select. They are easily grown from seed, sown in early spring, and are potted along as needed.

The Children's Favorite.

When I think of pansies I can almost see the faces that seem to look at us out of the blossoms. I believe that if the children had a vote as to which is their favorite flower, the majority would vote for the pansy and it seems to be a general favorite among grown people also. There are many strains and I think it pays to get the best of the giants. The seed is planted at different times, according to the purpose for which the plants are to be used. I always plant mine about the middle or last part of July, in good garden soil —not too rich, however, or it will bring the plants along too fast and they will get too long and straggly. The plants are ready for sale or for transplanting in September, when they can be planted in coldframes or out in the field, where they nearly always winter successfully. If you want them early, use the coldframe. The plants of the bedding type are satisfactory when used in a mass for beds, but are of no account as single plants.

In petunias the single sorts are the best that can be had for bedding. They are good sellers when in bloom and are easily grown from seed. It is well to have a good variety. Solid colors sell best, but you also need some variegated ones. The double petunias make nice bedding plants, but do not sell for that purpose as well as the single ones. I would recommend growing the double ones from cuttings. Rooted cuttings are cheap if you do not care to carry the old stock over.

Salvias in Three Heights.

As to the salvia or scarlet sage, the many varieties of this useful plant seem to confuse one, but they can be sifted down to three kinds, which will include Zurich for a dwarf sort, Bonfire or Clara Bedman for a semi-dwarf and splendens, the tall kind. Every florist who does any retail business needs these. They can be grown cheaply from seed and develop into plants quickly, allowing you to offer a nice plant at a reasonable price.

Of course you handle verbenas. There are no plants that can make a finer bed than these and none that can be grown more cheaply. Hence they can be planted in large quantities and also by people who cannot afford many plants. The cheapest way to grow them is from seed, but you should buy the mammoth strain and in separate colors. They soon grow into salable plants.

The vinca or Madagascar periwinkle, I think, should be better known, as it blooms so freely as to be literally covered with flowers. It delights in the hot sun and grows about two feet high. Grow the three colors. Sow seed early in the new year, keep the plants potted along as needed and you will have nice plants to offer. These plants can also be recommended for cutting purposes, as all the flower buds open in water.

It Pays to Get the Best.

Antirrhinums, or snaps as we call them for short, are highly satisfactory bedding plants, making a fine display. In purchasing antirrhinum seeds, or almost any other seeds, it pays to get the best strain that can be had. The solid colors sell the best. Plant seed early and keep the plants potted along and you will find they are good sellers, especially if you can get blooms on them.

A florist would hardly call his stock of bedding plants complete without asters in the leading varieties. The demand does not extend over a great variety of colors, but nearly all calls are for shell-pink, white, crimson and purple.

Sweet alyssum can be sold in small quantities for borders around beds and boxes. It pays to have some on hand. Sowing the seed is the best and cheapest way to get them.

Chrysanthemums as Bedders.

Chrysanthemums sell, of course, but do not sell the greenhouse sorts for bedding, except Golden Glow and Smith's Advance. These two are satisfactory; the others come into bloom too late and can not give satisfaction. Sell the hardy kinds, which can be grown readily from divisions or cuttings in spring, after growth starts. If you do not care to put the cuttings in the sand, pot them up in sandy soil and nearly all of them will root.

Dahlias are in demand for bedding and can be sold as dry bulbs or started and potted. If you are short on some good ones, start them early and take the young shoots off with a heel as they come; nearly all of them will root and will soon make good plants in pots.

Heliotropes are among the most satisfactory of bedding plants, on account of their perfume, and are sold in good numbers. Being easy to grow, they soon become large enough to sell freely. The dark blue is the best color, but you will also have some calls for white.

Hardy Bedding Plants.

In hardy bedding plants I can only name a few. Nearly all kinds listed in the leading catalogues have value, but those that I shall mention are among the best. All can be grown from seed except Anemone Japonica, which is grown easily from root cuttings and divisions and certainly is among the satisfactory hardy bedding plants. I should like to call your attention to Begonia Evansiana, called hardy begonia —and it is hardy. It really does not need any cover and it increases in beauty year after year. Get a couple of plants and save the bulblets which come on the plant and you will soon have a nice stock. It is one of the hardy plants that are worth while. Plant it in shade. Among the hardy bedders may also be mentioned Alyssum saxatile, aquilegia or columbine in variety, Arabis alpina, bellis or English daisy, coreopsis, gaillardias, wallflowers, hollyhocks, hardy phlox, English primroses, sweet-williams, and many, many others. The soil can be any good potting soil.

TOMATOES.

The benches in the house in which I grew roses last year are minus sides, but are still standing in good condition and I want to know about growing tomatoes on them. There are four benches. The benches on the east and west sides of the house are four feet across, and the center benches eight feet. The house runs north and south. The east and west benches stand two feet from the sides of the house, on which are return steam pipes. All the benches are eighteen inches from the ground. There is plenty of head room over the center benches. The side benches are four to eight feet from the roof. I can put on sides of any height necessary. Would you recommend retaining the benches and planting on them? All houses must be cleared, regardless of crop, March 1, 1914, for tomato seed flats. I cannot find Lister's Prolific listed with any seedsman. Perhaps C. W. would kindly assist me.

P. R.

I would certainly advise retaining the benches and putting sides on them. The tomatoes will do vastly better on them than on the ground in midwinter. You will find that four or five inches of soil will give you much better results than a foot of soil. Get the compost well matted with roots and then feed with topdressings and you are all right.

I find Lister's Prolific is listed by R.

& J. Farquhar & Co. and T. J. Grey Co., both of Boston, and probably by other American seed houses, or could be obtained direct from the introducers, Alexander Lister & Sons, Rothesay, Scotland. You will make no mistake in planting this variety. For winter work it is unsurpassed, not even by that fine variety Comet. C. W.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

A week of intense heat and destructive storms signalized the arrival of midsummer conditions in the cut flower market. Business literally was at a standstill last week. There has been no encouraging feature discernible in the market since the end of June; schools are closed, society is in Europe, or on its way there, or at the seashore, or the mountain resorts of the Catskills and Adirondacks; even the weddings are few and far between; "nothing doing" is the almost universal verdict. The steamers still are sailing, fortunately, and therein is a small relief from the prevailing depression. Newport, with its quartette of New Yorkers' branches, sends a daily call for select stock, and so the wheels keep moving slowly. The big clean-ups of the department stores do not amount to much, so difficult is it in summer to create any demand.

There are few roses arriving that are salable. American Beauties, especially, are limited in supply and perfect buds are hard to find. In fact, first-class stock of any variety of rose is almost eliminated, the extreme heat causing the stock to arrive in open condition and barely salable at any price. Carnations also have slumped to the usual summer level and many of them, if not asleep on arrival, are drowsy. Large shipments of lilies continue daily; $20 per thousand would buy the best of them July 5. Valley also is down, little of it bringing over $2 per hundred. The usual variety of summer flowers continues and much of this is never sold at any price. Only a part of the sweet peas sent in last week were sold and the discard has been getting more than its legitimate share. The supply of orchids continues abundant; 35 cents seems to be the limit for the finest of the gigas. Much of the stock sells below this and the lower grades can be purchased at $15 to $20 per hundred. The demand has shrunk to the lowest of the year to date.

Various Notes.

A goodly party will go to Boston on the boat Friday evening, July 11, to attend the meetings of the American Sweet Pea Society and the National Association of Gardeners.

Lager & Hurrell, of Summit, are sending a specially fine lot of orchids to market at present. They sell their cut through George C. Siebrecht.

John Young leaves this week for Minneapolis, to remain there until the close of the S. A. F. convention.

L. W. Kervan is now at his home, fully restored to health, after his four weeks' hospital experience.

Russin & Hanfling took complete possession of their new store on West Twenty-eighth street July 1 and will devo e the next two months to necessary changes, removing their entire business to its permanent home September 1. Mr. Hanfling returns from Europe the last week in July.

"WHO'S WHO—AND WHY"

MRS. FANNY WARENDORFF.

MRS. FANNY WARENDORFF, of New York city, will celebrate her seventy-seventh birthday in September. When asked to state her age a few days ago, she responded, "I am still 18." In view of her energy, her love for her business and her continuous interest in its progress, the claim rests upon a good foundation. Her present headquarters and home are in the Ansonia, one of the leading family hotels of New York, and there are few stores in the world that can compare with her establishment there, the Ansonia Flower Shop. Mrs. Warendorff has long been called "the mother of florists," and she has the honor of furnishing six stalwart sons to the florists' industry, in its retail department. Her first store was at 113 Fourteenth street, east, next door to Steinway hall. From Fourteenth street she moved to Broadway, near Twenty-eighth street, where Alex. Warendorff now presides. Her other sons have charge of stores at the following locations: In the Empire building, 71 Broadway; on Madison avenue, near Fifty-ninth street; in the Liberty building, at Liberty and Nassau streets, and in the Ansonia hotel. Herman Warendorff is manager of the combined industries. Mrs. Warendorff's grandson, a son of Joseph Fleischman, is at the head of the Fleischman store, at the corner of Fifth avenue and Forty-second street. Mrs. Warendorff is universally respected, in the trade and out of it. It is hard to realize that this remarkable woman has passed the "three score and ten" limit, for she is still as active, alert and artistic as many a lady of half her age. She left for the White Mountains, New Hampshire, June 30, to remain there till September.

and other wholesale florists, was killed by a West Shore railroad train July 5.

Miss M. McCabe, bookkeeper for the Growers' Cut Flower Co., leaves July 12 for a two weeks' vacation at Sharon Springs, N. Y.

In the storm of July 5 three of James Weir's employees, Messrs. Hains, Yonkers and Sullivan, were struck by lightning while attending to their duties in Greenwood cemetery. Charles Hains was killed and the others rendered unconscious, but they revived at the Norwegian hospital.

Gerard Dreyer is receiving the usual congratulations on the advent of an heir.

The Sunday closing movement seems to be an almost success. The few who opened July 6 did so merely to care for early Sunday shipments, and not to offer anything for sale.

The wholesale district is delighted to see C. C. Trepel on the street again after his two weeks' illness. He is looked upon as the good angel of surplus time and many a truck load he has saved from the debris during the trying weeks since Easter.

Miss M. E. Conklin will spend her month's holiday at Monticello, N. Y. The young lady is bookkeeper for H. E. Froment. Phil W. Ditzenberger, of the same wholesale house, leaves with his family next week for a two weeks' stay in the mountains.

The seedsmen are taking it easy after the best all-round season in their history. Catalogue work is about all that is left to do.

Stumpp & Walter Co. has a busy two months ahead before the new store will be ready for occupancy. When alterations are completed there will be nothing better in the trade in this country.

Max Schling's partner, A. M. Schieder, with Mrs. Schieder, is enjoying a western holiday trip which will continue until August 1.

Arthur Hunt, formerly with A. H. Langjahr, who has been ill and away from the city for over a year, has returned in good health.

Max Schling had a big and unique dinner decoration July 7, at which the table was made to represent the deck of a ship, with masts and funnels, and all in flowers. Mr. Schling closes his store at 5 p. m. during July and August.

Wednesday, July 9, the annual outing of the Greek-American Florists' Society took place at Wetzel's Grove, College Point, L. I. This society is ambitious to excel and the attendance, as usual, was well above 500. The athletic contests were reminiscent of ancient Greece. National hymns and dances added to the enjoyment of the day. Messrs. Nicholas and Fellouris, with their faithful committees, were everywhere in evidence. The wholesalers attended in even larger numbers than heretofore.

A. L. Miller, of Jamaica, L. I., has given Lord & Burnham Co. a contract for a greenhouse 28x200. Mr. Miller will build two others himself, using Lord & Burnham plans and materials.

Frank R. Verona, C. C. Trepel's confidential man, is rejoicing because of the stork's visit last month with a 10-pound daughter. J. Austin Shaw.

The Horticultural Society of New York held an exhibition at the botanical garden July 5 and 6. The exhibitors were Adam Paterson, gardener to Miss M. T. Cockcroft, Saugatuck, Conn.; George Wittlinger, gardener to Miss B. Potter, Ossining; Thomas Ryan, gardener to John J. Downey, Portchester, N. Y.; James Stuart, gardener to Mrs. F. A. Constable, Mamaroneck, N. Y.; James Linane, gardener to G. D. Barron, Rye, N. Y.; A. Lahodny, gardener to T. A. Havemeyer, Glen Head, N. Y., and Max Schling, who was given a diploma on a basket of flowers.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.

Club Meeting.

The July meeting of the Minneapolis Florists' Club was held Tuesday evening, July 1, at the store of Rice Bros., 218 North Fifth street. The attendance was large and showed the interest the boys here are taking in their organization. Five new members were voted in.

Theodore Wirth, chairman of the convention association, reported that all the committees were making exceedingly good headway on their work for the convention and that everything was practically completed. John Rovik, chairman of the baseball committee for the S. A. F., reported that suits had been prepared for his team bearing the inscription, "Minneapolis Florists' Club," and that the boys were practicing every Thursday evening and would be in readiness to give the "all star" team a taste of real baseball.

A letter from Wm. F. Gude, chairman of the Wm. R. Smith Memorial committee, was read by the secretary, and a subscription was voted and immediately forwarded to Mr. Gude. William Desmond, president of the club, left on a two weeks' vacation to International Falls, Minn., immediately after the meeting and the members gave him a rousing send-off. C. F. R.

TO DESTROY ROOT MAGGOTS.

I should like to know what can be done to destroy root maggots which attack cabbages and radishes. My cabbages were nearly all destroyed in the field this spring and my radishes are mostly wormy. Would plowing the ground late in the fall and applying lime do any good? How does the maggot get into the soil? Does it come from the egg of a small fly? J. K.

Try Vermine for the root maggots. I have used this and found it effective against root maggots, cutworms, earthworms, ants and other ground pests. This is a liquid and should be applied in the proportion of one gallon of Vermine to 320 gallons of water, or, in small quantities, two tablespoonfuls to a 12-quart can. It is most penetrating and telling in its effects if applied when the ground is tolerably moist. When the soil is dry, a great deal more liquid must be used to accomplish the same results.

Plow your land over in the fall. Leave it rough, and lime freely; then harrow it over. Gas lime, where procurable, is excellent for applying to the soil to aid in clearing out pests of various kinds; 500 pounds per acre of this would suffice, but ground or air-slaked lime can be applied at the rate of one or even two tons per acre to really wormy land. OBITUARY.

Gustave C. Woellmann.

Gustave C. Woellmann, a respected resident of Sea Cliff, L. I., for more than a score of years, died suddenly, July 4, of heart failure. He was born in Konigsberg, Germany, and was 56 years old. As a young man he served in the German army. He came to America thirty years ago, and about twenty-five years ago settled in Sea Cliff. For a time he was in the florists' business. Funeral services were held at St. Luke's Episcopal church July 6. The interment was in Hillside cemetery. Besides his widow, Mr. Woellmann is survived by three daughters.

BUSINESS EMBARRASSMENTS.

Memphis, Tenn.—The financial difficulties of the Memphis Floral Co. culminated at 4 p. m. Tuesday, July 8, when a petition in bankruptcy was filed. The assets listed total $52,000 and the liabilities only $16,000. According to Chambers, Taylor & Thomas, a firm of attorneys at St. Louis, who are interested in the case, the amount to be realized on the assets will depend on the manner in which the estate is handled. The attorneys wire that Mr. Chambers will be in Memphis Saturday, July 12, and hopes to arrange a settlement. The Memphis Floral Co. has done a large business for many years and was a heavy buyer in the Chicago market. C. H. Hune is president and manager. Albert Haisch was in charge of the retail store for a considerable period, but severed that connection last spring to go into business on his own account.

Louisville, Ky.—Edward G. Reimers, florist and automobile agent, filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy June 30, scheduling his liabilities as $29,000 and his assets $36,000.

Muncie, Ind.—Frank R. Wilson has been appointed receiver for the Muncie Floral Co., a corporation, of which W. H. Fisher is president and manager, Artelist McKinley secretary and Joseph L. McKinley treasurer. No statement is given of liabilities or assets. A wholesale and retail business has been done, with greenhouses at Race and Madison streets and store at Main and Walnut streets.

Carthage, Mo.—The Finn greenhouse property was sold at trustee's sale, July 1, to satisfy an indebtedness of almost $6,000. The property sold for $2,000 and was bought by Oscar DeGraff, of Joplin, father of Mrs. Frank Finn. Mr. DeGraff said today, after the sale, that he had no plans as to the management of the greenhouse, but would probably sell it after a little, when he got an opportunity. Frank Finn, who has been proprietor of the Finn greenhouse, is now traveling for a New York check protector manufacturer.

Mt. Vernon, Ill.—Charles Edward Miller, who did a nice business here this spring, has left town without making his destination known to those with whom he had dealings. He secured possession of the Fred Reinlein property after it was abandoned by that gentleman and rebuilt two houses from material on the place, and some local millwork, for which it is understood the mill man now is undertaking to hold the local bank and building and loan association responsible. J. W. Ross, of Centralia, says Miller worked for him a couple of seasons ago, but at that time was known as Edward Schultz.

El Paso, Ill.—The automobile decorated by the El Paso Carnation Co. won the first prize in the El Paso Play Day parade, June 11.

.....BUSINESS AND OTHER NOTES.....

Meriden, Conn.—John Ahlquist, formerly with A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn., is now foreman for the Blatchley Co.

Louisiana, Mo.—Thomas A. Culp, manager of the greenhouses of Mrs. C. H. Foreman, has moved his family here from Pekin, Ill.

Hartford, Mich.—L. E. Davis has had a good trade the last year and expects to add another 100-foot house in time for tomato plants next spring.

Rochester, N. Y.—Fernando J. Keller was one of the judges of the electrical and floral parade held July 8 in connection with the Elks' convention.

Lincoln, Neb.—C. H. Frey and family left July 6 with a party for their summer homes in the Minnesota woods on Pelican lake and will be gone until September 1.

New Orleans, La.—C. W. Eichling, president of the Avenue Floral Co., has produced, after several years' experimenting, what is said to be one of the earliest maturing grapes in existence.

Denver, Colo.—Thomas A. Hannah, manager of the Denver Wholesale Florists' Co., who disappeared June 4, has been traced by his wife to the Pacific coast, whence he sailed five days later.

Short Hills, N. J.—Thomas Jones has filed suit against the Public Service Gas Co. for $6,000. A leaking gas main in front of his greenhouses, it is claimed, killed 1,000 orchid plants valued at $4 each and spoiled $2,000 worth of other orchid blooms.

Greenville, Tex.—Wise Adkisson is building an office and workroom, 16x80 feet, and two greenhouses, 40x104 feet, in which concrete is being largely used for foundations, benches and supports. He expects to be ready for business in his new plant about September 1.

Leavenworth, Kan.—The Sunnyside Floral Co. is adding two greenhouses to the range at Fourteenth and Vilas streets. When these are completed the company will have 6,000 feet of glass and one acre of growing beds. A pansy bed, sixty-five feet long, is being built in order to furnish a supply equal to the heavy demand for pansies here.

Toledo, O.—Earl W. Metz and Ruth E. Bateman, formerly with Mrs. J. B. Freeman, have formed a partnership and opened a shop at 414 Madison avenue. Mr. Metz has been in the florists' business for fifteen years, and connected with the J. M. Gasser Co., of Cleveland, and with Harry Heinl, of this city. Before he entered the new partnership he was manager for Mrs. Freeman.

Tuxedo Park, N. Y.—Julius Roehrs Co., of Rutherford, N. J., won the special cup for the best display of orchids at the semi-annual exhibition of the Tuxedo Park Horticultural Society, June 28. Among the other prize-winners were Davis S. Miller, gardener for G. G. Mason; Emil Barth, gardener for Mrs. Samuel Spencer, and Charles Davidson, gardener for Mrs. C. M. Bell.

Emporia, Kan.—Charles J. Hallberg is remodeling and enlarging his store. The cost of the improvements has been estimated at $1,500.

Shepardsville, Mich.—S. L. Randall, formerly of the Randall-Leonard Floral Co., of Clio, Mich., has removed to this place and is continuing in business as a specialist in dahlias and gladioli. The business at Clio has been discontinued.

Wheeling, W. Va.—Fred Davison, of Davison Bros., who had one of his fingers removed at the first joint on account of blood poison caused by a rose thorn, was compelled a week later to undergo another operation on the finger, at the second joint.

Meriden, Conn.—Entrance was gained to the store of the Blatchley Co. through a greenhouse window Tuesday evening, June 24, and the cash register robbed of its contents, a $5 gold piece. The rest of the money had fortunately been put in the safe.

Muncie, Ind.—It is reported that J. L. McKinley, treasurer of the Muncie Floral Co., which recently went into the hands of a receiver, has taken over the Carnes greenhouses, at 1124 South Jefferson street, and will conduct them under the name of the South Side Floral Co.

Omaha, Neb.—The John C. Moninger Co., of Chicago, has been awarded the contract for removing the Joslyn greenhouse from the residence on West Farnam street to Hanscom park. The contract includes the rebuilding of two Hanscom park greenhouses and the construction of the new one. The price is said to be $7,600.

Wequetonsing, Mich.—The Babcock Floral Co. has increased its greenhouse space this season and has completed a new boiler house and potting shed. A new heating system, of Moninger design and construction, has also been installed. The firm disposes of its stock to good advantage in this town and in the neighboring resorts of Harbor Point and Roaring Brook.

New Bedford, Mass.—The notable displays at the annual rose show of the New Bedford Horticultural Society June 24 were those of M. H. Walsh, gardener for Miss Sarah B. Fay, Woods Hole; D. F. Roy, gardener for Colonel H. E. Converse, Marion, and James Garthley, gardener at the H. H. Rogers estate, Fairhaven. The two latter exhibitors also won important prizes at the Newport flower show on the following day.

Palestine, Ill.—Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Oldham announce the arrival, July 3, of a little daughter, Miss Vera Myrtle Oldham. Mr. Oldham has been rebuilding and enlarging his greenhouses. This season's business, he says, has been the best in his experience, but would have been still better if the weather had been more favorable; for nearly three months there has been scarcely a drop of rain. The town recently decided, by vote, to construct a system of waterworks.

AFTER the Fourth the summer is on the wane. Time to be thinking of fall business.

HAVE you noticed how many hotels advertise "Dining rooms kept at an even temperature by refrigerated air"? Well, why not keep greenhouses cool in summer the same way?

THE schedule for the fifth annual exhibition of the American Sweet Pea Society, to be held at Boston, July 12 and 13, has been issued. Copies may be had by addressing Harry A. Bunyard, secretary, 342 West Fourteenth street, New York.

THE trade in England has been deeply stirred by the announcement that with the retirement of Sir Harry J. Veitch, who has passed 70 years of age, the famous nurseries of James Veitch & Sons, Ltd., will be sold out and the company cease to exist.

ONE of the profit-making points about the Mrs. Ward rose is the fact that, being largely used for corsages, the short-stemmed flowers sell well. The grower does not have to sacrifice at least half his season's cut to get salable stems on the other half.

THE proceedings of the twenty-second annual meting of the American Carnation Society has been mailed to members by Secretary Baur. In addition to a report of the sessions and exhibition at New York in March, it contains list of members, list of contributors to the Dorner memorial fund, list of registrations, etc.

THE recent hot weather should do a great deal to boom business among growers for the manufacturers of refrigerating apparatus. The lack of adequate cool storage space cost many growers hundreds of dollars, while the possession of refrigerating apparatus enabled others to put their stock on the market in good shape in spite of the heat. A refrigerating machine soon pays for itself in any good-sized greenhouse establishment.

Rose Garden Tests.

W. R. Pierson and John F. Huss, the judges appointed for the purpose by the American Rose Society, passed on the exhibits of roses in the test garden at Elizabeth park, Hartford, Conn., June 28, and now present the following report, in addition to the report presented of the work June 21:

Test No. 2—Rosemary, introduced by E. G. Hill Co., 1907; parentage not recorded; scored 77.
Test No. 6—Seedling 562; E. G. Hill Co., chance seedling; scored 73.
Test No. 13—Excelsa, climbing Wichuraiana hybrid; Conard & Jones Co., 1909; scored 90; certificate of merit.
Test No. 24—Seedling 392; parentage, seedling 294 x 266; John Cook, Baltimore, Md.; scored 80; certificate of merit.

Harry A. Bunyard, chairman of the transportation committee of the New York Florists' Club, states that arrangements have been made for an "entirely independent special train" from Chicago to Minneapolis over the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul R. R.

SOLD OUT!

When you read these letters from florists who have disposed of all the stock they could supply through an advertisement in The Review, do you realize that you can clean out your stock in the same way? The only value of testimonials is to show to others the opportunities which they have not yet grasped. If you have heretofore been used to having surplus stock on your hands, you know now how to avoid that difficulty in the future.

Please discontinue our chrysanthemum advertisement in The Review, as we are sold out. The Review is doing splendid work for us.—C. Ericson, Princeton, Ill., July 1, 1913.

Today we find we are swamped with orders and must quit advertising for the time being. However, you will hear from us again shortly. —John Schweichler, North Tonawanda, N. Y. June 29, 1913.

Last week, June 26, one order of plants filled one entire car and then some; this customer was gained about a year ago through a small ad in The Review and has been a regular customer ever since. He buys all that we are able to supply.—E. Rawlings, Olean, N. Y., July 1, 1913.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

There never is more than one story that can be told of the market in the week of July 4: It always is dull. This season the week in which we celebrate the nation's birthday was no worse than usual; there was enough demand to take all the good stock, but scarcely any outlet for the considerable quantities of extremely poor flowers that were the result of the unusually hot and dry weather.

This week conditions are somewhat improved. There is extremely little first-class stock on the market, but the overload of poor flowers is less heavy than it has been. Following two weeks of excessive heat, the temperature dropped to normal July 6. Consequently, Beauties and roses are reaching the market in much better condition; wide open flowers demanding immediate sale are much less of a problem than they have been. Beauties are extremely abundant. Several houses have good crops and one or two are much more heavily supplied than usual at this season. The buyer who can use quantities is treated with great consideration. There is a fair summer demand for the better grades of roses. The greater part of the receipts are cut from young stock and have short stems. The special demand for yellow has subsided; the extra call now is for white. Short white sells much better than short pink.

Growers are rapidly clearing their houses preparatory to replanting carnations and the supply is much smaller than heretofore, small in numbers and small in size of flower. A few asters have appeared and it will not be long before this summer flower will displace the carnation. Gladioli have become abundant, but thus far the early pink variety is all that is available in quantity. Wholesalers are somewhat disappointed in the prices being realized, but one of the largest growers says he

OUR DAILY CUT IS 6000 TO 8000

GOOD BEAUTIES are not in large supply on this market, but we have by far the largest summer supply in the history of the house—a cut of thousands each day. If you have been disappointed on any order sent elsewhere, try Amling next time. Not only is our supply the largest in the west, but the quality is unexcelled. We are especially anxious to hear from the buyers who need daily shipments, no matter how large. If you can use a dozen Beauties per day, or a hundred Beauties per day, or any other quantity, we want you with us this summer.

FANCY ROSES

We are ready with a special crop of high quality summer roses. Good roses have become so scarce that medium and long stems carrying quality flowers sell on sight, but we aim never to be without some good roses in the ice-box to go out on late shipping orders. Let us know your needs as early in the day as possible, but call on us at short notice if you must. We have large supplies of Killarney, White Killarney and Bulgarie, an especially large lot of Mrs. Ward and soon will have a big crop of Radiance. You will find us rose headquarters now and all summer.

FANCY VALLEY

You can depend upon us at all times for valley. If you run short, a wire to Amling will bring the valley you need.

ORCHIDS

Our Cattleyas are not surpassed for quality by those to be found anywhere else in this country. It is home-grown stock and will reach you fresh, with full keeping quality.

We can supply fine outdoor Gladioli in quality. Mostly pink—other colors soon.

is getting much better returns than this variety brought last year, the heat having cleared the market for him. Peonies are gone, except for one lot. Shasta daisies from Michigan are a glut. The candidums from the same locality held the stage for only a few days this year, because of the high temperature. Easter lilies are overabundant; it is doubtful if lilies ever have made as low averages on this market as was the case in the last two weeks of June. A few sweet peas still are seen, but the quality is what one would expect after such long continued hot weather. The demand for valley has subsided to normal. Cattleyas are not in large supply except for one or two crops, but these are more than sufficient to take care of the present demand. Greens are quiet.

The June Business.

The average wholesaler expresses himself as well satisfied with the record of June business; it does not compare with last year so unfavorably as was expected. Conditions were so bad during the latter half of the month that anyone who has taken in as much money as last year feels that he has cause for satisfaction; those who can show small increases consider themselves extremely fortunate. The first half of the month was excellent, but the extreme heat in the latter part of the month not only cut down the demand but ruined much stock. There was a nice little spurt at the opening of the last week of the month, in spite of the heat, and on the whole the showing is such as to give confidence to the view that conditions are all right in the Chicago market whenever the weather gives florists a chance to do business.

Various Notes.

The Chicago Florists' Club will meet tonight at Hotel La Salle, instead of the Union restaurant. Committee reports are the order of the evening, according to the notices mailed to members, July 5, by Secretary Toepel.

J. W. Ross, seedsman and florist at Centralia, Ill., was in town July 8 and reports the best season's business in his career.

Otto W. Frese, of Poehlmann Bros. Co., is receiving felicitations on the arrival of an 8-pound daughter at his home July 6.

A. L. Randall spent July 8 and 9 at his place at Benton Harbor. He expects to go over the lake at the end of this week to remain until the fruit has been harvested.

Tim Matchen says Peter Reinberg has some of his carnation benches filled with fresh soil and that planting will be rushed as soon as there is a rain to put the plants in the field in good condition.

C. W. McKellar and wife motored to Waukazoo Inn, near Holland, Mich., for a triple holiday.

One of the week's visitors is S. W. Kanady, of the Denton Seed House, Denton, Tex., who has just opened a cut flower store under the name of the Denton Floral Co.

There can be no doubt that it is midsummer, as July 3 C. H. Ketcham, of South Haven, Mich., began his annual shipments of gladioli to Kennicott Bros. Co.

August Jurgens returned July 3 from a trip to northern Michigan to inspect the field of peonies planted last autumn. The field was disbudded this year, but a small cut probably will be made next season.

Was It Insured?

If this should happen to you (perhaps it has already) what would your answer be?

I have succeeded in arranging for the writing of Greenhouse Windstorm Insurance by a syndicate of American Stock Insurance Companies, licensed by the State of Illinois, with combined assets of over 25 million dollars. They have appointed me exclusive agent for Illinois for this form of insurance.

Your range may be entirely destroyed by the next storm or the stacks blown down, which would put the heating plant out of business and result in a frozen crop.

The labor and savings of a life-time may be wiped out by that one puff of wind.

Greenhouse Windstorm Insurance would reimburse you for the entire damage to all your property, except growing plants, and thus help to rebuild, restock and carry you until another crop can be grown.

The expense of this insurance depends, of course, on the value and general construction of your plant, and it is surprisingly low. If unable to call at my office write me at once and I will give you further particulars.

C., and after visits to other places they will return by the way of New York city. Mike Fink will have charge of the sales department during Mr. Kidwell's absence.

The second annual stockholders' meeting of the Chicago Flower Growers' Association was held July 7 at the general offices and store at 176 North Wabash avenue. The Cheapest Wagon You Can Buy!

The Armleder Wagon will cost you a few dollars more when you buy it. When you figure the cost of service per year, the Armleder is the cheaper.

Here is a sample of the letters we get every day—
This wagon has been in use for thirteen years and is still good for service:

The O. Armleder Co., Cincinnati, O. Auburn, Ill., May 23, 1913.

Gentlemen:—In reply to your letter of the 20th in regard to when we are going to buy a wagon, will say that we will not buy this year, but chances are good in the spring, and you rest assured that when we buy it will be an Armleder, as we have one that we have run for 13 years, and have never had tires on the front wheels set yet.

Yours truly,

The Market.

Local trade is experiencing the usual dull spell that always comes with the end of June. Taking everything into consideration, the spring business has been excellent and most of the local dealers report an increase in one department or another. General satisfaction is expressed over the way things have held up since the first of the year.

Until the first days in July the retail demand has been good, but several days of hot weather cut into both the supply and the store sales, leaving things at a standstill. The June weddings, this

Fred Klingel, of Erne & Klingel, has gone through the books and says the second month of the second year in business is even more encouraging than a year ago. The shipping end appears to have increased to a good extent.

Every visit to the Zech & Mann store finds some new improvement going on.

Tom Rogers, Mrs. Rogers and their 10-year-old son left July 9 for a fortnight's outing in Michigan. Their departure was delayed a couple of days by a rush of work that Weiland & Risch had on early this week.

The market has been full of reports for ten days regarding the affairs of the Memphis Floral Co., a heavy buyer here. Attorneys were soliciting accounts. According to a telegraphed report to The Review the matter did not come to a head until 4 p. m. July 8, when a petition in bankruptcy was filed at Memphis.

year, have been more numerous than usual and, with an increase in the number of jobs for window, porch and bedding work, there is little room for the grower or the retailer to kick. Several times, just when orders were becoming too heavy to handle in the bedding and window box work, the weather would work around and cut off the orders for a time and give the trade time to catch up. For the present, however, attention is being given the replanting end and most of the growers have the job well in hand. The supply has been cut down considerably and only a few good flowers are to be had. Roses hold up better than anything else and, as gladioli are slowly coming into bloom, there is trouble in finding enough good stock, even for the light demand. Carnations have been bad for the last week or so and it is hard to get anything that is worth consideration in this line. The daily papers have announced many weddings for July and, unless the prediction goes wrong, the month should bring forth an unusual lot of work in this line.

Various Notes.

Henry Smith's store force says business was good until July 3, when trade dropped off sharply with the continued hot blasts that sent people to the many summer resorts around this section.

Landscape work is one of the things that the Wealthy Avenue Floral Co. has made a specialty of since the organization of the firm of Freyling & Mendals. Each year has seen a steady growth of the business handled in this line and for 1913 Mr. Freyling reports the orders were numerous enough to require more help than ordinarily. The mum planting has just been completed and the other stock will be in the benches shortly.

Crabb & Hunter have branched out into the real estate business. The property where the greenhouses now stand is in the center of a big residence section that is being boomed for the better class of homes and prices have jumped to attractive levels. As a result the greenhouse and surrounding holdings of Crabb & Hunter have been platted and offered for sale as building lots. The new downtown store has been in operation just a year and has been successful, according to Mr. Crabb.

Eli Cross is satisfied with the spring business and, while things are rather slow at present, the store force is able to keep busy. Mr. Cross contemplates

PHILADELPHIA.

The Eastern Market.

The Glorious Fourth and the hardly less glorious fifth, for many of the business houses were closed all or part of that day, so interrupted the usual course of events that business was poor for the current week, July 3 to July 9. The extremely hot weather that we have had lowered the quality of flowers cut from plants that have been blooming throughout the season to such an extent that it was sometimes hard to find flowers good enough for the orders. There is some good stock: Easter lilies, valley, Beauties from down east, sweet peas from New York state, gladioli, Centaurea imperialis, white and lavender, and asters mostly from Lancaster county. These asters are two or three times as good as they were a week ago, to judge from the price, and they are welcome in the absence of many good carnations. Mrs. Taft is proving a good summer rose. The demand is like the zephyr by the sea; it springs up unexpectedly, then dies away again. Still there is about as much doing as usual at this season.

Cleaning Glass.

We all know the difficulty of getting dirty glass into such condition that plants will grow underneath it. Every one has his pet formula, muriatic acid, scrubbing brush and water with plenty of elbow grease added and so on, but none of them are satisfactory. The glass men use hydrochloric acid to clean glass. This acid was tried last week successfully by the Robert Craig Co., to clean the glass on one of the company's houses at Forty-ninth and Market streets. The acid diluted with water was applied with scrubbing brushes attached to handles. It took four men four hours to clean a house, 20x100 feet. The men used rubber gloves, a sliding scaffold and great care not to burn themselves. The acid cleaned the glass thoroughly and took all the paint off the bars, but did not injure the wood. I am unable to give the proportions of hydrochloric acid and water. If the mixture is too strong, the glass will be frosted; if it is too weak, the acid will not eat the smut from the glass. Mr. Craig has promised to give the proper proportions when he has fully tested the mixture.

The Founders' Week Pageant.

The wonderful display given in this city a few years ago is still fresh in the minds of all who saw it. The decorated cars, the scenery, the costumes on living figures, all reproduced with historic fidelity, were masterpieces of skill and ingenuity. Not every one knows how these results were produced. When those who planned the affair had their work well under way it became necessary to find some one who could execute the plans. A contract had to be made, to produce all that was needed for a given sum of money. To do this almost every known kind of labor, both skilled and unskilled, had to be employed. The time was limited to about ten weeks. No one had ever done anything of the kind before. John P. and Edward Habermehl stepped forward and took the contract, rose at five every morning until it was finished, overcame

Louis Berger has received the bulb order for next fall planting from the city of Baltimore.

H. Bayersdorfer & Co. have sprung their first novelty of the coming season, garlands of flowers and foliage for baskets. These garlands are ingeniously made of wood—just think of it, red roses of wood! They have also porcelain and crepe flowers, to be attached to the baskets as desired.

During the coming season George Burton will run John Burton's establishment. The stock of both places will be handled by the Leo Niessen Co.

Phil.

Crestwood, Ky.—Geo. O. Klein just finished a busy season. He sold out so clean that he had not even stock plants left.

ST. LOUIS.

The Southwestern Market.

The hot days last week were discouraging to both wholesalers and retailers. At the wholesale market there seems to be plenty of stock in the lower grades, but in the fancy grades there is a great scarcity. The wholesalers say, however, that there was little demand last week for anything except funeral flowers. The retailers are not buying much stock and are not making much display, as their windows are filled with greens.

An abundant supply of roses of the Killarney varieties are coming in each morning, but, unless cut in tight bud, they are wide open on arrival and are not salable. Beauties are about the best roses that come in now, though the bulk of them are short-stemmed. Carnations are also plentiful, but only of fair quality. Among the best of them are the Enchantress varieties, for which the demand has been good all through the week, as some extra large funeral designs were worked up in the west end.

Asters are of poor quality and it seems that the hot, dry weather has kept them back. Extra good gladioli are coming in from the field. In these, Augusta, America and Mrs. Francis King have the lead over the others. The growers are cutting them with the color of the flowers scarcely showing, but they come out finely in water. Easter lilies are fine, but valley is somewhat scarce. Sweet peas are inferior and the few that come in are short-stemmed and good only for funeral work. The market is well supplied with asparagus, smilax and fancy ferns.

Various Notes.

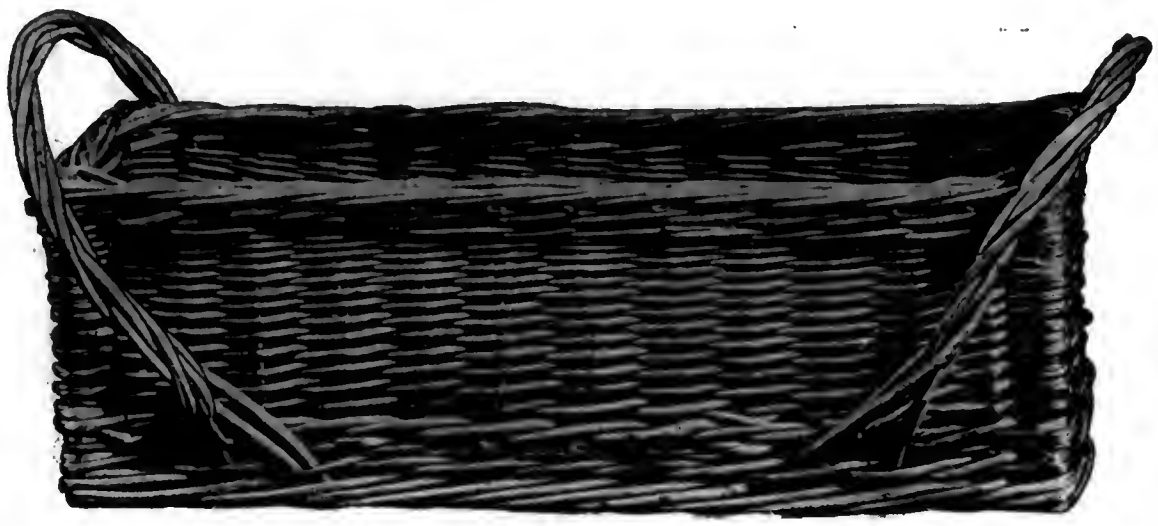
Otto Bruenig, of Berning's, has returned from his vacation trip in the east. He reports an enjoyable trip.

The Fourth of July is known as the florists' holiday. The majority of the retailers closed for half a day, as did the five wholesale houses.

Charles Meyer, of Kirkwood, drove his new automobile for the first time last week. He says it will not be long before all the Kirkwood florists will line up at the wholesale markets each day in automobiles.

The Kalisch Bros. Floral Co. is installing a new Kroeschell boiler. Ed Kalisch says that just as soon as this work is completed he will be off on his annual fishing trip.

Otto Sander says he expects to move into his new store on Kings highway by the last part of July. He reports a considerable amount of funeral work since the busy season closed.



John Connon has completed his new home at Webster Groves and will move into it before he makes his usual summer trip.

The Ladies' Home Circle will meet this week at the home of Mrs. John L. Koenig, 2307 Clarence avenue.

McClusky & Tricker is the name over the new flower store opened at 4585 Easton avenue. Mr. McClusky was formerly with Theo. G. Browne, on Manchester avenue.

The Metropolitan Floral Co., having a large Brecht show-window box, is able to make a splendid window display of cut flowers in artistic designs these hot days.

W. S. Wells has resigned his position at the Missouri Botanic Garden. He reports that he will form a partnership with Charles W. Fullgraf in the landscape business, with offices in the Chemical building.

The McCray Refrigerator Co. is making a fine display of refrigerators in the salesrooms in the Coliseum building. The Standard Scale & Fixture Co., the local agency for the McCray Co., reports a good season in the sale of boxes.

The flower show committee of the St. Louis Florists' Club met with the directors and manager of the Coliseum company and a preliminary list was made up, which calls for $8,000 in premiums for a fall flower show and $2,000 for prizes for downtown window displays during flower show week. The $500 for Shaw premiums is not included in these appropriations. Those who met with the Coliseum officials were H. C. Irish, W. C. Smith, R. J. Windler and J. F. Ammann. A full report of this meeting will be made at the club meeting this week.

There were three special attractions at the Missouri Botanic Garden for the visitors on Sunday, July 6. One was a "grandmothers' garden," another a vegetable garden, and the third a plot devoted to the cultivation of twenty grasses. These gardens are about the size of an ordinary back yard. They drew great crowds all through the day.

Frank Weber, of the H. J. Weber & Sons Nursery Co., reports that the cut from 2,800 carnation plants this season was 61,000 flowers, averaging nearly twenty-two to a plant. These brought them an average price of 2¼ cents per flower. The varieties were Enchantress and White Enchantress.

The event of the year among the local florists will occur on Thursday, July 17, at Romona park. The club's trustees, who have the arrangements in charge, say the usual amusements will take place, such as dancing, boating, baseball, fishing and various other entertainments. A special program of games for the ladies and children has been arranged, with beautiful and useful prizes for the winners. A good band has been engaged for the occasion. All in the trade are invited to attend.

Wm. F. Nichol, formerly president of the St. Louis Seed Co., and a member of the Florists' Club, has entered the automobile business at Delmar boulevard and De Balivier avenue.

The St. Louis County Plant and Cut Flower Growers' Association held its regular monthly meeting at the Eleven Mile House, July 2. There was a large attendance. President Vennemann opened the meeting, with all the officers present. There were good talks on carnations and on matters connected with the Florists' Hail Association. The fall flower show also brought out a good discussion. W. C. Smith and J. J. Benecke, treasurer and secretary of the Florists' Club, were present and were called upon for remarks. A beautiful gold-mounted gavel was presented to the association by Mr. Smith. The rest of the evening was spent in general discussion. J. J. B.

BOSTON.

The Market.

There is little to be said of an encouraging nature about the cut flower business, as it is now at its lowest ebb. With daily temperatures of 90 degrees or over, little else is to be expected. The selling season is over and ices and cold drinks attract people more than flowers just now. We hope for a change in September and console ourselves with the remembrance that conditions, both climatic and business, were just a little worse at this time in both 1911 and 1912.

Good flowers are not numerous. Such as there are meet with a moderate sale. Roses are handled chiefly by the street men, but even these aids to the cut flower trade have hard work to make people buy flowers when they are making desperate efforts to keep cool. Carnations are dwindling rapidly in size and they must be good to bring $1 per hundred. Sweet peas are overabundant and many can not be sold. Lilies have had for a day or two a fairly good sale. Valley is good, but drags badly. Gypsophilas, of both the annual and perennial sorts, are plentiful and fairly popular. Their presence hurts the sale of asparagus. Cattleyas are going slowly, and of the miscellaneous flowers it can only be said that a large part has to go to the rubbish barrels daily.

Various Notes.

Robert Montgomery, of Natick, has just completed a new rose house and has planted it with Killarneys. He hopes to finish planting his rose stock this week and will then give his attention to hay-making, taking a vacation at his cottage at Bastin's Island, Me.

Many visitors from distant parts are expected for the exhibition of the American Sweet Pea Society, July 12 and 13. The intense heat and the lack of rain will make stems short unless some moisture is vouchsafed to us this week.

Thomas F. Galvin, Inc., is now located at 126 Tremont street, next door to the old site, where tearing down and rebuilding operations are in progress.

The Mathieson Greenhouses, Clematis Brook, Mass., now leased by A. G. Cartwright, are practically all replanted

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

San Francisco, Cal.—June 27 fire partially destroyed the establishment of the California Florist Co., 1707 O'Farrell street.

Oakland, Cal.—Savagnio Rocco has secured a building permit for three greenhouses to be erected on the east side of Eighty-eighth avenue just south of E street at an estimated cost of $600.

Spokane, Wash.—The Spokane Ad Club proposes to make this place known as the Aster City and plans to hold an aster show in September that will eclipse the rose shows that make other coast cities famous.

Puyallup, Wash.—S. Pohlman and A. Lingham judged the rose show here, at which 125 amateur growers staged nearly 1,000 vases of blooms cut from their gardens. A feature was an address on soils, by Clark C. Thom.

Tacoma, Wash.—The Tacoma Rose Society's show, held June 27 to 29, eclipsed the best previous records. It is a purely amateur affair, but of much value to the trade in stimulating the demand for plants. It is estimated that there were 7,000 admissions. Charles Malmo, of Seattle, and Conrad Klom, of Olympia, were the judges. At the close of the show the presentable flowers were sent to the hospitals.

LOS ANGELES, CAL.

The Market.

Stock has been plentiful, but has been cleaned up well when of good quality. Too many of the carnations coming in are rusty and thrips-eaten, but good stock is still coming from the best growers. Gladioli have never been better; Mrs. Francis King, America, Princeps and Brenchleyensis are the most popular sorts and all of these bring fair prices and are cleaned up well. The gladiolus, in fact, is the mainstay of the market now. Cecil Brunner roses are flowering for the second time and there are too many to be disposed of at a price that would be satisfactory to the grower. Indoor roses are on the short side, but the demand is not great. Centaureas are in fair demand and are supplied in good variety. A large cut of Shasta daisies is on and some have to be thrown away. Stocks, gypsophila, cornflower, statice and other small flowers are about even with the demand.

Good plumosus sprays are scarce and strings are almost out of the question, but brake ferns and huckleberry are plentiful and a lot of wild greens is shipped from the northern woods. Good Boston ferns are scarce; so, also, is small stock for filling dishes.

Club Meeting.

There was a fair attendance at the monthly meeting of the Los Angeles Horticultural Society, July 1. Theodore Payne read an interesting paper on "Eucalyptus," which was well received and elicited a spirited discussion, in which J. Reeves, G. M. Grant, C. Winsel and others took part.

A letter was read from the Pasadena Horticultural Society, inviting the members to join the Pasadena brethren at their annual picnic, which is to be held at Redondo Beach, August 3. The trip will be made by special train over the Santa Fe, calling en route at Los Angeles, at 9 a. m. President Winsel kindly offered to take twenty of the members down in his new auto truck, an offer at once taken advantage of by many of the members.

Various Notes.

Considerable improvement has been made at the East Side Nurseries of the Germain Seed & Plant Co., on North Main street. The stock looks clean and healthy, both inside and outside. Other nursery projects are under consideration by this firm.

Frank Lichtenberg moved, July 1, from his old location on Fifth street to his new store in the Hollingsworth building.

T. F. M. Williamson reports business good at the new store; funeral work has been especially plentiful of late. He evidently believes that a good window is good advertising; fine stock is shown right along, and plenty of it.

Walter Lanss, of the Palmyra Nursery, has been at Ventura working on landscape contracts which the firm has secured there, his brother taking charge of the nursery in his absence.

Calling on L. Stengel, on North Johnston street, I noticed a fine lot of young seedling trees of all kinds in good shape, as well as nice batches of begonias, gloxinias and fancy-leaved caladiums.

Albert Knopf, of the Redondo Floral Co., left July 1 for a month's trip in his new automobile. Business is keeping up well at the store.

Morris Goldenson is down for a month's jury service in the Superior Court.

Business at the Los Angeles Flower Market is considerably better than at this time last year, heavy consignments of gladioli being handled here daily. Morton & Sperry are settling down to good team work and the improvements in business facilities continue.

monotony. Most of the flower buyers are away at the beaches and their summer homes. There is plenty of outside stock and it is of good variety. Carnations are still with us in limited quantities, although there is enough to supply all demands. Roses are rapidly diminishing in quantity and are of poor grade. Richmonds and Beauties are being dried off. Sweet peas are plentiful in various colors and seem to be the best seller on the market. A lot of good gloxinias are being displayed in the various show windows.

Various Notes.

Fred C. Fowler has purchased the business of the Forest Grove Floral Co. and will add many improvements to the place.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

The Market.

While the eastern states are enjoying a warm spell, the weather in the region of San Francisco continues to be cool for this time of the year. We were treated to a couple of hot days, however, during the latter part of last week, which brought to the minds of the hard worked florists the fact that a vacation was in order. As a consequence most of our larger shops are running shorthanded at present. There is such a small amount of business now that it makes little difference. All the schools have closed for the term and weddings are no longer in vogue. In spite of the hard times which are supposed to be everywhere in evidence, the retailers claim that more wedding orders were filled in June of this year than ever before during that month. Funeral trade has been light for the last three weeks and white stock is beginning to accumulate in the shops. The only noticeable feature now in the store windows is the big bunches of gladioli with which everyone seems to be overstocked. Dahlias are making their appearance in large quantities and, so far, they have not had a ready sale. Other kinds of flowers, both inside and outside grown, are in about the same condition as they have been for the last month and no relief is in sight either in the lessening of the quantity of stock brought in or in the chances for immediate business.

with roses. Richmonds and Killarneys, pink and white, are the leaders, but some Mme. Charles Russell is also being grown. Over 14,000 plants are benched. The flowers are all handled at the Boston Coöperative Market, Park street, by G. J. Wood.

Lester H. Mann, of Mann Bros., is away on his annual vacation, which will be quietly spent in the northern part of Maine.

John McFarland, of North Easton, has the finest summer gardenias arriving. He also has extra fine valley.

Mayor J. F. Fitzgerald is bound to have a large municipal greenhouse located in one of the parks of Boston, the money to come from the Parkman bequest. The city council voted July 2 to spend $3,000 for plans of the proposed building, which, it is expected, will cost $150.000.

W. R. Finlay, one of the best known salesmen with the Flower Growers' Sales Co., celebrated his fifth wedding anniversary at his Dorchester home July 1. Many of his friends called with gifts appropriate to the occasion.

The Boston Coöperative Flower Market donated a wagon-load of cut flowers July 3 for distribution by the Boston Floral Emblem Society, to poor children. I am glad that our wholesale markets are thus assisting this excellent organization in its laudable work.

W. J. Thurston, the genial manager of the Boston Flower Exchange, leaves on his annual vacation July 12. Rumor has it that this is to be his honeymoon trip, as he has haunted furniture stores greatly of late.

Some of the largest shippers of gypsophila to the wholesale markets at present are: The W. H. Knapp estate, Newtonville; Charles E. Evans, Watertown, and W. R. Nicholson, Framingham.

F. W. Fletcher & Co., of Auburndale, invited florists, gardeners, park and cemetery men and all others interested in flowers, to come and see the new antirrhinum, Nelrose, as a bedding plant. It is certainly proving to be a top-notcher as a bloomer outdoors.

Perry E. Green, of Quincy, is strong just now on sweet sultans and Spencer sweet peas.

The Wm. W. Edgar Co., of Waverley, has been cutting an extra fine lot of gladioli of late. The company has had many orders for its fine tubs of hydrangeas, some going to quite distant points.

A. F. Coolidge, of Cambridge, who makes a specialty of nephrolepis, is having an active call for these just now. The old Boston fern still remains the leader.

Visitors last week included Wm. Tricker, Arlington, N. J., and J. T. Graydon, representing Thomas Meehan & Sons, Germantown, Pa.

The HIT of the Season

In the past season every first-class flower store the country over had calls for bouquets made up with a certain small pink rose. In some stores it was sold under the name of

MIGNON in others as SWEETHEART

MME. CECIL BRUNNER

and we believe we supplied all the cut buds except for one lot grown in the east from plants obtained from us last year. We shipped cut buds to New York, Chicago and many other cities. The rose was the hit of Fifth avenue and its fame spread throughout the country, resulting in a demand for the buds in every store that caters to the good trade. It is in great request for corsage bouquets, Colonial bouquets, boutonnieres, etc. Appreciating that because of our distance from the largest markets we can not handle the demand for cut buds, we have prepared to supply young plants to growers who know a money-making novelty when they see it.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.
President, C. C. Massie, Minneapolis; Secretary-Treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

THE new member of the executive committee of the American Seed Trade Association, elected at Cleveland, was F. W. Bolgiano, of Washington, D. C.

HERMAN V. VLASVELD, representing Baartman & Koning, of Sassenheim, Holland, is critically ill at the Norwegian hospital, New York, with typhoid.

PEAS in the vicinity of Manitowoc, Wis., will be an average crop, according to the Manitowoc Seed Co., July 8. The late wrinkled sorts have been cut down by recent unfavorable weather conditions, but early varieties were past the critical stage.

PLANS are being made by the Lake Shore Seed Co., Dunkirk, N. Y., to replace its plant, which was destroyed by fire June 18, with a five-story fireproof building. The company has established temporary headquarters in the Allebrand building on Central avenue.

IT looks now as though the new tariff bill will become law right in the middle of the Dutch bulb shipping season. Hyacinth bulbs that come in under the old bill will pay 50 cents per thousand, while those that come in under the new bill will be taxed five times as much.

SEEDSMEN, and particularly those in Pennsylvania, should interest themselves in the bill now before the legislature designed to compel nurserymen to guarantee their stock true to name. If this ingenious plan can be put in operation the next step will be to devise a scheme whereby the seed trade will be compelled to guarantee their merchandise.

"THE few growers of Dutch bulbs in this vicinity," writes a correspondent at Nashville, Tenn., "report that they are well matured and that the quality is good. Of course, there are not enough grown here to amount to much, as the largest grower has only 20,000 or 30,000, but from the high quality of the bulbs produced and the ease with which they are grown here, we predict that this will some day be an industry of no mean proportions."

THAT all is not lost, nor everyone given to pessimism, is shown by the following from C. L. Kunz, vice-president of the M. G. Madson Seed Co., Manitowoc, Wis.: "From what we have seen of peas, they are looking splendid, with the exception of a few fields which had been destroyed by the heavy rains of the early spring. However, we hope to receive a fair delivery unless the heat should continue, which might shorten the crop." This was July 2.

A GOOD many large buyers of onion seed are beginning to wonder what the outcome will be if all have pursued the policy of covering not over half their needs by contract, depending on picking up the balance on a weak market. While things seldom are as bad as they are painted, it seems sure that Ohio will turn out a light crop and that the California crop will be far under the usual quantity. There is said to have been considerable good buying during the last few days.

ONION is not so bad as some other crops in California, a great deal of it having been irrigated.

RADISH and lettuce are said to be the shortest crop in California in a year when all crops are short.

CARROT promises perhaps the best of all the California crops. Most of it is grown on islands in the Sacramento river.

IT is said that the crop of radish in California, the important varities, will not do much better than ten per cent, while it is the third successive year since there has been a good crop in France. Under the circumstances the growers who have contracts in Michigan, where the radish was looking well last week, promising practically a full crop, have reason to think themselves fortunate.

CLARK AMONG THE PEAS.

Following the seed trade convention Arthur B. Clark, as is his custom, went to the Green Bay branch of the company of which he is president and spent several days among the peas. From there he went to St. Anthony, for a look at the peas in the Idaho and Montana districts. "For several days at the end of June," he said, just as he was leaving Green Bay, "the heat was of that same intense, scorching nature that has for three years in succession seriously shortened our crop of seed peas in Wisconsin. June 27 and 28, as we went among our crops, the effect of the heat upon them was strikingly apparent. It was clear that a continuance of it during still another two or three days would be fatal to a large part of our acreage. Happily, relief came in the form of a shower on the afternoon of June 30. Since then we have not had the same intensity of heat and we have also been favored with somewhat cloudy conditions. It is difficult to give an accurate estimate of the injury done, both because I have been unable to visit enough of our various sections since the heat wave and also because, from our previous years' experience, we know that this injury shows up in peculiar results that become apparent only several days after the passing of the intense heat. We do know that we cannot stand much more weather like that of the last week of June and make a crop of peas here, but if we are spared any more of this kind of weather we may make fairly good even yet.

"There is one condition that I have discovered since arriving here, which is the result of frosts having visited certain of our growing territories June 7 to 9. The frost evidently stunted about one-half of the vines, and, while these are now coming on and making an effort to make a crop, they are hopelessly retarded in their development and will not mature before the unaffected vines are fit for harvest. In certain of our important sections we regard our crop as at least cut in two by these frosts."

DEFRAUDS THE GOVERNMENT.

Representative George J. Kindel, of Colorado, in discussing in Congress the parcel post and a new plan he has suggested to the postal authorities, referred to the effect of the parcel post on shipments of seeds, plants, bulbs, etc. He recited it as an example of the "senseless regulations" governing the parcel post. "A few days ago I called upon W. A. Ryan, an examiner of the Interstate Commerce Commission," said Mr. Kindel. "He had a package of bluegrass seed which weighed five and one-half pounds, which he desired to ship to his home in Chevy Chase. He was declaiming against the inconsistencies of the parcel post. Ryan told me he took the package of seed to the postoffice and offered it to be sent to his home at Chevy Chase by parcel post. They wanted 44 cents to do so. I told him I would mail it parcel post and it would not cost that much, and so I took the package to the postoffice and in response to the inquiry as to what it contained I said 'bird seed.' The clerk said the package looked like one that was presented not long ago. The department quoted a rate of 10 cents on the 'bird seed' and it was delivered."

If a seedsman confessed he did that he would make himself liable to a jail sentence.

THE CALIFORNIA CROPS.

Taking it by and large, it is apparent that if California, on the whole, has half a crop of seeds it will be as good as there is any reason to expect. Of course there is some difference in the degree of color with which the situation is painted, but all the reports are, if not black, at least indigo. Like the following, from Frank G. Cuthbertson:

"The awful discouragement and depression experienced by the California growers can hardly be realized unless one has lived with the crop and has seen it go day by day. It has been a new experience to me and I never want to live through another. Great credit is due to those growers who by their skill in cultivation kept the crop going so long on so little moisture.

"Especially in the San Juan valley, up till the end of April the crops looked well and the stands were perfect. When no rain fell in April it was known that all efforts put forward had been useless, as no moisture to speak of was left in the soil. All growers feel that it is a terrible finish to a hard year's work. To crown all, during the first few days in May heavy frosts were experienced. The sweet peas were so weak in constitution that many of them failed to weather it and were damaged beyond all hope. Tomato growers in the Santa Clara valley lost a large percentage of their plants, and many peas are ruined.

"Some of the seed growers have gone to great expense in putting in irrigating plants to save what they could. The pumps have been kept running night and day for weeks, but as the land is so dry it is slow work and only a small acreage has been covered.

"The weather during April was warm. Some days the temperature reached the high mark of 89 degrees in the shade. Such days only served to accentuate the fact that there was no moisture by causing the plants to wilt. Sweet pea plants, though only a foot high, were crowded with buds, and here and there blooms could be seen in the fields. It is expected that the plants will give a number of poor blossoms and then wither up. The earlies came into flower earlier than usual, and if cool weather prevails for a time some little seed of them may be saved. They average about one foot high all over.

"The rainfall for the last two seasons in the San Juan valley is as follows:

merchant in America who sells garden seeds, as well as every American consumer of same—garden seeds—on a large or small scale, is debarred or shut out of making his purchases (which is not the intent of any tariff law) direct from European dealers in garden seeds because of the excessive custom-house brokerage charges which are exacted on every importation subject to duty, which brokerage on the average is from $2 to $3 on each single shipment, and which brokerage, of course, would be practically eliminated if such seeds were put upon the free list.

"In other words, as heretofore, if a tariff is put upon garden seeds, varieties above enumerated and specified, the actual consumer, as well as the small merchant dealer in garden seeds, will be necessitated to make their purchases at second or third hand instead of first hand—that is, through the big importer of garden seeds, who must have his percentage of profit; and not being in it for his health, his percentage of profit is excessive, as your honorable committee may determine by investigation and examination, by comparison of American selling prices for garden seeds with original cost purchase price in Europe.

"The few garden seeds, comparatively speaking, of above named and specified kinds which are being grown in America at present are being grown in California under Japanese labor and Japanese supervision—at Japanese methods of living, not American methods of living.

"I would call special attention to the fact that all agricultural seeds under the present tariff bill are admitted free of duty, and I believe they have always been from time immemorial—as was formerly also the case with garden seeds for many years—on the free list.

"It is of just as much importance to protect the welfare of the American farmer by giving him his garden seeds free of tariff as it is to furnish him his agricultural seeds free of tariff, especially when, as I have endeavored to show above (and which may be verified by proper investigation), the final price to the actual consumer—the farmer himself—is enormously increased or increased out of all proportion by the various manipulations of a tariff."

EIGHT PAGES OF RETAILERS' CARDS

This department for the cards of Leading Retail Florists — those florists who have the facilities for filling the orders sent them by other florists — has made possible the recent rapid development of this branch of the business, a branch of the trade now established for all time and so helpful that its volume will keep on increasing for many years.

Are you sending and receiving your share of these orders? You can send your share (and make 20 per cent profit without effort) if you let your customers know you can perform this service for them. To receive your share—well, The Review's department for Retailers' cards remains the one way of getting prompt action on the order in hand.

To be represented costs only 70 cents per week on a yearly order. This is for one-inch space. Other spaces in proportion.

Why not send your order today—now—before you forget it?

PROVIDENCE.

The Market.

The last week was rather quiet, as the previous week concluded the graduations and exhibitions. There is little business now, aside from funerals and an occasional wedding. Several of the growers are off crop on carnations or roses and all are devoting their time to propagating for next season. Generally the growers are planting their chrysanthemums.

Various Notes.

The sweet pea show under the auspices of the Rhode Island Horticultural Society, which was announced for July 12, has been postponed to July 19. It is to be held in the Mathewson Street Methodist Episcopal church parlors.

Samuel Resnick, with Joseph Koppelman, is enjoying a week's vacation at Block Island.

Paul De Nave, of Fall River, was a visitor in this city a few days ago. He reports having completed a new greenhouse, forty-five feet long, built as an addition between two other houses.

E. J. Collamore, who was a member of the Ninth Rhode Island Volunteers in the Civil war, was a member of the Rhode Island delegation that visited the battlefield of Gettysburg on the occasion of the semi-centennial reunion.

Charles Smith, with Joseph Koppelman, received letters last week from his wife, who is visiting relatives in Jaffa. Mrs. Smith, who is a sister of Mr. Koppelman, writes that their father is in good health, though past 80 years of age.

glass has held out wonderfully well and we are still getting good carnations and roses. There is nothing from the outside at present which amounts to anything.

The wholesale houses are probably receiving more stock than ever before at this season of the year and much of it is really fine. There are good lilies and valley and fine gladioli and cattleyas. Roses are better than expected and quite plentiful. Carnations are really good and from the looks of the houses, if we have reasonably cool weather, they will last for some time. Beauties are good, but the extreme heat was hard on them in transit. As there are none grown in this vicinity, they, with everything else that was shipped in, suffered greatly. As a whole, however, there has been good stock to take care of all orders and business has been better than usual for the time of year.

The retailers are all settling down to their summer gait and all are hard to interest in stock of any kind. The principal item of interest is the arrangement of the vacation schedule and some members are already away from most of the houses.

The annual outing of the club will be held in August on the farm of E. C. Ludwig, Ludwig station, Butler Short Line. The next meeting will be held the first Tuesday in September.

Various Notes.

A change is being made by the Lord & Burnham Co. in the store conservatory of the E. C. Ludwig Floral Co. When this is completed the workroom will be on the first floor and the greenhouse on the second floor.

Mrs. E. A. Williams has a beautiful, cool-looking summer window, decorated with water lilies and ferns.

The A. W. Smith Co. is getting immense shipments from the Canfield, O., place of phloxes, delphiniums and all kinds of outdoor stock. The company expects to receive asters in a few days.

Randolph & McClements report the season just past to have been exceptionally good in the plant line as well as in the cut flower department. They just finished their wedding decorations for this season last week.

its way through the ordinary channels poured into the oldest boiler cellar to the depth of three feet six inches, and also caused a lot of trouble in other parts of the premises. The third span of the six new houses has just been completed and the large coal and boiler sheds are being roofed in. Two hundred and seventy men are now employed by this firm and the pay roll is considerably larger than ever before. Business during June was good and stock was rather better than in previous years. H. G. Mullis and N. Anderson have gone to the Pacific coast for their holidays, and the head designer, Charles Norton, will leave for England on a six weeks' trip about the middle of July.

It is reported that the business of the Georgetown Floral Co., which was bought about two years ago by A. E. Moore & Co., of Toronto, is to be taken over by Kirk & McIntyre in the near future.

The first annual show of the Ontario Rose Society, which was organized last March, was held in St. George's hall, Toronto, June 24 and 25. Owing to the severe heat, the exhibits were not as large as they would otherwise have been, but, even taking that into consideration, the show was a splendid success. W. G. P.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Officers for 1913-14: Pres., J. B. Pilkington, Portland, Ore.; Vice-Pres., Henry B. Chase, Huntsville, Ala.; Sec'y, John Hall, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., Peter Youngers, Geneva, Neb. Thirty-ninth annual meeting, Cleveland, O., June 23 to 26, 1913.

C. I. LONG has purchased at Osceola, Ia., the old nursery known as the Van Nelson estate, and he is now improving and stocking it.

THE Gibraltar Nursery Co., of Los Angeles, Cal., has leased the old Aldrich ranch, at La Habra, Cal., and intends to begin the planting of nursery stock there as soon as possible.

ARTHUR NORTON, of Clarksville, Mo., has sold a half interest in his nursery to U. E. Thurmond and the business will hereafter be conducted under the firm name of Norton & Thurmond.

ARTICLES of incorporation have been issued to the Prospect Hill Nurseries, Castleton, N. Y., with a capitalization of $10,000. The directors are Borden H. Mills, of Albany; Edwin Beel and Luana A. Bell, of Castleton.

WHAT is said to be the largest deciduous nursery in San Diego county, California, is being planted now by W. E. Alexander at his place, The Hog Back, near Escondido. He will plant 100,000 trees, all apple and peach grafts, which he received from Kansas in two express shipments.

O. V. SHERPY, of Northfield, Minn., has been looking over the ground at Albert Lea, Minn., with a view to establishing a seed business there. Mr. Sherpy was manager and vice-president of the Northfield Seed Co., until he recently sold his holdings in the company. A. T. Boe, who was for a few years a traveling salesman under Mr. Sherpy, has a farm at Albert Lea.

BUSINESS has been so prosperous for the German Nursery & Seed Co., of Beatrice, Neb., that it has purchased 200 acres of land southeast of the city on which to grow nursery stock. Up to this time the stock has been on small tracts scattered throughout town, but now everything except the shade trees, which require bottom land, will be moved to the new plant.

JOHN RYKER, a Holland nurseryman, and Norbert Levavasseur, of Nancy, France, have purchased a 60-acre tract near Wapato, Wash., for the purpose of establishing a nursery mainly to grow ornamentals. They will do business under the name of the Ornamental Fruit Nursery Co. Both are now in Europe, but Mr. Ryker will return about December to prepare the land for the nursery stock, which will come mainly from abroad.

KIRKPATRICK VIEWS FUTURE.

"Future demand will require inherent quality and intrinsic value in every article," said E. W. Kirkpatrick in an address before the Portland Convention of the A. A. N., "and this characteristic will take care of volume or quantity. Plant diseases and insects are primarily invited as a result of poor or deficient soils. Tree doctors, tree inspectors, and many other horticultural luxuries, are the fruitage of depleted soils.

"The work, the dilemma, the crux of the future in all branches of agriculture, is reëstablishing the virgin fertility of the soil. Upon the fertility of the soil depends the integrity of the race, the ability of the people, the efficiency of society.

"It is within the province and purview of nurserymen to assume a leading role in recasting and modeling the organic changes so much needed in the future. All effete civilizations have risen and fallen with the fertility and sterility of soil. We are admonished by the menace of annihilation which has come to our forebears. The most difficult task, the most perplexing problem for future consideration, is that of restoring and maintaining the integrity of the soil. We need to marshal accumulated wisdom of sublimest art and science in the solution of this problem. Its exemplification would mean more than the discovery of a hemisphere; it would be the replevin of a whole sphere.

"Increasing population demands largest yield of life-sustaining food on smallest area; demands food of most wholesome quality; demands economic utilization and conservation of soil. All these demands find most perfect fulfillment in the growth of fruit and nut bearing trees. The efficient sponsors for this fulfillment are nurserymen.

"Foods produced from deep feeding plants, such as fruit and nut trees, possess superior nutritive qualities in the natural proportion necessary to health and happiness. The permanent, well-anchored nut tree is the culmination of all sources of food supply, requiring minimum of labor and returning maximum reward. The tree faithfully depicts the divine method of nurturing man and conserving the earth.

"The farm crops of annual plants feed upon a thin section of depleted soil, with decreasing yield of deficient, unwholesome product and at burdensome labor expense. Tree growth conserves soil, tempers the air, regulates moisture and temperature, places man in close relation to the Creator, and thereby increases the pleasures of life."

LANCASTER, PA.

The Market.

The week started with a rush; all the shops had something on Monday's order file, and a large proportion of the orders were for funeral work. Good stock was used up clean. Orchids, valley, Beauties, roses, carnations and sweet peas were in such demand that it became necessary to call on Philadelphia for help. In the latter part of the week business was rather slow, but there was a little funeral work every day. The hot days have made the cut of carnations, roses and sweet peas shorten up, but there are still lots of outdoor flowers in this market.

Various Notes.

Chas. B. Herr, of Strasburg, Pa., says he is still cutting some good White Perfection, Mrs. Ward and Beacon carnations. The Beacons are fine, both in color and stem, considering the extremely hot weather. In the week ending July 5 he cut 6,000 blooms. In the field he has 14,000 carnation plants of the leading varieties, all looking fine and healthy.

At Rudolf Nagel's, on South West End avenue, the new range of 4,000 feet of glass is all planted with mums. There are 11,000 plants of the best and newest varieties; the foliage looks well and the plants are three feet high. The aster plants are in good shape, but it will be about two weeks before he will start cutting. He has 35,000 geraniums to put in the sand, and also 3,000 plants of the Silver Pink snapdragon for August planting.

At the Keystone Nurseries, on Columbia pike, everything is in up-to-date condition. B. F. Barr says he has been kept rather busy planning for the coming season and getting the place in shape to meet the demands. He has increased his rose stock considerably by adding a number of the new ones, such as Mrs. Charles Russell, Milady, Aaron Ward and Sunburst. He is also giving Mrs. George Shawyer a trial. His plants all look strong and healthy. The mums are doing well and the foliage is good. The aster plants, both indoors and out, are small as yet and it will be two or three weeks before there will be any to cut. The outdoor sweet peas are good, but short-stemmed. He is also cutting some fine German iris.

Visitors: James F. Smith, representing Wm. J. Boas & Co., Philadelphia.

Strong City, Kan.—M. H. Lewis & Co., in common with the other florists of Chase county, have suffered greatly from the drought. A fall of one and one-half inches June 30 was the first rain for forty days.

Club Outings.

The Gardeners' and Florists' Club is planning to have a big time on its annual excursion, which will be held at Chesapeake Beach, August 5. Several hundred members and their friends are expected to take the trip, for which the steamer Dreamland has been chartered.

The Washington Florists' Club will go to the beach by rail and the members will take part in a series of athletic contests with the local club, for which prizes will be awarded the winners.

The committee in charge of the outing consists of J. L. Towner, chairman; Isaac H. Moss, Frederick Bauer, James Boone and Mack Richmond.

July 31 the local club will be the guests of J. G. Harrison & Sons at the big horticultural exhibit that will be held at the Harrison nurseries in Berlin, Md. At the close of the meeting the delegates will leave for Ocean City, Md., to attend the convention of the Maryland Horticultural Society, which opens August 1.

Various Notes.

At the next meeting of the club, July 14, William Feast, chairman of the committee in charge of the floral display in connection with the Maryland week celebration in this city in August, is expected to announce some of his plans for beautifying Baltimore for the occasion.

Henry S. Nagengast has gone out of the florists' business and has rented his plant on Franklin avenue.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

The Market.

June, with its graduations and weddings, has gone for another year, but from beginning to end business was quite good. The demand for cut flowers has been great, but now that July is here and many people are away at the lake, things are slow.

The market is glutted with carnations, which meet with only a slight call, as they are of poor quality and many of them so soft that they can not be used. Roses, too, owing to the excessive heat, are poor in quality and their lasting properties are weakened. Sweet peas, chiefly outdoor grown, are of fairly good quality, but a lot of them are being cut with such short stems that they are almost useless except for funeral designs. Valley is scarce, but what arrives is good. Harrisii and callas are hard to obtain just now. Large quantities of outside candytuft, cosmos, ramblers, etc., are included in the market stock.

Funeral work has been off during the last week and business generally is expected to be quiet at this season.

Various Notes.

Charles E. Fry, of Bernard, N. Y., has just torn down two old greenhouses and is erecting two houses of the Lord & Burnham construction.

J. H. West, Irondequoit, N. Y., will build a Lord & Burnham house early in August.

James Vick's Sons have planted out fifteen acres of their leading varieties of asters and expect to put in another three acres. The young plants are looking healthy and are in splendid condition.

Among the florists appointed on the committee for the grand floral parade, July 8, in connection with the Elks' convention, were George B. Hart, E. P. Wilson, John Dunbar, George F. Crosman, George T. Boucher, A. H. Salter, J. M. Keller and C. H. Vick.

Addison Burnham, of Lord & Burnham Co., and his wife were the guests of his brother, Frank Burnham, at his home in Fairport, N. Y., Sunday, July 6.

Flower day was observed in this city last week. The proceeds, amounting to $1,500, were in excess of last year's.

George B. Hart, the wire design manufacturer, built a wire pergola for use in the floral parade of the Elks' convention.

Most of the florists are closing their places of business on Saturday evening during July and August at 6 o'clock.

Astoria, L. I.—H. Pritchard and wife celebrated their sixty-ninth birthday anniversaries July 4, with the assistance of five sons and daughters, twenty-seven grandchildren and two great-grandchildren, together with friends of the neighborhood. The celebration took place in the old homestead erected thirty years ago. The grandchildren presented them with a gold loving cup, and there were many other presents. The festivities concluded with a wonderful display of fireworks.

CINCINNATI.

The Gateway to the South.

Throughout last week there was an abundance of stock in the market. Toward the end of the week, however, the market tightened considerably. All Sunday's receipts were quickly cleaned up and July 7 there was hardly enough stock to go around. Of course, Monday is the general replenishing day for the retailers, but at that there was not a large quantity of stock for them.

The offerings in the rose market have reached a low point. The quantity of summer roses is limited, while the number of others coming in is decreasing each day. Some blooms from the new and young stock are received. Easter lilies were more than plentiful the early part of last week, but toward the end of the week the cut shortened so sharply that on the last days there were not enough for the demand. Carnations are about on their last legs. The receipts are small, both in respect to numbers and size of blooms. The white and lighter shades have been meeting with a fairly good market. Gladioli prove good property and sell well. Hardy hydrangeas enjoy a fair call. The same is true of pond lilies. Other offerings include coreopsis, cornflower, feverfew and the like.

The supply of greens is ample, with the exception of smilax. This ran short toward the close of last week. Some fine plumosus is arriving from the south. New leucothoe is in the market.

Various Notes.

The annual meeting of the Florists' Society will be held Monday evening, July 14, at the club rooms. The election of officers will be held. The florists' picnic will be held at Coney, Thursday, July 17.

C. E. Critchell starts this week to remodel his quarters. During the last week Mr. Critchell received his first shipment of new leucothoe.

The Cincinnati Cut Flower Exchange is closing each day at 5 p. m. during July and August.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Fries leave this week on an extended tour through the west.

Geo. Tromey has gone to Martinsville for ten days' stay.

Miss C. Bossmeyer, of C. E. Critchell's, is spending her vacation at Connersville, Ind., and Batavia, O.

Among last week's visitors were Wm. Lodder, Hamilton, O.; B. H. Klus, Anderson, Ind.; W. Gerlach, Jr., Piqua, O., and S. A. Swan, of Tennessee.

I regret to report the death of the wife of R. C. Witterstaetter, the enterprising young Price Hill florist.

CARNATIONS.
READY NOW.
We do a very large business each season on carnation cuttings and field-grown plants because we never ship out stock we would not be willing to plant on our own benches. The field-grown plants are ready now. This is not surplus stock, left after selecting the stock for our own use, but is stock grown especially for sale to the trade. If we did not know it was good stock, strong, stocky, well branched, and free from disease, we should not offer it for sale. Last year's customers will be back—and this is an invitation to those who have not yet bought here to order of us this year.

"PEONIES FOR PLEASURE."
This book of "Peonies for Pleasure" gives information on peony history, soil and plants to use, how and when to plant, fertilizers and how to apply, and describes the most extensive planting of really valuable peonies ever gathered together under the sun; describes old and new as well as the plebeian and aristocrat of the peony family. If you want information on the plant that stands next to the rose in beauty, that is practically known to the amateur as simply a red, white and pink peony, then send for "Peonies for Pleasure."
We also issue a special wholesale price list of peonies for fall sales, 1913. Send for both of these booklets.
Our catalogue of everything you need mailed on application. Write for it today.

"PEONIES FOR PLEASURE."
This book of "Peonies for Pleasure" gives information on peony history, soil and plants to use, how and when to plant, fertilizers and how to apply, and describes the most extensive planting of really valuable peonies ever gathered together under the sun; describes old and new as well as the plebeian and aristocrat of the peony family. If you want information on the plant that stands next to the rose in beauty, that is practically known to the amateur as simply a red, white and pink peony, then send for "Peonies for Pleasure."

Album OF Designs

[SECOND EDITION]

It sold so much better than was expected that the First Edition, intended to last a year, was sold out in eight months.

This Album was published in response to many requests from Florists who felt the need for an up-to-date book to be used in taking orders for Funeral Designs, Wedding Decorations and Bouquets, Table Decorations and all cut flower work where it is not practicable to show the customer the finished article as it will be when ready for use. With this Album you can show the finished work, in beautifully printed pictures.

The Album has been THOROUGHLY REVISED for the Second Edition and contains a large number of designs not shown in the wonderfully successful First Edition.

NINETY-SIX PAGES, nearly 300 designs and decorations, beautifully printed on heavy glazed paper, handsomely bound in a cover that will stand wear.

The price has not been raised for the Second Edition, although everybody says the First Edition was worth more money, and this is a better book in every way.

Greenhouse Heating.

SUBSCRIBERS are invited to write the Editor of this Department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. But please do not ask The Review to make a choice of apparatus for you. The greenhouse heating equipment advertised in this paper is, we believe, the best for the trade to buy, and each article the best in the special field of its adaptation.

PIPING A MICHIGAN HOUSE.

I have a greenhouse 20x64 feet and eleven feet three inches to the ridge, with one glass gable and with two feet of glass in the sides. The side walls are five feet high and are double boarded, with paper between the boards. It is to be heated with hot water. Will you kindly give me your idea as to the best plan for piping this house to maintain a temperature of 60 degrees when the outside temperature is 10 degrees below zero? The fire grate is 18x30 inches. J. I. H.

To heat a house 20x64 feet, with two feet of glass in each side wall, to 60 degrees, will require about 600 square feet of radiating surface. To supply this, run a 2½-inch flow pipe on each wall plate and another under the ridge. For returns use three 2-inch pipes on each wall, or under each side bench, and five 2-inch returns under the other benches. Run the flows with a slight fall and connect the expansion tank at the highest point.

A GREENHOUSE AND LEAN-TO.

Kindly tell me the right size of boiler, the size and number of flows and where to place them, and the correct size and number of returns to heat a greenhouse 28¾x50 feet, seven feet high at the sides and fourteen feet five inches high to the ridge, with four feet of glass in each wall and with glass in both gable ends. I wish to be able to maintain a temperature of 55 degrees in zero weather, in the climate of the Willamette valley, Oregon. Also give me instructions for piping a lean-to, 6x50, to be used as a propagating house. The outer wall of the lean-to is five feet high. The fuel used will be wood. B. B.

To heat the house described to 55 degrees in zero weather, about 500 square feet of radiation will be needed, but for economy it is suggested that the boiler should have a rating of 750 to 850

THE FUEL MARKET.

"Decided and growing uneasiness as to the future supply of coal has been the main characteristic of the coal trade for the week," says one of the authorities in that business. "This is particularly true in all of the section east of the Indiana-Ohio line. West of that line, the people are still indifferent to their coal supply except as they have need of certain eastern coals for highly specialized uses. The uneasiness expresses itself in the fear of a coal shortage a couple of months hence. This fear arises from a belief in a car shortage, a belief in strikes and a belief in a demand for these coals in excess of present productive capacity.

"The facts are these: Smokeless coal is in broad demand. Its entrance into the export market naturally has shortened the supply at home. Those who have it for sale advanced the price in the spring. The buyers of it first tried to beat down the price and, finding that impossible, came to conclude that the producers had good reason for the advance. Thus there spread a report, which grew steadily, that smokeless was going to be scarce. Talk of a strike among the miners intensified this belief. The actual calling of a small strike last week threw a good many buyers into a panic.

"The people, fearing a shortage, have come to provide against it. As they provide against it, they buy more coal and thus actual buying, coupled with fear of a shortage, has produced a mighty strong situation. It is said that this anticipation of disaster has added twenty-five per cent to the volume of lake coal moving to July 1.

"In addition, the railroads have been letting it be known that their rolling stock is in none too good shape. They say that, even now, cars are short.

"One thing seems apparent: The extraordinary buying has done a great deal to remove the danger of a car and coal shortage. The danger is that it will also take the edge off the fall and winter market.

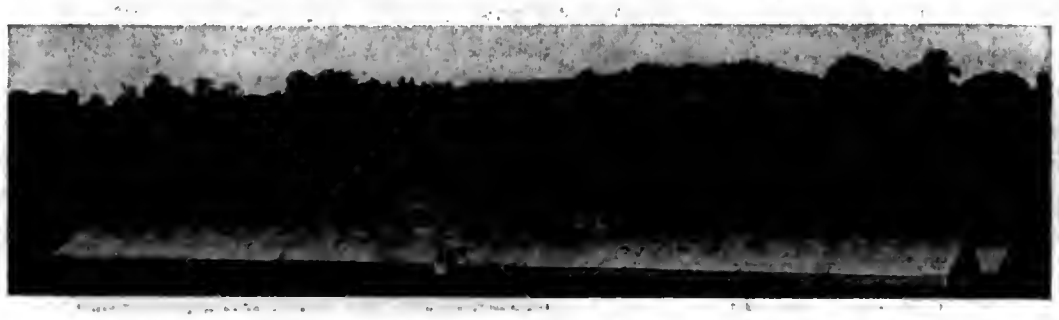
"In the west, the intense situation expressed in the east is not at all in evidence. The buyers are taking in some of the eastern coal to have it on hand. Aside from that they are doing nothing to guard against either a coal or a car shortage. They fear neither and do not seem to put much faith in reports that such things are going to be bothersome."

STEAM FOR KENTUCKY RANGE.

Enclosed you will find a plan of five houses which I intend to erect this fall. No. 1 is 17x105 and the others are each 14¾x120. The houses are seven feet high to the gutter and are all connected, without partitions. How many pipes, and of what size, will be needed to heat them with low pressure steam to 55 or 60 degrees in zero weather? There is no glass in the sides, but only in the south gable ends. I have two boilers under consideration, both of the same rating, but one has a grate 30x41 and the other 36x29. Which would it be better to buy? Which is the better method for quick circulation of air, to have the ventilators hung from the ridge or opening sideways? My boiler pit is eight feet deep and the returns will be at least two feet above the boiler. J. E. R.

It will be well to run a 2-inch main a foot or so under the ridge of each house. For the wider house use five or six 1¼-inch returns, and for the narrow houses four or five returns. The larger number of returns would be necessary in the houses having one wall exposed. Part of the returns may be on the walls and the others under the benches. The hanging of the ventilators at the ridge is most common. It will be well to have ventilators upon both sides of the houses. The larger grate will be desirable, as the boiler should be good for twenty horse-power for economical heating.

AN ALABAMA CARNATION HOUSE.



I have a carnation house 21x50, and wish to heat it with hot water. I am figuring on purchasing a six horse-power, upright steam boiler for this house, but instead of using steam I wish to prepare the boiler for hot water, which I

Do you want true heating values for your money? Many florists, to their sorrow, have made the mistake of buying cast iron boilers, which, because of their ratings, appeared to be cheaper than the Kroeschell boiler.

The extravagant ratings of cast iron boilers are misleading, and have been the cause of much disappointment and serious trouble to many growers. The fuel waste is enormous when cast iron boilers are used for commercial purposes, such as greenhouse heating.

Do not make a mistake when selecting your new boiler; get a Kroeschell and you will never be disappointed.

During the cold snap of 1912 we fired every three hours during the night; I find it a saving in fuel to fire often. I have the Kroeschell Boiler six years and the only expense is one set of grates. No other but a plate boiler for me. (Signed) H. M. TOTMAN. Jan., 1912. Randolph, Vt.

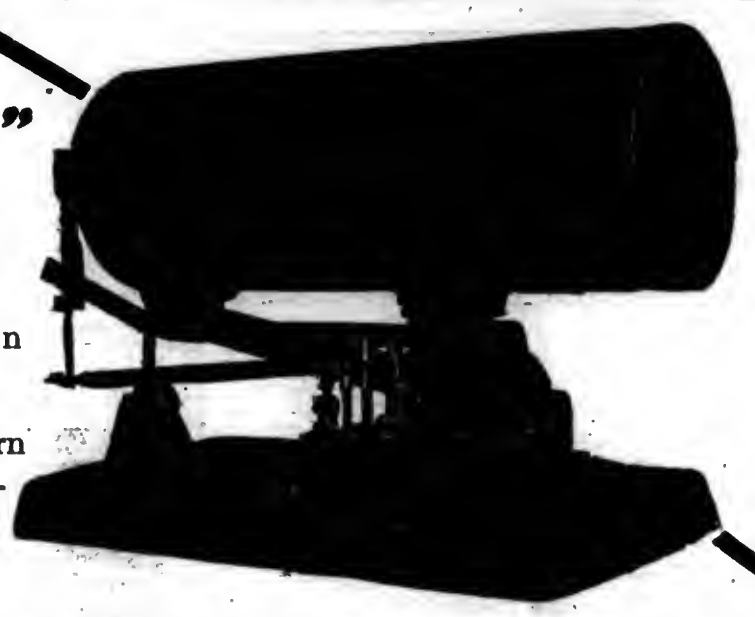
presume would be possible. Will you kindly inform me how to arrange the boiler, heating pipe, connections, etc., for this purpose? Would this boiler heat with hot water a house 21x100 feet, which is the size to which I expect to extend the house? H. A. C.



The boiler mentioned should be amply large enough to heat the small house, and will answer for one 21x100 feet if the grate is two feet in diameter. It can be used with hot water if it can be placed in a pit so that the top will be at least nearly as low as the returns; otherwise a closed system or mercury circulator must be used.

To heat the small house, use a 2½-inch flow pipe. Carry it up to a point about two feet below the level of the ridge and then run it with a fall of one inch in ten feet to the farther end of the house. There drop the flow pipe down, divide it into two 2-inch pipes and with each of these feed a coil of three 2-inch returns, running either way from the middle of the end of the house back on the walls to the boiler. At the highest part of the flow attach a 5-gallon expansion tank by means of a ¾-inch pipe.

WHITEWASHED HEATING PIPES.

Will you kindly tell me whether it would do any harm to whitewash heating pipes? I mean, would the heating capacity of the pipes be affected? I can make the house much brighter or lighter by whitewashing the walls and the piping. C. A.

While a thick coat of whitewash would be objectionable, as it would in a measure serve as an insulation, a thin wash would do no appreciable harm, as it would not materially hinder the radiation from the surface of the pipe. A rough surface tends to increase the radiation, and hence a coat of whitewash would answer better than one of paint or anything that would give a smooth surface.

CYPRESS FOR FARM USE.

The trade will be interested in knowing that much cypress, which is almost universally accepted as the best wood for greenhouse construction, is employed in the construction of silos for storing green feed. The farmer puts the wood to many uses, in all of which it gives good service. Its lasting properties fit it well for curbs, when material is needed that resists decay. Watering troughs for farm stock and feed troughs for sheds and barns are made of it; likewise troughs or flumes for conveying water from wells or springs. Resistance to decay fits it for stable floors and timbers near the ground, as well as for fences, gates and especially for fence posts and telephone poles. It is one of the best available woods for picket fences, because it shows paint well and holds it for many years.

How Many Times Did You Put In Coal Last Winter?

Every time you heard it rattling down the chute it made you scowl and think of "the high cost of living."

Such scowl-thoughts are not pleasant.

Are you going to keep on buying all that coal and thinking unpleasant thoughts at that rate; or are you just about ready to do something about it?

Of course the main trouble is with your boiler. It's the real reason for 95% of heating kicks. Throw out your coal-devouring boiler now and get a Burnham.

Get a Burnham because it is a greenhouse boiler made especially for greenhouse work. It works for economy as no other cast iron greenhouse boiler works; because no other cast iron boiler is made especially for greenhouse work.

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

Business continues good for this time of the year and the cut flower stock seems to be about all taken up when the doors close every Saturday night. Roses are deteriorating in quality and are opening too fast. Carnations are only fair. Gladioli are in the lead and sell well. Outdoor sweet peas are short-stemmed, but the flowers are good and sell well.

Various Notes.

Samuel Murray was busy last week decorating for dinners and receptions, and he says that business is as good as could be expected at this season.

Henry Kusik & Co. report that their wire work and supply department is keeping them busy. The cut flower business holds up well for this time of the year.

The Alpha Floral Co. had a most attractive window display for July 4. The display included a flag six feet long, made of immortelles.

The Geo. M. Kellogg Flower & Plant Co. reports that business is good and that cut roses of the new stock are being received. This firm gave a picnic to the employees last week, at Penn Valley park.

Among the visitors of last week were James M. Brown, representing the Lord & Burnham Co.; Mr. Austerlitz, of the Reuhl Moulding Co., Cincinnati; Harry Balsley, of the Detroit Flower Pot Co., Detroit, Mich.; Ed Harvey, formerly with the Rock Flower Co., in this city.

W. J. B.

MILWAUKEE.

The Milwaukee Florists' Club, instead of holding a flower show, will arrange a large exhibit at the state fair this year. The large upper floor of the concrete grand stand has been placed at the disposal of the florists by members of the state fair board. The exhibit will be arranged after the style of a conservatory, and will consist mainly of cut flowers and designs, although there also will be a display of plants. If the fair exhibition is a success, the Florists' Club will make arrangements for a larger exhibit in 1914.

The August F. Kellner Co. has secured a permit to build greenhouses and sheds at 1358 Humboldt avenue at an estimated cost of $2,500. This is taken as indicating "good business" in the florists' line.

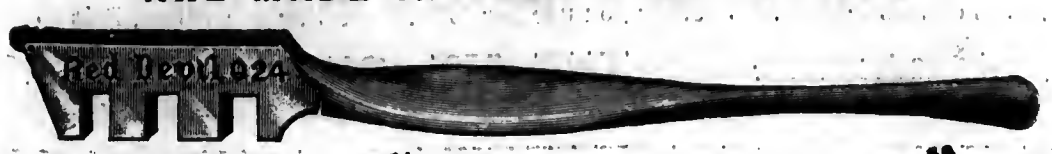
The Market.

The extremely hot weather has made a decided difference in business conditions, aside from the poorer quality of the stock. Sweet peas are now selling at 5 cents to 25 cents per bunch; last week the Woolworth stores sold good outdoor stock for 5 cents per bunch. Carnations are small and are not much called for, except for funeral work. Roses are of good quality for this season, but the extreme heat brings them out in a few hours. Outdoor planting is about at an end, the season being a little longer this year than usual.

The number of weddings was the largest ever registered for June, according to the records of the bureau. This, in itself, should be the means of more business, but, on the whole, the total business was less than usual, as nothing more than a small bunch was ordered for most of the weddings.

Graduations have fallen off badly, for at one time we were kept busy the whole week. The use of flowers at the schools has been discouraged by the men higher up, as it causes considerable confusion and often bad feeling, when some receive flowers and others do not. That condition should be overcome at once. One retailer went to the trouble of sending a man to the hall to distribute the flowers, relieving the school itself of the trouble. This same man, having many bunches for the class, even gave small bunches to the few pupils who had none. Even with this trouble overcome, the officials have discouraged the use of flowers until the children themselves do not expect them. Improper addressing had considerable to do with many mistakes which took place. Though the boxes were addressed, some of the flowers had nothing to show for whom they were intended. The flowers would be removed from the box, so as to have them in readiness, but at the moment of presentation no directions would be found on them. This, I believe, had more to do with the fashion being discouraged than any other one thing. Confusion and mistakes followed, which reflected on those in charge, and the only thing they could do was to discontinue the custom entirely. The proper way, I have found, is to address the box and also tie the card and address on the flowers; then, when the box is separated from the flowers, the directions are still available.



Various Notes.

Building will now be in order. S. A. Anderson will erect another house for begonias. Joe Streit's success with begonias and the increasing demand for them has made them exceedingly profitable plants for Mr. Anderson. The William Scott Co. will also erect another greenhouse, 175 feet long, to be devoted entirely to young begonia stock. R. A. S.

THE CARNATION SUPPORT CO., CONNERSVILLE, IND.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

The Market.

The extremely hot weather has practically paralyzed business. The wealthy class of customers are leaving for their summer homes in large numbers. Funeral work is about the only business of any account at present. Carnations are a drug on the market. Roses are only fair and the demand for them is meager. Centaureas, sweet peas and larkspurs are good sellers during the warm weather. There was no extra business for July 4 and most of the flower shops were closed all day.

Various Notes.

N. F. Higgins sold fireworks at his State street store, where he does a big business each year in that line.

Miss May French spent July 4 in Worcester, Mass.

The street fakers are selling sweet peas and carnations at a low figure these days.

Mark Aitken made a business trip to Boston, June 30.

The leading florists' stores will close at 5 p. m. every day excepting Saturdays during July and August. The employees of the various stores are highly elated over the announcement.

Advertising forms close TUESDAY

The latest hour at which advertisements, or changes of advertisements, can be accepted is 5 p. m. Tuesday.

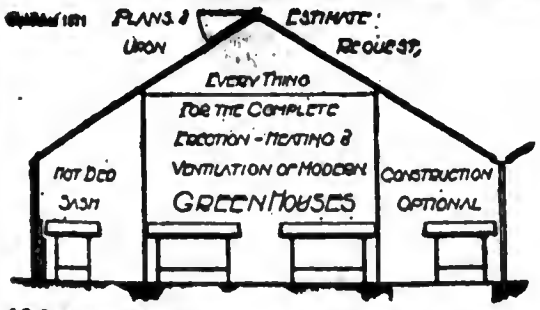
Eureka, Kan.—L. Vanhaverbeke, proprietor of the Eureka Greenhouses, is adding two new houses, 25x80 and 25x60, and is also remodeling three old, narrow houses and placing them under one roof. Mr. Vanhaverbeke purchased J. W. Riggle's establishment four years ago and has been conducting the business since then.

"TANK GRADE" CYPRESS

No other lumber manufactured is subjected to such close inspection and is graded so carefully as Cypress. It is the only variety of wood in which there is such a class as "TANK GRADE." Other woods have Firsts and Seconds, but "TANK GRADE" Cypress represents a choice, handpicked, selected quality—the very cream of Firsts.

For greenhouse construction, those who are accounted reliable among the contractors use none other than "TANK GRADE." Of course they put in "pecky" for standards and benches, but when it comes to sash-bars, sash, hot beds, cold frames, tanks, tubs, plant boxes, etc., it is Cypress, "TANK GRADE," from ridge-pole to foundation.

And you will do well to follow the lead and advice of the experienced contractor.



BOOKS STILL FREE

Those Cypress booklets are as free as ever. Volume 3 is about greenhouses; Vol. 4 is the Barn Book, with plans and specifications. Write for one or a dozen of them.

AMERICAN BEAUTY ROSES

BEST KEEPING—BEST SHIPPING—AND IN EVERY WAY THE MOST SATISFACTORY AND MOST PROFITABLE SUMMER ROSE

If you get them direct from us—direct from the greenhouses, not alone do you get lower prices, but you get them fresh. Absolutely fresh.

Every dealer knows that every time roses are handled they are damaged. That if they can get them with as little delay and as little handling as possible from the time they are cut, they are sure to be better.

But one handling here. From our cooling room direct to the dealer. No delay—no repacking—no double handling. If within 200 miles you can have them the day they are cut. If 500 miles you can have them early next day.

Try this way for a few shipments, and you will never go back to the old way.

Note carefully these prices, and compare them with what you have been paying.

AMERICAN SWEET PEA SOCIETY

FIFTH ANNUAL EXHIBITION.

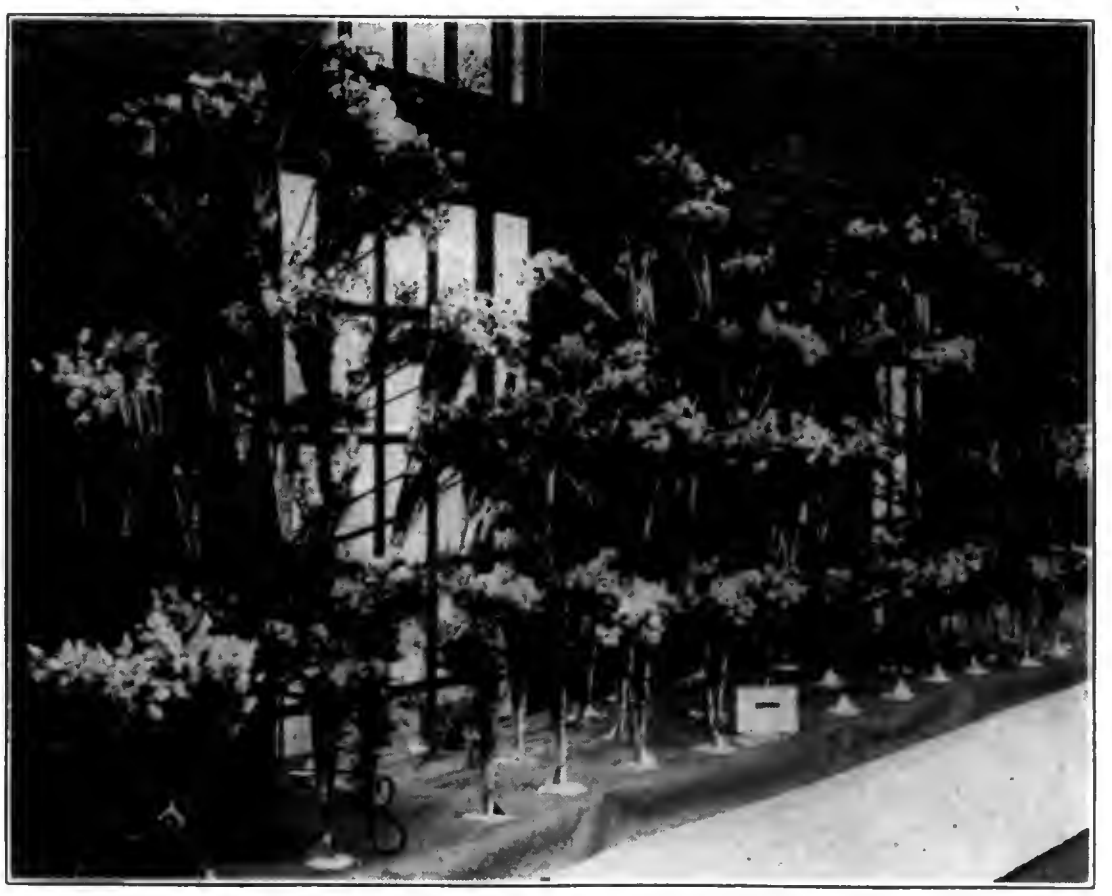
A Superb Display.

Grave doubts were entertained in advance as to whether the exhibition of the American Sweet Pea Society held in Horticultural hall, Boston, July 12 and 13, would be at all a creditable one. Massachusetts had been experiencing a long drought and for a whole week in advance of the show the thermometer climbed to 90 degrees and over, but the flowers averaged of much better quality than a year ago. The flowers from Newport, Lenox and Bar Harbor, as usual, were of grand quality. Nearby growers made a rather small showing, R. & J. Farquhar & Co. being an exception. More flowers were staged than a year ago and popular interest in sweet peas seemed greater than ever.

The Business Meeting.

The annual meeting of the society was held in one of the basement halls July 12. The attendance was good, although it was hard to drag members away from the exhibition. J. K. M. L. Farquhar, who should have made the welcoming address on behalf of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, was called out of town prior to the meeting. President Sim was in the chair and in a few remarks said he had done all he could to put the society on a higher plane and believed he had succeeded in some measure.

J. H. Pepper, recording secretary, read a letter from A. C. Beal relative to the society's sweet pea trials being conducted at Cornell University. They have 200 trials this year, against 370 in 1912. A bulletin will be ready about the end of the year, covering fully all these trials. During the present year they tried 150 varieties started in 3-inch pots and 100 were sown outdoors; all had done well considering the rather unfavorable growing season. This report was accepted and Prof. Beal given a vote of thanks for same.



Secretary H. A. Bunyard, in his report, said the exhibition was decidedly the best the society has yet held. The society steadily is growing in strength, both numerically and financially, and has received sufficient guaranties to clear off all indebtedness, with a balance on hand.

An invitation was read from the Horticultural Society of New York asking the society to meet there at the time of the June show in 1914 and offering $200 toward the premium list. The invitation was accepted. A letter also was read from John Young on behalf of the projected spring show in New York, March 21 to 28, 1914, stating that $350 would be set aside for sweet peas. A letter received from the directors of the Panama-Pacific Exposition inviting the society to meet in San Francisco in 1915 was laid over a year for consideration.

When the election of officers was called the Rev. W. T. Hutchins, in a eulogistic address, nominated Wm. Sim for a third term. Mr. Sim did not want another year of the presidency, but the meeting would not take no for an answer, so he gracefully accepted and promised to do all he could in the future as he had in the past. For vice-president, I. S. Hendrickson nominated Arthur Kirby, of New York. W. J. Stewart seconded and Mr. Kirby was elected by acclamation. M. C. Ebel moved the election of H. A. Bunyard for secretary and S. J. Goddard that of Arthur T. Boddington for treasurer. Both were chosen by a unanimous vote, as was J. H. Pepper for recording secretary. William H. Duckham was chosen to fill the vacancy on the executive committee.

Geo. W. Kerr read his paper, "A Few Notes on Sweet Peas," which was followed by a short discussion.

On motion of H.. A. Bunyard the Massachusetts Horticultural Society was thanked for courtesies and the meeting adjourned.

Arthur T. Boddington's Exhibit at the Boston Sweet Pea Show.

The Exhibition.

Outstanding features of the show were the grand displays from R. & J. Farquhar & Co., W. Atlee Burpee & Co. and Arthur T. Boddington in the competition for the C. C. Morse cup; the numerous displays from private gardeners for the various special prizes, and the retailers' work. The only drawback to the latter was that the flowers were practically all shriveled up on the first evening, but some pretty hampers, baskets and bouquets were shown. Amateurs and children each made good showing and competition was keen for the numerous prizes offered by the Massachusetts Horticultural Society. The prize list follows, with the names of the winning sorts in all the more important classes:

Notable Exhibits.

Only one entry, a vase of Dorothy Eckford, appeared in the grandiflora classes, showing that this type is now almost obsolete.

The classes for amateurs were well competed for, also those in which prizes for children were offered by the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston.

The exhibit of R. & J. Farquhar & Co., which easily won the C. C. Morse cup for the seedsmen's finest display, was the greatest attraction in the show. It again showed James Farquhar to be a master hand as a decorator. It occupied the center of the main hall and was in the form of a circular garden, entered from four sides, beneath arbors trellised with Countess Spencer sweet peas. All flowers were in small vases, which kept them fresh. In the center a fountain was playing, in the pool stood some aquatic plants of a light, airy nature, and the raised border surrounding it was charmingly arranged with sweet peas, the groundwork here and in the outer raised borders being low pans of Selaginella denticulata. Some of the best flowers in this display were Barbara, Etta Dyke, Moneymaker, Mrs. Hardcastle Sykes, Thomas Stevenson, Aurora Spencer, Frank Dolby, Beatrice Spencer and Primrose Spencer.

The most extensive display of sweet peas, which included 120 varieties, was that put up by Geo. W. Kerr for W. Atlee Burpee & Co. in his usual masterly manner. Long bamboos at the back contained Helen Lewis, Scarlet Empress, America Spencer, Countess Spencer, Vermilion Brilliant, Charles Foster, Thomas Stevenson, White Spencer, Mrs. Sankey Spencer, Scarlet Emperor, Marie Corelli and Primrose Spencer. Other fine varieties in this collection were: Irish Belle, Doris Usher, Lady Evelyn Eyre, King Edward Spencer, Mrs. Routzahn Spencer, Florence Morse Spencer, Florence Nightingale, Barbara, Frank Dolby, Minnie Furnell, Dorothy, Asta Ohn Spencer, Helen Grosvenor, Margaret Madison, Perdita, John Ingman, Radiance, Beatrice Spencer, St. George and Maud Holmes. A new salmon rose seedling, Illuminator, was awarded a first-class certificate. The group received the gold medal offered for the most meritorious display of sweet peas.

Arthur T. Boddington, who received third prize for the best seedsman's display, had a superb lot of flowers which were fresh until the show closed. Unfortunately, these were not named and thus lost most of their educational value.

Miscellaneous Exhibits.

In addition to sweet peas, there were quite a number of other interesting exhibits. R. & J. Farquhar & Co. showed a large vase of Lilium myriophyllum, also the new scarlet, L. Thayeræ, another Chinese variety. From John Lewis Childs, Floral Park, N. Y., came some fine gladioli, including Niagara, Mrs. F. Pendleton, Baron Hulot and other good things. B. Hammond Tracy also had a nice show of gladioli. J. T. Butterworth had a fine specimen Epidendrum prismatocarpum. Julius Roehrs Co. had a table of orchids, as also did W. A. Manda. Mrs. J. L. Gardner, Wm. fully flowered plant of the golden racemed Platyclinis latifolia, which was med Platyclinis latifolia, which was worthy of a cultural certificate rather than a gratuity. She also showed vases of the pink Statice Suworowi. F. J. Dolansky had an excellent lot of cattleyas, including Dowiana, gigas, Mossiæ and Mendelli. Mrs. Lester Leland had an extensive display of tuberous begonias and Mrs. E. M. Gill a nice general display.

The Eastern Nurseries had a large bank of herbaceous perennials, Col. F. Mason, hollyhocks; Dr. Kennedy, Japanese iris. There were also large displays of sweet peas from W. Whitman, M. Sullivan gardener; Peter Fisher, whose flowers were as fine as the carnations he usually shows, and several others. Fruits and vegetables were both well shown.

Entertainment and Visitors.

Members of the American Sweet Pea Society and other visitors to the number of sixty were entertained to dinner given by the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston, at the Copley Square hotel, July 12. Short addresses were made by President Sim, W. J. Kennedy, president of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club; Geo. B. Dorr, proprietor of the Mount Desert Nurseries; Arthur Kirby, A. E. Thatcher, Thomas Roland, W. J. Stewart, W. P. Rich and others. A pleasant evening was passed.

A few visitors noted were Arthur Kirby, A. T. de la Mare, J. H. Pepper, H. A. Bunyard, New York; Geo. E. Baldwin, James Stuart, Mamaroneck, N. Y.; A. E. Thatcher, Edward Kirk, Geo. B. Dorr, Bar Harbor, Me.; Edwin Jenkins, F. Heeremans, Geo. Foulsham, Lenox, Mass.; Geo. W. Kerr, Doylestown, Pa.; W. A. Manda, South Orange, N. J.; Wm. Frag, J. Robertson, A. Meikle, C. M. Bogholt, Newport, R. I.; W. Duckham, M. C. Ebel, C. H. Totty, Madison, N. J., and I. S. Hendrickson, Floral Park, N. Y. W. N. Craig.

PORTLAND SWEET PEA SHOW.

Portland, famous as the home of the rose, has also the Oregon Sweet Pea Society, which held its third annual exhibition July 8 and 9. The society includes both amateur and professional growers in its membership; the trade took a conspicuous part in the affair and the show was the most successful yet held, both in number of exhibits and variety of blooms. There were seventy-five entries, comprising 35,000 stems, and in many cases the competition was so keen that the judges, L. G. Pfunder, Albert Rahn and E. T. Mische, had much difficulty in reaching a decision.

William Sim.
(Reelected President of the American Sweet Pea Society.)

The awards to commercial growers were as follows:

Best general exhibit in vases without foliage—H. Clemens, Newberg, first, gold medal; Routledge Seed & Floral Co., second, silver medal.

Best table decoration, other than sweet pea foliage allowed—Clarke Bros., first; Martin & Forbes Co., second.

Best basket of sweet peas, other foliage allowed—Max M. Smith, first; H. Clemens, second.

Best floral piece, either wire design or set piece—Max M. Smith, first; H. Clemens, second; special award, American flag, new design, Routledge Seed & Floral Co.

Among the special displays that of the Routledge Seed & Floral Co. was the most admired. It was a sweet pea representation of the stars and stripes, and the new design recently approved by Congress was used in the arrangement of the stars.

Capt. George Pope's seedling won the gold medal for the best new variety and was named Multnomah Spencer.

A significant feature of the show was that there were no entries in the class for grandiflora sweet peas. The Spencers have supplanted the old type.

Committeemen in charge of the show were: R. R. Routledge, chairman; J. T. Bacher, secretary. Executive committee—O. M. Plummer, Captain Pope, Mrs. Stella Durham, Arthur Bowman, H. A. Cushing, R. W. Gill. Showroom and decoration committee—J. Dossche, James Forbes, Eugene O'Hara and J. J. Butzer.

A FEW NOTES ON SWEET PEAS.

[A paper by George W. Kerr, of Doylestown, Pa., read before the American Sweet Pea Society at Boston, July 12, 1913.]

When the evolution of the sweet pea is mentioned our thoughts must immediately go back to the late Henry Eckford, for, had he not given us that fine old pink variety, Prima Donna, it may be that the Spencer type would not yet have been evolved, for Countess Spencer came to us as a sport, or, to follow the new term used by the Dutch botanist, Hugo de Vries, mutation, from Prima Donna, and as we all know this was the forerunner of the beautiful new race of Spencers, many of which are now the results of careful hybridizing, while others are simply sports or mutations from existing sorts.

Our Debt to Mendel.

I know I am safe in asserting that had not the Mendelian laws of hybridizing been made public, the evolution of the sweet pea would not have been so far advanced, for Mendel has taught us that it is useless to expect results in the first generation, that no matter how unpromising the flowers may appear, the seed should be carefully saved and sown again, and then in the second generation we may be rewarded by the appearance of some new and improved forms or types according to what we have been aiming for, and I know that previous to the knowledge of this law hundreds of crosses were thrown away every year instead of retaining them for the breaks which would naturally appear in the next generation.

To those who have the patience and the garden room to spare, for seedlings in the course of two or three years do take up a lot of space if the hybridizer is making many crosses, the raising of new varieties is a most interesting pastime, but it is well to count the cost ere starting, as no results can possibly be attained until the second generation; that is, two years from the date of making the cross, and two or three years more must elapse ere the grower can satisfy himself that the stock is truly fixed.

According to the varieties which have been mated, something fine may appear the first year. That is what is termed in Mendelism first generation, or F.1, but the variety is never fixed and always breaks up in F.2, or second generation, and I was greatly surprised to observe quite a number of new sweet peas advertised for registration in the trade papers early this spring as first generation selections, when it is an established and indisputable fact that no variety is fixed in the first generation.

Drought, Not Disease.

Has the sweet pea reached its zenith, or are there new forms and colors yet to be evolved by the specialist? Judging by the introductions of the last few years, which include such magnificent novelties as Elfrida Pearson, Stirling Stent, Thos. Stevenson, Charles Foster, Prince George, Orchid, Decorator and Edith Taylor, just to mention a few, the sweet pea is still in its infancy, and we may hopefully look forward to be yet further delighted with marvelous new shades or types, but so much has been said and written lately about sweet pea diseases that if we would believe all we read on the subject, the days of the sweet pea are numbered. Now I, for one, do not believe this to be the case, for, having been in touch with sweet peas practically all my life, I have only observed isolated instances of disease; nowhere have I ever seen it in the form of a scourge. About this time, in some sections of Pennsylvania, we lose plants wholesale, but my observations have led me to the conclusion that this is simply due to extreme heat and drought, and it is worth noting that fall planted peas are not liable to go off as early in the season as those sown in the spring, this being undoubtedly due to the fact that the former have made better and, in most instances, deeper root growth, the plants being therefore more able to withstand extreme heat and drought.

The Streak Disease.

This drying up of the vines I have often heard called blight, but it is simply, as I have already stated, the effects of continued dry weather and extreme heat. Therefore, when I mentioned disease I had in mind "streak," Thielavia Basicola, which has troubled so many growers in England.

The majority of the scientists who have studied streak disease seem to have arrived at the conclusion that errors in manuring and watering were the cause of the trouble. While located in England, where I grew sweet peas on a large scale for exhibition purposes, I have in some seasons had many rows of plants flooded for several days in succession, during excessive rainfalls, and yet no bad effects followed, this being doubtless due to perfect drainage and deep trenching. This fact, therefore, leads me to the conclusion that the wrong use of manures may be the source of the trouble. We are told that all nitrogenous manures must be withheld from the sweet pea, for, as it belongs to the leguminosæ family of plants, all of which are capable of assimilating the free nitrogen of the atmosphere, it is unnatural to feed it nitrates, as by so doing the nitrogen-gathering bacteria in the root nodules die of inanition and the plant is therefore susceptible to disease. Therefore, where disease has prevailed it is well to avoid the too free use of farmyard manure. If the soil must have humus, apply the dung to the previous crop, or use it only in a thoroughly rotted condition, as in that state most of the nitrogen will previously have been liberated.

SWEET PEA TRIALS AT CORNELL.

[A report by A. C. Beal, presented to the American Sweet Pea Society at Boston, July 12, 1913.]

At this time it may be desirable to note the progress made in the sweet pea trials. This work was undertaken in the autumn of 1909, when plantings were made for the purpose of determining whether it is feasible to plant sweet peas in the fall. The results of this work are reported in Bulletin No. 301. The testing of varieties has covered four seasons. During this period a large number of varieties have been grown each year. These have not all been distinct, for a number of varieties have been grown every year for the purposes of comparison. The number of varieties grown each year is as follows:

1911	435
1912	370
1913	200

When we began our studies of sweet peas, it was decided to make a thorough study of the evolution of the sweet pea, and for this purpose a large number of the older varieties were grown. These have now been dropped from the trials, which explains in large measure the smaller number of varieties grown during the last season. Each year careful and complete notes have been taken of all the varieties, which give us, in the case of those varieties grown for comparative purposes, a record of the behavior of varieties in different seasons. In the case of the novelties, however, the most of them have only been grown one season.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Amaryllis.

If amaryllis plants are still in the greenhouses, they should be shielded from the direct rays of the sun, and they will require less water and make up much finer bulbs if plunged in coal ashes, leaves or some other material. They should also be freely syringed to keep mealy bug and red spider in check. Use a spray nozzle on the hose occasionally and direct the force against the upper portions of the bulbs, where mealy bugs love to congregate. As greenhouses get much overheated at this season, particularly when they are small, it is an excellent plan to plunge the plants in partly decayed leaves in coldframes. Raise the sashes a few inches above them and leave them open all the time. Give sufficient shade to prevent the foliage from burning, and spray freely during hot weather. Liquid manure should be given at least once a week and be sure the plants do not get dry at the root. It is astonishing what grand bulbs can be built up in two or three months under this treatment.

Do not get the common, but utterly erroneous idea, that as soon as amaryllises have flowered they need little further attention. As a matter of fact, it is the culture they receive now which will build up the bulbs which will produce grand spikes next winter and spring. It is months too early to think of any resting.

Pansies.

Millions of pansies are sold each year, and every season seems to add to the army of purchasers of them. Their easy culture, hardiness, persistent blooming qualities and wonderful range of colors all tend to popularize them, and there are few buyers of plants who can resist a nicely flowered basket of pansies. The time to sow pansies must depend more or less on location. In some latitudes strong plants can be had if seed is sown as late as the first part of September, but in the more northerly states, where conditions are most favorable for the culture of these flowers, from the middle of July until August 10 is a suitable time to make the main sowing. As a general rule, I find the last week in July a good time to sow.

Secure a good strain of seed, such as Giant Trimardeau, in one of the first-class assortments offered by a number of specialists. Do not purchase seed because it is cheap; it will only mean an inferior grade of flowers, and if you want to tempt buyers, large flowers, well blotched, of good substance and containing attractive colors, are needed. If you want to get the best possible germination, sow the seeds broadcast in coldframes in light, fairly rich compost; old hotbed manure, with leafmold and some sand added, is much to their liking. Scatter a light covering of soil over the seeds; water and shade with board shutters at first, later with cheesecloth. Do not, on any account, let direct sunshine play on the seed bed. Keep a little close until the seedlings peep, but not a moment longer. Anything like stuffiness in hot weather will quickly start the plants to damp off.

There are a good many named varieties of pansies. When they are wanted for color effects in beds, separate shades are desirable, but most buyers prefer mixtures and many have a special liking for red shades, such as will be found in Mme. Perret. In the way of named sorts, a few reliables are: Emperor William, blue; Lord Beaconsfield, purple, white petals; Prince Bismarck, brown; Snowflake, pure white; Adonis, light blue; Queen of the Blues, lavender; King of the Blacks, coal black. The splendid special strains of Bugnot, Cassier and other specialists are all worthy of a trial where fancy flowers are wanted.

For dotting among beds of tulips and hyacinths, also for any partly shaded beds or borders, the tufted pansies, Viola cornuta, carrying smaller flowers than the true pansies, but blooming with greater freedom, are fine. Anyone who has once tried them will want them again, and if they can be watered in periods of great heat and drought, they will flower finely all summer long.

Cold Storage Lilies.

Quite a few country florists, especially such as do considerable design work, plan to have a succession of lilies practically the year around. For the greater part of the year cold storage bulbs are necessary. These do not possess the vigor of stock which has not been subjected to cold treatment, but they start into growth quickly and flower in a surprisingly short time. L. longiflorum is the lily chiefly forced, but, in addition, some L. speciosum album and rubrum should be grown. Bulbs of these varieties take considerably longer to flower than those of L. longiflorum. If started before the end of July, they will give a good crop from Thanksgiving to Christmas. They can be grown in pots or beds; the former are to be preferred. I like fairly large pots; 8-inch is a handy size for four or five bulbs. After potting, stand them on a cellar floor, or in a frame where they can be covered with board shutters.

Give a soaking watering after potting; no more will be needed until growths appear and the roots become active. It is always safer to keep any newly potted lilies somewhat on the dry side, rather than the reverse. In winter L. speciosum succeeds well in a night temperature of 55 to 60 degrees. It does not take kindly to hard forcing, as does L. longiflorum.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

SLOW GROWTH, SMALL FOLIAGE.

I am a chrysanthemum grower and have about 6,000 plants, but they are growing too slowly and the foliage is small. It seems impossible to get them to produce good-sized leaves. Will you please tell me what to do for this trouble? Please tell me, also, how to make kerosene emulsion, how to use it and what proportion to add to water for spraying. G. K.

It is somewhat difficult to know what is the matter with these mum plants without a personal investigation or some knowledge as to how the plants have been grown. If the plants have been growing slowly and the foliage coming small, not seeming to want to make a large leaf, such a condition would indicate that the soil is poor or the moisture lamentably deficient. The chrysanthemum needs a great deal of water, particularly in such weather as we have had recently. If the plants have not suffered for lack of water, unquestionably feeding must be necessary. A good mulch of well decomposed cow manure will be found beneficial, as it will keep the plants from drying out at the root and will afford needed nourishment. Before this manure is applied, a dusting of bone flour on top of the plants should be given. I say bone flour, because the coarser grades of bone do not give up their plant food quickly enough to be of much use to the plant and will only just begin to work after the flowers have been cut and the crop gathered. If well decomposed manure is not available, the fresh manure should be used in the form of a liquid, putting a shovelful or so into a barrel of water and mixing it thoroughly.

With all respect to G. K., a kerosene emulsion is dangerous to use on mums. There is no insect that infests mums that can not as well or better be cleaned out by the use of Aphine or one of the tobacco liquids. If there are many chewing insects, they can be readily eradicated and prevented by the use of Paris green, half the strength of what one would use for potatoes outdoors.

C. H. Totty.

CYANIDE FOR MUMS.

Can hydrocyanic acid gas be used with perfect safety for fumigating mums regularly, and how often should it be used? Will it kill worms and sow bugs? C. A. M.

Mums can be fumigated safely with hydrocyanic acid gas if it is used in the following proportions for a 50-foot house: Cyanide, one ounce; sulphuric acid, two ounces; water, six ounces. This will kill every pest above the soil, and if fumigation is regularly done twice a month, green fly, black fly or white fly will be entirely checked. The foliage should be dry.

Choose a cool, quiet night for fumigating, to get the best results. Of course, owing to the deadly nature of the cyanide, great care must be exercised in its use. Mix the acid and water, putting them in earthen bowls and placing these in the house; then, after the house has been closed, drop in the cyanide, get out as quickly as possible and lock the house. If this is done late in the evening, the house can be left closed till morning.

THE PHONE AND THE AUTO.

The accompanying illustration shows the motor truck recently added to the equipment of the H. A. Fisher Co., Kalamazoo, Mich. The combination of the telephone and automobile services tremendously enlarges the scope of the retailer's business. Today the customer need never enter the florist's place of business. He places his orders by telephone and pays his bills by mail. Though he be on the outskirts of town, the automobile delivery car will bring the flowers promptly and in good condition. The florist, on his side, is saved the trouble of showing and handling the flowers in his show room. His show room force is small, although the rest of his staff is proportionately larger, and the amount of business greater than before.

HAIL STORM AT COLUMBUS.

Columbus, O., was visited July 9 by what is believed to have been the most disastrous hail storm in the history of the city. South side florists alone report losses of approximately $50,000, and the total damage to crops and buildings in the city and vicinity has been estimated at $150,000. The hailstones are described, in a cautious, noncommittal sort of way, as being "of almost unbelievable size," and they struck with great force, being driven, it is said, by a 45-mile-an-hour gale. It is related that William Bernard, employed by the Columbus Floral Co., was in a greenhouse when a huge hailstone broke the glass above him and drove a sliver of glass entirely through his right forearm.

Of the florists and nurserymen the largest loss was suffered by the Columbus Floral Co. Loss on its seven greenhouses, each 40x400 feet, on the Groveport pike, is believed to be eighty to ninety per cent, despite the fact that the glass was of double strength. Frank S. Miller, of the company, estimated the damage at $20,000, which includes the loss to flowers and vegetables.

About half a mile to the south of the Columbus Floral Co. are the greenhouses of U. G. Swingle, in which not a pane of glass was broken.

Peter Fornof, whose greenhouses are at High street and Fornof lane, sustained a loss of about $8,000 to glass and vegetables. In eight houses practically every pane was shattered. His tomato crop was destroyed.

Other florists who suffered heavily, and their losses, are as follows: Herman W. Kropp, 1265 South High street, $3,000 in glass; Emil Metzmaier, 1382 South Fourth street, $2,000 in glass and crop; J. R. Hellenthal, 32 East Moler street, $35,000 in glass and crop; C. A. Roth, 180 East Morrel avenue, $5,000, and Theodore Olpp, on Parsons avenue, $2,000. Mr. Kropp had recently completed four new greenhouses in connection with the Cottage Rose Garden and scarcely a light of glass remained unbroken.

At the farms of the Livingston Seed Co., four miles west of Columbus, the crops escaped damage entirely and there was not enough rain there to drive persons to shelter, though rain fell heavily in the center of the city, both in the early and late afternoon. One of the remarkable features of the storm was its limited area.

A FLORIST AT GETTYSBURG.

I have just returned from Gettysburg, where I was much pleased to see the wearers of the blue and the gray walking and talking together, and I was glad to realize so fully that the war was over forever and that everyone was on his good behavior. As one who fought for the Union at Appomattox April 9, 1865, I felt that it was a wonderful thing to see the honest, hearty welcome of Lee's men to Grant's and of Grant's men to Lee's.

I was surprised to see so little glass while en route from Sayre, Pa., to Gettysburg. I saw only one display that was striking and attractive, and that was at the railroad station at Reading. At Gettysburg I averaged a walk of ten to twelve miles per day, so as to see any feature of interest that might escape my observation if I used a swifter means of travel. On Confederate avenue, near the seminary, I saw a bed of J. J. Harrison geraniums —not much over a dozen, I should say— which was the largest display of bedding I saw in Gettysburg.

On arriving at Gettysburg, I found General Sickles sitting on the porch of the Rogers House. He plainly showed the effects of his many years; he is among the last survivors of the band of men who stopped the rush of Longstreet's corps, July 2, 1863. Everyone had a glad hand for us old veterans; whether in the gray or the blue, and even our President spent forty-one minutes of his valuable time on the ground.

BUSINESS EMBARRASSMENTS.

Morgan Park, Ill.—Following a judgment secured in the Superior court by Henry Brushaber, an employee, for $1,500, Jacob Russler filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy July 7, in the United States District court at Chicago. The schedule shows the following figures:

Stock, greenhouses, boilers, etc.	$5,155.00
Personal holdings	737.50
Accounts due	359.54
Total assets	$6,252.04
Liabilities	6,187.28

The schedule of the creditors shows few members of the trade outside of the following:

S. J. Galloway, Eaton, Ohio	$ 70.00
Good & Reese Co., Springfield, Ohio	55.64
A. L. Randall Co.	59.03
August F. Kohr	78.21
L. B. Brague & Son, Hinsdale, Mass.	15.00
Winterson's Seed Store	6.66
Winterson's Seed Store (note)	455.17
Chris Landberg	30.00
Colin & Son, Vorhorut, Holland	140.00
Goetz & Sons, Saginaw, Mich.	12.50

It was stated by Sidney B. Meyer, attorney for Mr. Russler, that owing to the judgment secured by Brushaber in the Superior court, it will be necessary for the receiver, Howard Hews, to sell the property as soon as possible. The receiver was appointed by Referee-in-Bankruptcy Eastman, July 7, the day of the filing of the petition. Records of the Federal court show that Jacob Russler also filed papers as a bankrupt December 14, 1898, and was discharged from bankruptcy in March, 1899.

Des Plaines, Ill.—The sale of the property of the George M. Garland Co., in bankruptcy, consisting of plant, machines, etc., for the manufacture of greenhouse building material, took place July 15, when Referee Eastman accepted the bid of $10,500 by Augusta Garland. The latter is the wife of George M. Garland and it is understood that the business will be carried on by those who formerly had charge, before the voluntary petition in bankruptcy was filed in the U. S. District court at Chicago last March. The property will be turned over to the purchaser at once. Notes to the extent of $1,200 still remain to be collected by the trustee, as well as open accounts said to aggregate $6,000 placed on the books since the business has been in the hands of the court.

Memphis, Tenn.—The petition in bankruptcy of the Memphis Floral Co., filed July 8, shows the following recapitulation:

Stock of plants, etc., fixtures, live stock	$42,138.00
Open accounts considered to be above average	10,500.00
Total assets	$52,638.00
Notes payable	$15,773.98
Open accounts	1,186.84
Total liabilities	$16,960.82
Excess of assets	$35,677.18

The attorneys, Chambers, Taylor & Thomas, St. Louis, say "the assets are of uncertain value and it depends largely on how the estate is handled as to what will be realized for the creditors." These attorneys supply the following list of unsecured creditors in the trade, not including "a large number of small creditors in Memphis":

A report of Bradstreet's commercial agency, written on the same day the bankruptcy petition was filed, indicated that the books of the concern were not in the best of shape, and this is borne out by the fact that two of the Chicago creditors state that their claims are many hundreds of dollars greater than shown in the above list.

The Memphis Floral Co., capital $10,000, was incorporated July 11, 1898. Clarence Hume is president and treasurer and holds the greater part of the stock. Martin L. Clich, vice-president, is superintendent of Riverside cemetery. The other officers and directors, at the time of the last statement, were employees or ex-employees.

NEW ORLEANS, LA.

The Market.

Although we are at present in the so-called dull season, the retailers are kept busy with flower work for weddings and, to a greater extent, for funerals. For the latter use, the demand for flowers was so great on certain occasions that not only every shipped flower was used up, but nearly every available one in the city. The local supply of outdoor cut flowers is at present not large. Gladioli have finished blooming, daisies are nearly gone and asters and single tuberoses are the most reliable flowers now and for the rest of the summer.

The plant sale has been good and some firms have disposed of large quantities of miscellaneous stock, both wholesale and retail. The landscape gardeners likewise report a satisfactory business, stating that the amount of bedding stock used far surpassed last year, owing to the large number of new gardens. They look for a lot of work this coming fall.

Various Notes.

Peter Kaul has a fine lot of evergreen shrubbery, such as Laurus camphora, Magnolia grandiflora and fuscata, oleander, etc. Palms, ferns and other market plants are healthy and clean. He stated that this year's business was quite satisfactory.

Peter Kaul, Jr., who joined lately the army of happy benedicts, is doing an extensive landscape business, which was turned over to him at the time of his marriage by his father.

Bruno Werner's new place looks prosperous and he is well satisfied with the general market trade. A new greenhouse, 15x75, now in construction will be of considerable benefit during the winter season.

Henry Cook was delighted with the results of advertising in the classified columns of this paper. He sold out his big stock of Aspidistra elatior and demands for hundreds of plants came in too late to be filled. His entire stock of palms, ferns and other greenhouse plants, as well as large quantities of southern ornamental trees and shrubs, is in perfect condition.

Reinhard Cook's place makes a trim appearance. He has the finest bouvardia ever grown here. They were in three varieties, young plants in the open ground. A splendidly built greenhouse, 17x75, has just been finished.

Charles Eble and his daughter, Corinne, returned a week ago from Florida, where they spent two weeks with their relatives at Jacksonville. En route they visited Paterson's Rosemont Gardens, at Montgomery, Ala. Mr. Eble speaks well of this place and found the roses, carnations and mums in the houses extremely fine. The new 400-foot house is a splendid example of modern improvements. Mr. Paterson and sons showed them a pleasant day in Montgomery. At the Royal Palm Nurseries of Reasoner Bros., at Oneco, Fla., the manager showed them the finest specimens of palms of many varieties, ranging from ten to sixty feet high and some over 25 years old. Besides the palms the splendid collection of semi-tropical ornamental and fruit trees and shrubs attracted their attention. The next stopping place was at Bradentown, on the Manatee river; there the elegant oreodoxa, or royal palm, seems to be entirely hardy. At Tampa the streets and parks are adorned with different varieties of phœnix and other palms, which likewise ornament the beautiful grounds of the Tampa Bay hotel, the main attraction to strangers. On the return trip from Tampa they saw allemandas, poincianas and clerodendrons in all their blooming glory. Florida is surely great in the line of Asparagus plumosus and all kinds of ferns, but the growing of cut flowers is a hard problem there.

Bernard Eble, the son of Chas. Eble, was married here recently.

PITTSBURGH, PA.

The Market.

The middle of July is a poor time to talk about the flower business, but it is just as busy a time as any around some of the greenhouses. Plantsmen are putting their stock in shape and cleaning and repairing their houses in a leisurely way, but the busy people are the cut flower growers. The young stock of roses is planted, but the old stock, which has been blooming through June, is now being cut back and the beds got into shape for another year. Most of the carnations in this vicinity are still in the houses, but will come out now, and planting from the field will begin shortly. Field carnations are looking well and the indications are for fine plants by planting time.

The wholesalers are still receiving large quantities of carnations and have not felt the need of asters, which are late in making their appearance, although they are promised for this week. Gladioli are here in quantities. The stock is good and they are a blessing this hot weather. Beauties are plentiful, but the demand is slower than ordinary, even for July. There are still a few good long roses, but plenty of the shorter stock, and, from indications, there will continue to be plenty all summer. Lilies, valley and cattleyas are good and plentiful.

The retailers are taking things easy; no one has to exert himself. They are now living off the dead. No one is carrying heavy stock, making a few plants answer the purpose of show.

Various Notes.

On account of his ill health, Jacob Elicker, of Homestead, Pa., who has been in business for years and built up a good trade, sold out to A. C. Miller, who conducts a flower store at Duquesne, Pa. Mr. Miller will continue both stores.

Fischer & Scheick, of Sharon, Pa., on account of the death of Mr. Fischer, have dissolved partnership and will be succeeded by Oliver Scheick.

The Colonial Floral Co. has leased the greenhouses of the former H. L. Blind & Bros., at 5424 Center avenue, which have for two years been unoccupied. Charles C. Wesley is manager of the Colonial Floral Co., which takes possession at once. The rental is not given. The greenhouses are among the best in the city, originally costing $50,000.

Miss McKinley, of Randolph & McClements, accompanied her father, who is a G. A. R. veteran, to the reunion at Gettysburg and is finishing her vacation in the east.

Capt. John Elliott, who has been associated with the florists' and nursery business of Pittsburgh all his life, notwithstanding a serious accident several weeks ago, which sent him to the hospital, managed to get out in time to spend the week at Gettysburg. Captain Elliott is now about 85 years old. He recruited two companies in Pittsburgh for the Civil war.

Ray J. Daschbach, who is one of our younger and most energetic men in the business and has built up a fine trade, has now decided to take unto himself a wife. The young lady is from the west and the wedding will take place early in August.

President Neil McCallum, of the Florists' Club, expects to have at the September meeting Mrs. Elsie McFate, of Turtle Creek, Pa., who is the only woman landscape architect in this vicinity. Mrs. McFate has made a success in her profession. It is expected that she will give a talk on gardens and the art of making homes beautiful outside as well as inside.

John Sisley, of the McCallum Co., is back on the job and Jack Martin has gone on his vacation.

Constantie Rydzewski, the Russian representative of the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co., has just done Washington, D. C., and the eastern cities. He says he saw some fine buildings, but those girls that run on the beach at Coney Island looked good to him. Joe Gatti, the Italian representative of the same firm, reports back this week.

Ben Elliott and family left in his automobile for Detroit and Grosse Ile.

W. Q. Potter, of the McCallum Co., at Cleveland, O., arrived in the city last week with his family in their automobile. He will visit California, Pa., and his old home in Waynesburg, Pa., before returning. Clarke.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The "good old summer time" is here in earnest. The veterans say that "never in a quarter-century have such conditions prevailed." The abnormal June prepared us in a measure for a summer of depression, but we hardly expected to break the July record. We are doing it with a vengeance. Notwithstanding the Sunday-closing movement, there was a great abundance of stock remaining unsold on Saturday evening, when the ice-boxes were closed until Monday morning. JOHN BURTON.

LAST week's issue of The Review contained a four-line item that created no end of interest, especially in Philadelphia—it announced the retirement of John Burton, one of the largest and most successful of the growers in the City of Brotherly Love. Mr. Burton is turning his place over to one of his sons. While Mr. Burton is classed as one of the Old Guard, he is in the prime of life, widely known and universally respected. He was president of the S. A. F. two terms, in 1902 and 1903. An account of his business career appears in the Philadelphia letter this week.

will be turned over to the purchaser at once. Notes to the extent of $1,200 still remain to be collected by the trustee, as well as open accounts said to aggregate $6,000 placed on the books since the business has been in the hands of the court.

Memphis, Tenn. The petition in bankruptcy of the Memphis Floral Co., filed July 8, shows the following recapitulation:

Stock of plants, etc., fixtures, live stock		$12,138.00

Total assets		$22,638.00
Notes payable	$15,773.98
Open accounts	1,186.84
Total liabilities		$16,960.82
Excess of assets		$5,677.18

The attorneys, Chambers, Taylor & Thomas, St. Louis, say "the assets are of uncertain value and it depends largely on how the estate is handled as to what will be realized for the creditors." These attorneys supply the following list of unsecured creditors in the trade, not including "a large number of small creditors in Memphis":

A report of Bradstreet's commercial agency, written on the same day the bankruptcy petition was filed, indicated that the books of the concern were not in the best of shape, and this is borne out by the fact that two of the Chicago creditors state that their claims are many hundreds of dollars greater than shown in the above list.

The Memphis Floral Co., capital $10,000, was incorporated July 11, 1898. Clarence Hume is president and treasurer and holds the greater part of the stock. Martin L. Clich, vice-president, is superintendent of Riverside cemetery. The other officers and directors, at the time of the last statement, were employees or ex-employees.

NEW ORLEANS, LA.

The Market.

Although we are at present in the so-called dull season, the retailers are kept busy with flower work for weddings and, to a greater extent, for funerals. For the latter use, the demand for flowers was so great on certain occasions that not only every shipped flower was used up, but nearly every available one in the city. The local supply of outdoor cut flowers is at present not large. Gladioli have finished blooming, daisies are nearly gone and asters and single tuberoses are the most reliable flowers now and for the rest of the summer.

The plant sale has been good and some firms have disposed of large quantities of miscellaneous stock, both wholesale and retail. The landscape gardeners likewise report a satisfactory business, stating that the amount of bedding stock used far surpassed last year, owing to the large number of new gardens. They look for a lot of work this coming fall.

Various Notes.

Peter Kaul has a fine lot of evergreen shrubbery, such as Laurus camphora, Magnolia grandiflora and fuscata, oleander, etc. Palms, ferns and other market plants are healthy and clean. He stated that this year's business was quite satisfactory.

Peter Kaul, Jr., who joined lately the army of happy benedicts, is doing an extensive landscape business, which was turned over to him at the time of his marriage by his father.

Bruno Werner's new place looks prosperous and he is well satisfied with the general market trade. A new greenhouse, 15x75, now in construction, will be of considerable benefit during the winter season.

Henry Cook was delighted with the results of advertising in the classified columns of this paper. He sold out his big stock of Aspidistra elatior and demands for hundreds of plants came in too late to be filled. His entire stock of palms, ferns and other greenhouse plants, as well as large quantities of southern ornamental trees and shrubs, is in perfect condition.

Reinhard Cook's place makes a trim appearance. He has the finest bouvardia ever grown here. They were in three varieties, young plants in the open ground. A splendidly built greenhouse, 17x75, has just been finished.

Charles Eble and his daughter, Corinne, returned a week ago from Florida, where they spent two weeks with their relatives at Jacksonville. En route they visited Paterson's Rosemont Gar[illegible]s, at Montgomery, Ala. Mr. Eble sp[illegible]ks well of this place and found the r[illegible]ses, carnations and mums in the house[illegible] extremely fine. The new 400-foot h[illegible]se is a splendid example of modern [illegible] improvements. Mr. Paterson and [illegible]ons showed them a pleasant day in M[illegible]t gomery. At the Royal Palm Nurs[illegible]ies of Reasoner Bros., at Oneco, Fla., the manager showed them the finest sp[illegible]ecimens of palms of many varieties, r[illegible]ng ing from ten to sixty feet high [illegible]nd some over 25 years old. Besides the palms the splendid collection of s[illegible]mi-tropical ornamental and fruit trees [illegible]nd shrubs attracted their attention. The next stopping place was at Bradentown, on the Manatee river; there the ele[illegible] gant oreodoxa, or royal palm, seems to be entirely hardy. At Tampa the streets and parks are adorned with dif[illegible] ferent varieties of phœnix and other palms, which likewise ornament the beautiful grounds of the Tampa Bay hotel, the main attraction to strangers. On the return trip from Tampa they saw allemandas, poincianas and clerodendrons in all their blooming glory. Florida is surely great in the line of Asparagus plumosus and all kinds of ferns, but the growing of cut flowers is a hard problem there.

Bernard Eble, the son of Chas. Eble was married here recently.

The Market.

The middle of July is a poor time to talk about the flower business, but it is just as busy a time as any around some of the greenhouses. Plantsmen are putting their stock in shape and cleaning and repairing their houses in a leisurely way, but the busy people are the cut flower growers. The young stock of roses is planted, but the old stock, which has been blooming through June, is now being cut back and the beds got into shape for another year. Most of the carnations in this vicinity are still in the houses, but will come out now, and planting from the field will begin shortly. Field carnations are looking well and the indications are for fine plants by planting time.

The wholesalers are still receiving large quantities of carnations and have not felt the need of asters, which are late in making their appearance, although they are promised for this week. Gladioli are here in quantities. The stock is good and they are a blessing this hot weather. Beauties are plentiful, but the demand is slower than ordinary, even for July. There are still a few good long roses, but plenty of the shorter stock, and, from indications, there will continue to be plenty all summer. Lilies, valley and cattleyas are good and plentiful.

The retailers are taking things easy, no one has to exert himself. They are now living off the dead. No one is carrying heavy stock, making a few plants answer the purpose of show.

Various Notes.

On account of his ill health, Jacob Elicker, of Homestead, Pa., who has been in business for years and built up a good trade, sold out to A. C. Miller, who conducts a flower store at Duquesne, Pa. Mr. Miller will continue both stores.

Fischer & Scheick, of Sharon, Pa., on account of the death of Mr. Fischer, have dissolved partnership and will be succeeded by Oliver Scheick.

The Colonial Floral Co. has leased the greenhouses of the former H. L. Blind & Sons., at 5424 Center avenue, which have for two years been unoccupied. Charles C. Wesley is manager of the Colonial Floral Co., which takes possession at once. The rental is not given. The greenhouses are among the best in the city, originally costing $50,000.

Miss McKinley, of Randolph & McClements, accompanied her father, who is a G. A. R. veteran, to the reunion at Gettysburg and is finishing her vacation in the east.

Capt. John Elliott, who has been associated with the florists' and nursery business of Pittsburgh all his life, notwithstanding a serious accident several weeks ago, which sent him to the hospital, managed to get out in time to spend the week at Gettysburg. Captain Elliott is now about 85 years old. He recruited two companies in Pittsburgh for the Civil war.

Ray J. Daschbach, who is one of our youngest and most energetic men in the business and has built up a fine trade, has now decided to take unto himself a wife. The young lady is from the west and the wedding will take place early in August.

President Neil McCallum, of the Florists' Club, expects to have at the September meeting Mrs. Elsie McFate, of Turtle Creek, Pa., who is the only woman landscape architect in this vicinity. Mrs. McFate has made a success in her profession. It is expected that she will give a talk on gardens and the art of making homes beautiful outside as well as inside.

John Sisley, of the McCallum Co., is back on the job and Jack Martin has gone on his vacation.

Constantie Rydzewski, the Russian representative of the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co., has just done Washington, D. C., and the eastern cities. He says he saw some fine buildings, but those girls that run on the beach at Coney Island looked good to him. Joe Gatti, the Italian representative of the same firm, reports back this week.

Ben Elliott and family left in his automobile for Detroit and Grosse Ile.

W. Q. Potter, of the McCallum Co., at Cleveland, O., arrived in the city last week with his family in their automobile. He will visit California, Pa., and his old home in Waynesburg, Pa., before returning. Clarke.

chair, fully recovered from his long illness. Manager Coan is back from his vacation. He says receipts of gladioli average 600 dozen daily.

The Bedford Flower Co. held its annual meeting last week at its New York office, in the Coogan building. The only new rose added to the planting this season is Milady. John Nash, secretary and treasurer of the company, is spending his week ends with his family alternately at Sea Cliff and Douglaston.

John Kral, head salesman of the firm of Moore, Hentz & Nash, left July 12 for a three weeks' holiday with his family in his motor boat, visiting all the popular resorts on the sound. George Hildebrand, at one time with John Young, wholesale florist, and later in the retail business in New York, will join the sales force of this firm September 1.

Paul Meconi has bought the property at 129 West Twenty-eighth street, formerly occupied by George Saltford and Walter Siebrecht, as a speculation. Mr. Meconi will continue his business at his present address and his store will be greatly enlarged in time for the opening of the fall trade. Mrs. Meconi is expected home from her European trip about August 1.

The Henry M. Robinson Co., New York, will occupy the new store in the Coogan building, on the ground floor, as soon as the extensive improvements and changes contemplated are completed. The store will have its principal entrance on West Twenty-sixth street and will extend in and around to another entrance in the hallway of the building, a most convenient arrangement.

George C. Siebrecht leaves this week for a fifteen days' cruise in his motor boat, including Newport, Boston and Maine in his itinerary.

Mr. and Mrs. J. K. Allen will spend their holidays at Ocean Grove, N. J. Mr. Allen, P. J. Smith and Charles Millang all received first prizes for their artistic dancing at the Greek-American outing.

J. M. Barker, of Morristown, is building another sweet pea house, 45x125. His stock is handled by Walter Siebrecht. Mr. Siebrecht is spending a month with his family at Lake George. On his return, his foreman, Thos. Barker, will take his vacation in the Maine woods.

Nicholas Lecakes and family are summering on his farm in Connecticut.

Charles Schenck, of Traendly & Schenck, is with his family at Tannersville, in the Catskills. Ed. Aucker, salesman for this firm, is at the seaside resorts. He captained the winning team at the Greek-American outing.

J. A. Newsham, of New Orleans, was in the city July 10, in care of Harry Bunyard, after a two months' trip in Europe.

Woodrow & Marketos have purchased the contents of the two large greenhouses of the Schwartzman estate, Brooklyn. Many large decorative palms and specimen plants of great value are in the collection.

W. H. Gunther will make Sea Girt, N. J., the resting place of himself and family for the summer. John Gunther and family find recuperative breezes and bathing for their week ends at Midland Beach, Staten Island.

Harry Mengham, formerly of the firm of Mengham & Westwood and lately with Thorley, is now in the service of M. A. Bowe, of West Thirty-third street.

Leo Rozens, bookkeeper for Russin & Hanfling, is now enjoying his vacation in Sullivan county.

Charles Schemmell, with M. C. Ford, left July 12, with his family, for his annual vacation in the Catskills.

Mrs. D. E. Grulich, of Hoboken, N. J., wife of the florist, died at Christ hospital, Jersey City, July 8, aged 62.

Charles Miller, of Walter Sheridan's force, is taking a holiday in the Catskills.

Peter F. McKenney had the large decoration last week for the naval reception to the Brazilian envoy.

Arthur T. Boddington and family are enjoying their vacation in New England.

James McHutchison has returned from his trip to the Pacific coast.

Burnett Bros. will remove September 1 to 98 Chambers street, where they will have a building of five stories and basement.

Sydney B. Wertheimer sent cards from Lucerne, Switzerland, June 29.

Baseball is the favorite recreation of the wholesalers, these sultry afternoons, and New York, as the result of their consistent rooting, is now leading the National League.

The coming convention is now the theme of general interest, and New York hopes to send its usual creditable representation. J. Austin Shaw.

WHITE FLY IN PLANT HOUSES.

Can you tell me of some means of exterminating the moth-like little flies that have infested our lantanas, stevias and fuchsias? M. J. H.

The pest you have is undoubtedly the white fly, which is particularly partial to the plants you name, as well as to show pelargoniums, nasturtiums, calceolarias, cinerarias and some other plants. Persistent spraying with common soap and water, one pound to five gallons of water, mitigates the nuisance considerably. Aphine and fir tree oil are other good remedies.

The only sure way of cleaning out the pest under glass is to use hydrocyanic acid gas. The formula for this has frequently appeared in The Review, but I might say that the following strength has proved sufficient to kill this pest: One and one-fourth ounces of ninety-eight per cent potassium cyanide, two and one-fourth ounces of sulphuric acid and three and one-half ounces of water for each 3,000 cubic feet. To find the cubic contents of your house, multiply the length by the breadth and this again by the average height. Use stone jars for fumigating and select a cool night for the operation. First pour in the water; then add the acid. Each jar being thus prepared, drop in the cyanide, which should be wrapped in paper. Get out of the house as quickly as possible after dropping in the cyanide; lock the door and allow no one to enter the same night. Use extreme care not to inhale any of the gas, as it is deadly.

The dose mentioned is for an all-

TOLEDO FLORISTS' OUTING.

Wednesday, July 9, was a gala day in the annals of the Toledo Florists' Club, for it resulted in bringing together grower, wholesaler, commission man and retailer on a footing of jovial good-fellowship. It was the "first annual" outing and picnic held under the auspices of the club. At the June meeting some live wire suggested holding a picnic. Frank Schramm, the youngest member of the club, was elected general superintendent. He immediately undertook in a businesslike manner to make the affair an unqualified success. Posters announcing the fact that all florists' shops would be closed after 9 a. m. that day were distributed about the city; all florists and others interested were notified of the plans, and on the day before the picnic a well-displayed ad was placed in all the evening papers, signed by every retail florist, to inform the public.

The day of the picnic dawned rather cloudy, but nothing came of it except a shower in the early morning, which settled the dust. The picnickers began to arrive at Ottawa park at an early hour and when the dinner-bell rang at 1 o'clock about 200 were seated around the festive board. And such a dinner as that was! Everybody pronounced it the best picnic lunch he ever had enjoyed. After lunch, the program of the day was inaugurated with a wild and woolly baseball combat between the West Side and the East Side. The memory of that game will live long with those who sat on the hillside, cheering their favorites. The score was 11 to 4 in favor of the West Side. The other events of the day included a tug of war, and running races for men, women and children, not forgetting the fat ladies' race, of which Miss Helen Patten was the bright particular star. The newly-weds, Mr. and Mrs. Kraus, were the recipients of many congratulations. Mrs. Kraus was Mrs. J. B. Freeman prior to June 30.

George Byer was the chief rooter for the West Side during the ball game. His favorite war cry was: "Hurrah for the West Side, the land of the Bonnaffon!"

OBITUARY.

Mrs. Annie M. Smith.

The anniversary of the burial of the late William R. Smith, of Washington, D. C., who has rightfully been termed the "Father of American Horticulture," was sadly marked by the death of his widow, Mrs. Annie M. Smith, who passed away at Mt. Hope, Md., Wednesday, July 9, just one year and two days after her husband.

Mrs. Smith was born in Colesville, Montgomery county, Md., in 1840. She was the daughter of the late Joseph Fawcett, who emigrated to this country from Leeds, England, in the days when steam vessels were unknown, and who operated a textile mill in Maryland. In her younger days she was considered to be a belle of the surrounding country. Many of the older florists can remember when she was a noted figure in the national capital. Brilliant to a degree, Mrs. Smith was a charming woman. A little over twenty years ago she became afflicted with a mental disorder that necessitated her removal to an institution in Baltimore and it was here that she passed away.

She was laid to rest in the Rock Creek cemetery, beside her husband, and the grave covered with flowers by her friends, including many of the old-time florists who knew her when she was in her prime.

Robert Leithead.

Robert Leithead, one of the pioneer gardeners of Pasadena, Cal., died recently. He had been well and favorably known in Los Angeles and vicinity for many years. He had charge of the Raymond hotel grounds twenty-two years ago and there first showed the gardeners of the neighborhood that Clianthus Dampieri, the glory pea of Australia, could be successfully grown from seed and flowered there in midwinter. An Englishman by birth, he came first to Canada, then worked for Robert Craig, of Philadelphia, and a quarter of a century ago he removed to the Pacific coast. H. R. R.

Robert J. Trumbull.

Robert J. Trumbull, one of the oldest seedsmen and nurserymen on the Pacific coast, died at his home in San Rafael, Cal., July 5. He settled in Marin county early in the sixties, where he established a general nursery business. In 1870, together with Charles Beebe, he opened a seed and plant depot on Sansome street, San Francisco. The business was continued under this management at that location until the time of the fire. After the catastrophe both of these gentlemen retired and the store was reopened on California street by his son, Robert H. Trumbull. It was shortly afterwards removed to its present location on Market street and is now managed by Charles Colemore. Mr. Trumbull was a native of Ireland and 76 years of age at the time of his death. He is survived by his son and two daughters. The funeral took place from the Presbyterian church in San Rafael June 6, the interment being in Mount Tamalpais cemetery.

John Faber.

John B. Faber, Sr., died this week, at his home at Kankakee, Ill., of old age. Mr. Faber was 90 years old and had been a resident of Kankakee since 1869. He opened the first florist's shop and greenhouse in that city in that year and continued in that business until about twenty years ago. At that time he retired and turned the business over to his sons, who are now in possession under the name of Faber Bros. Mr. Faber was a great devotee of the church, being one of the founders of St. Mary's. His daughter is a sister in a convent at Joliet. He is survived by the following children: Tracy, John B., Jr., and George, of Kankakee; Barthol, of Hammond, La., and Sister Calesta, of Joliet. Interment was in Mt. Calvary cemetery.

Flint, Mich.—Arthur T. MacKinnon, who started business recently at 118 East Fifth street, is now building a greenhouse.

Newport, R. I.—At the recent flower show of the Newport Horticultural Society, Henry A. Dreer, Inc., Philadelphia, was awarded the prize of $25 offered by the Garden Association and Newport Horticultural Society, also the silver medal for a general exhibit and five first-class certificates for five new nymphæas.

RESULTS.

We give them. You get them.
We both have them.

NOT a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending The Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar-bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper.

F. W. FLETCHER & Co., Auburndale, Mass., have issued a neat booklet, "The Story of Nelrose," containing the history of the variety of that name and some general notes on snapdragons.

ALMOST anyone can sell goods—the difficulty is to obtain business on a profitable basis. A florist, to be permanently successful, must not only sell at prices that pay, but to customers who pay.

THE tariff bill was reported to the Senate July 11 in the exact form in which the trade paragraphs were printed in The Review of June 26. It is thought there will be no further changes before the bill becomes law.

ONE of the English trade papers comments that "the ever-rising cost of fuel is a sore point with all glass proprietors," and adds that a good coal for greenhouses that formerly cost 4 shillings now costs 10 shillings per ton.

Now that the Killarneys are the principal roses there is not the hiatus between seasons that was so regular in the days of Bride and Bridesmaid. Not only do most growers carry their plants of Killarney more than one year, but they run them right through without drying off and resting, as was done when the old favorites were carried over.

YOUNG AT MINNEAPOLIS.

John Young, secretary of the S. A. F., is at Minneapolis to take up the work of the convention. Those who wish to communicate with him should write care of the Hotel Andrews. Mr. Young says he is "delighted with the arrangements already made; all details have been well taken care of; all of the Minneapolis boys deserve great credit. The vice-president has done wonders with the outdoor planting exhibits and at convention time it should be at its best. This exhibition will be a pleasant surprise to many."

THE CANADIAN CONVENTION.

The sixteenth annual convention of the Canadian Horticultural Association will be held in Peterboro, Ont., August 5 to 7. It is expected that the trade exhibit will be an exceptionally good one. A large greenhouse concern will have a display of its form of greenhouse construction and R. W. King, of the King Construction Co., and R. M. Cobb, of the Lord & Burnham Co., will speak on greenhouse construction, the latter with lantern-slide illustrations.

Cecil Hopton, of Montreal, will present a paper particularly valuable to retailers on "Retail Store Management." Charles Craig, of Ottawa, will give a paper on "Christmas Plants"; Tom McHugh, of Montreal, on "What Native Plants Have Proved Most Useful for Conservatory Purposes?" and G. Trussel, of Montreal, on "What Ten Perennials Have Proved the Most Useful for the Hardy Border?"

Elaborate plans are being arranged by the Peterboro committee for the entertainment of the members of the association and include a trip around the Kawartha lakes, a moonlight excursion and an evening banquet at a summer resort on Clear lake.

The superintendent of the trade exhibit is Frank Wise, of Peterboro, Ont.

CAUSE AND EFFECT.

The Review brings together the advertiser with the stock to sell and the reader who wants to buy. The reason for its great value as an advertising medium is that it has so many of both classes and covers a large field thoroughly and completely. The two letters following show why both classes are so well satisfied:

I enjoy reading your paper very much. Could not do business without it, as I can always find the stock I want. Yours is the most complete trade paper I ever subscribed for.—L. E. Davis, Hartford, Mich., July 5, 1913.

I most certainly appreciate your paper and would advise every florist to advertise surplus stock in The Review.—Fred Ziegeler, Jr., New Orleans, La., July 3, 1913.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

The market has been extremely quiet through the week now under review. Weather conditions have been such that the old stock has run out earlier than usual, while the outdoor summer flowers have not come forward so early as they ordinarily do. The result has been a hiatus, a period during which there is scarcely any stock on the market. While there is little to sell and no special demand, still at the end of the day the wholesalers find they have made an excellent record for summer sales; the business is running quite a bit ahead of last year, when there was much more stock on the market.

The special feature this week is the sharp decrease in the supply of carnations. The hot weather in June hit them so hard that practically all the growers have thrown out and are replanting simultaneously. There are scarcely any carnations on the market this week, and most of those received are poor. The decrease in shipments is specially apparent because the asters in the field have had to contend with so much dry weather that they are not blooming so early as usual. A few asters are coming in, but the quantity is not enough to cut much figure.

There is an abundance of American Beauties. While some growers are cutting little, others have fine crops on. The quality generally is all that could be expected in the middle of summer. Stems and foliage are fine, the bud is as large as the season would warrant one to expect and the color is fair to good, weather conditions in the last few days having been favorable. Prices are slightly better than earlier in the month, but the buyers who can use quantities still can get liberal treat-

OUR SPECIAL SUMMER CROP OF

BEAUTIES

THE LARGEST AND FINEST EVER KNOWN

BEAUTIES have been a summer specialty with us for years, but we never have had anywhere near so large a supply as at present. The quality is right up to the top notch, as it always is with our stock. We want to hear from any buyer who can use a quantity for any special purpose, but we are especially anxious to hear from the buyers who need daily shipments, no matter how large or how small. If you can use a dozen Beauties per day, or a hundred Beauties per day, or any other quantity, we want you with us this summer.

FANCY ROSES

Good roses have become so scarce that medium and long stems carrying quality flowers sell on sight, but we aim never to be without some good roses in the ice-box to go out on late shipping orders. Let us know your needs as early in the day as possible, but call on us at short notice if you must. We have large supplies of Killarney, White Killarney and Bulgarie, an especially large lot of Mrs. Ward and soon will have a big crop of Radiance. You will find us rose headquarters now and all summer.

GLADIOLI

Again this season we are headquarters for Gladioli. Specially strong on the popular cut flower colors, white, red and light pink. Let your orders come.

Asters are just starting to come in. We have a fair supply, and it soon will be large. THE EARLY CUTS ARE FINE.

ORCHIDS

Our Cattleyas are not surpassed for quality by those to be found anywhere else in this country.

DAISIES

You can get here all the Shasta Daisies you can use. Good stock, and low in price.

FANCY VALLEY

You can depend upon us at all times for valley. If you run short, a wire to Amling will bring the valley you need.

EASTER LILIES

ment. Roses are not in large supply. While a few growers are cutting from stock handled specially to give a summer crop of medium to long stems, most of the receipts are cut from the spring's planting and are short in stem. Quality varies from day to day; after a cool day the receipts are in fair condition, but following a hot day much of the stock is wide open. Short white continues in special demand. Sunburst is making a name for itself as a summer rose, and Radiance is seen in good shape. Maryland is generally in better condition than Killarney, but is nowhere near so numerous.

Gladioli are not coming forward so fast as usual, because of dry weather, but the supply nevertheless is increasing every day. The three old standbys, America, King and Augusta, are now available and are, of course, most salable. Shasta daisies are not quite so bad a glut as last week. The situation on Easter lilies has changed sharply. At the opening of the month these were sold at the lowest average price ever known in this market, but they now are back to normal for the season, selling well because of the shortage of other first-class flowers. The demand for valley and orchids has fallen away, and the light supply is abundant. Peonies are practically cleaned up; they have cut no figure since June. Outdoor sweet peas are beginning to be a market factor, but the quality is not what the best trade requires.

There is little doing in green goods. Demand is light and supplies are not large. Sprengeri is more abundant than it has been recently.

Wienhoeber Store Changes.

For many years the store of the E. Wienhoeber Co., on Elm street, has been known far and wide as the most conspicuous example of the flower shop without an ice-box. The cut flowers on display have stood on a gracefully curved counter across one corner of the open store. It has been decided to change this and during the annual renovation a fine big display refrigerator will replace the time-honored flower counter. It will stand at the west end of the store, so that it can be iced from the alley, thereby saving the muss and wear and tear in the store. The Wienhoeber store is dull in the summer, for the family trade is out of town, but a specially good season is expected this year, as the completion of expensive apartment buildings is just now considerably increasing the population in the neighborhood.

Wm. Wienhoeber and wife are expected home in the next few days, from Yuma, Colo., where they have been for a month at the ranch of some friends.

Various Notes.

Another special train from Chicago to Minneapolis for the S. A. F. convention has been announced by H. A. Gross, general agent for the passenger department of the Chicago & Northwestern railroad. This train will leave at 6:45 p. m., the same hour as the trains on rival roads, the evening of August 18, arriving early the following morning in Minneapolis. According to Mr. Gross, the train has been put on by his company in response to requests from out-of-town and local florists who do not wish to take either the Chicago Florists' Club's or Cook County Florists' Association's specials. This makes four special trains carded to leave Chicago at the same hour, carrying florists to Minneapolis.

Mr. and Mrs. John F. Kidwell returned from the east July 15, after visiting Washington and New York city.

The organization of a Chicago Florists' Club baseball team is under way and it is expected that the squad will be in good shape to participate in the sporting events at the Minneapolis S. A. F. convention. A. Miller, the promising young twirler, reports a sore arm as the result of too much practice during the last few days. Miller was the mainstay of the team on the pitcher's mound last season.

Roswell Schupp, who broke his arm cranking an automobile a couple of weeks ago, is back at the J. A. Budlong store, giving as much attention to his duties as is possible with one arm in a sling.

The E. C. Amling Co. is this week putting in a new steel ceiling, which will add materially to the appearance of the store.

Miss Burkhart, for many years with E. H. Hunt, now is in the supply department of Poehlmann Bros. Co.

Frank Ayers, right-hand man for C. W. McKellar, sailed for the Georgian bay July 15, with his wife.

This is an exceedingly busy season at the greenhouses of Wietor Bros. It is haying season, as well as replanting time; also two wornout boilers are being replaced with new ones.

The store over J. C. Craig's place being vacant, the extra space is being used for cut flower display.

This is vacation week for Adolph Benesh, of Winterson's Seed Store.

John Byers, of the Chicago Carnation Co., resumed his duties July 14, after a vacation of three weeks.

The A. L. Randall Co. received and shipped another car of sphagnum last week, said to be the sixth car handled this season.

R. C. Hinz, of Leavenworth, Kan., passed through the city July 14, on his way to Sawyer, Mich., for a vacation, pausing only long enough to order a few supplies.

A. Henderson & Co. say they have been advised that their first shipment of Paper Whites and Romans is on the way. It consists of 300 cases.

with most of the other roses, F. F. Benthey, of Kyle & Foerster, says that Mrs. Taft and Sunburst are the popular flowers at present.

While well pleased with the service his White truck gave last season, C. A. Samuelson has it in the shops for an overhauling and redecorating that will make it like new for the autumn.

Robert Northam, George Reinberg's store manager, is spending his second week of vacationing in Michigan and sends back the word that if the fishing record of the first seven days is broken there will be few fish left around Iron River.

Peonies have become exceedingly scarce during the last ten days and, with the end of the storage supply at hand, A. L. Vaughan finds an increase in the number of out-of-town calls for them.

John Canger is cleaning up the liabilities of Canger & Bergman. Many of the smaller creditors have been paid in full and the larger ones have received payments on account.

Frank Oechslin has his big motor van laid up during the dull season in the plant line, giving it an overhauling.

D. E. Freres finds the new store requires more help and his brother, M. F. Freres, is assisting with the work.

Richard Salm, head of the rose growing department of Poehlmann Bros. Mr. Salm is declared to be a worthy driver for competition with any amateurs, but Mr. Poehlmann has a record of his own.

George E. Reid, order clerk for the E. Wienhoeber Co., is at Montreal and will sail July 19 on the Letitia for a visit with his parents in Edinburgh, Scotland. He expects to be away three months.

John Sinner is spending a few weeks in Iowa, where he is visiting friends in various cities. His store is being looked after by M. C. Gunterberg, who has quarters with him. Miss Gunterberg will take her usual vacation as soon as Mr. Sinner returns.

One of the visitors to the Morton Grove plant of Poehlmann Bros. Co. last week was C. E. Gullett, the well-known florist from Lincoln, Ill. Mr. Gullett, together with Mrs. Gullett, Official Club Report.

The Chicago Florists' Club held its regular meeting July 10, President French in the chair, at Hotel La Salle, room 104, same being prettily decorated with extra fine quality of carnations furnished by Poehlmann Bros. Co. Applications for membership were received from F. J. Rose, 1322 Nelson street, Chicago, and Ben Grupe, Park Ridge, Ill.

The good of the club committee reported that after careful investigation it finds a boat trip picnic to Michigan City impracticable. Chairman Waters said that the committee recommends a picnic at Eckhart's Grove, Park Ridge, August 31. A motion prevailed that the recommendation of the committee be concurred in. The committee was given full power to act. The sports committee has purchased gloves, bats and balls, and is getting in fine shape for the ball game.

The transportation committee reported that a number of letters have been received from clubs and from individuals stating they will join the Chicago Florists' Club at Chicago en route to the convention city, Minneapolis, next August on the Chicago Florists' Club's special train.

A motion prevailed that a vote of thanks be extended to all donators to storm and flood victims. A vote of

The Gateway to the South.

There is an active demand in the market, while the supply is short. Everything at all worth while cleans up; the stock that does not do so is too poor for use. The ice men's strike is over and the florists are no longer having trouble in getting their regular supply.

Various Notes.

The annual meeting of the Florists' Club was held on Monday evening. The election resulted as follows: President, Jas. Allen; vice-president, Ed. Schumann; treasurer, Chas. H. Hoffmeister; secretary, Alex. Ostendarp; trustee, Gus Adrian. After the meeting, at a social session and kidding match a hundred-yard dash to be run at the outing was arranged between A. C. The Market.

Trade has been rather quiet of late, with stock fairly good and about sufficient in quantity to meet the demand. Roses are holding their own much better than anything else and it is surprising they are so good, considering the hot weather of a week or ten days ago. The last week has not been quite so hot, but we have had some rain, which has helped to keep things going. Carnations are dwindling down and are becoming extremely poor in quality. Most of the growers are cleaning out their houses and getting ready to plant. Carnations, as a rule, are looking well in the fields; a few are a little small, but they will come on satisfactorily after planting. Considerable valley was used last week, as well as sweet peas, and these are about all that is available for corsage work, aside from Ward roses, etc.

Lilies have been moving well and there were quite a lot of them on the market last week. They are about the most satisfactory flowers to handle at present. Quite a few ferns have been sold in the last week or two, mostly in the smaller stock, as the larger plants were pretty well cleaned up some time ago. There is a good demand for blooming plants, but nothing of any consequence to fill the demand.

Damage by Hail.

On Wednesday, July 9, a heavy hail storm struck Columbus and many florists and others suffered heavy losses. The storm began about 1 p. m. and seemed to come from the northwest, but the reports show that it traveled in different directions. Directly north of Columbus a great deal of damage was done to crops, but only a little glass was broken. Then the storm shifted to the west, missing the Livingston Seed Co., the Fifth Avenue Floral Co., the Munk Floral Co. and the Riverside Floral Co.; in that neighborhood there was little rain and no hail. Thence the storm seemed to travel south and then southeast, hitting part of Sherman Stephens' place and breaking about 100 panes or so, but the Cottage Rose Garden was directly in the storm's path and nearly all the glass there was broken, with great damage to stock, both inside and outside. J. R. Hellenthal's glass was nearly all broken; so, also, was E. Metzmaier's. Charles Roth, the Columbus Floral Co., Adam Fornof, a vegetable grower, and several small truck gardeners with houses lost their glass. The loss of the Columbus Floral Co. is placed at $20,000; E. Metzmaier's, $2,000 to $3,000; C. Roth's, the same, and J. R. Hellenthal's, about $3,500.

It seems that Columbus and vicinity have had more than their share of such troubles. On Monday morning, July 14, there was a storm to the east of Columbus, which did much damage, and there was a cloudburst between Newark and Zanesville, which flooded a vast extent of land. The Muskingum river rose eight feet in one hour and, from all reports, has done a great deal of damage.

There is a report that it may be a hard matter to get glass at once to do the replacing, but all are hoping there will be no trouble of that kind. No doubt the results of the storms will keep some florists from attending the picnic, as they have their hands full.

Various Notes.

The florists will have a picnic at Buckeye Lake, as usual. The date is Wednesday, July 23. No doubt there will be a good crowd, as Sherman Stephens already reports about enough passengers to fill one car. The Market.

The first week in July marked the beginning of the end of summer business. The market has been so quiet you could hear a pin drop. Stock, such as roses, carnations and all the indoor crop, has gone down in quality to the lowest ebb. Japanese lilies, indoor grown, and early outdoor asters and gladioli are the freshest looking stock on the market.

Various Notes.

The Florists' Club's picnic will be held Wednesday, July 23, at Puntas Springs park. The usual ball game, Wholesalers vs. Retailers, will be pulled off at 2 p. m., followed by races. Fat men will get their usual workout in the 20-yard dash, this distance being considered the limit for Cleveland's entries in this class. Liquid refreshments of a cooling nature will be furnished by the club. The dance hall will be open in the evening, at the popular Cleveland price of 3 cents per. Bring your families out for the day.

Wm. J. Kramer, of Rocky River, is again the first on this market with asters. His white and pink Perfection, a strain of his own raising, are fully three weeks ahead of Queen of the Market and are finding ready sale.

The Eastern Market.

The supply of gladioli is the feature of the market this week. The stock is fine and so plentiful that it is difficult to find an outlet for it all. Some new crop roses are arriving, chiefly Maryland and White Killarney. They are welcome, as the better grades of roses are rather short of the demand, while the poorer grades are far too plentiful. Asters are hardly yet making an impression; most of them are too short in stem to rank high. Easter lilies are the mainstay of the market where white flowers can be used. Valley is dull and some of it below grade, while cattleyas have received unsteady support. Eastern Beauties are the finest roses in the market. Mrs. Taft, or Prince de Bulgarie, is satisfactory now. Sunburst has surprised everyone by its summer usefulness.

The Retirement of John Burton.

Brief announcement was made last week that John Burton had decided to retire from active business, handing over the management of his large range of greenhouses to his son, George Burton. The street was genuinely surprised. A successful career of thirty-five years closed in the prime of manhood, just after the purchase of a new farm and the addition of a modern greenhouse, was unexpected. It is understood that Mr. Burton has for some time wished to relinquish the cares of active business and that his son's enterprise made this possible now.

John Burton commenced business in a small range of what would be considered today little greenhouses, on Chew street, Germantown, opposite Meehan's nurseries, when a lad, shortly after the Centennial exposition in this city. A few years later he sold these greenhouses to Thomas Meehan, who placed William Meehan in charge. Mr. Burton then bought ground with his brother-in-law, Edwin Lonsdale, Wyndmoor, Pa., where they built greenhouses and embarked in business under the firm name of Lonsdale & Burton. They prospered as wholesale growers, separating a few years later, Mr. Burton retaining the old place while Mr. Lonsdale built a new one to the west of it. Everything that Mr. Burton did was well done. He gradually improved his place and his products until today it stands as one of the foremost places in the country. To his skill, energy and far-seeing business ability are also due the places of his two sons, Alfred Burton and George Burton. Both young men are now in the front rank of our growers.

The political significance of Mr. Burton's retirement is the elimination of William Stevens from the cut flower world. For twenty-five years "Billy" Stevens has disposed of the greater part of Mr. Burton's product, all that came to this city. He was considered the hardest working salesman in our business; the quantity of flowers that he sold each year was enormous. It is understood that Mr. Stevens will see that the flowers reach the market next season in the best possible condition. The further effects of this change are that the Leo Niessen Co. will receive the cut of an additional 30,000 Beauty plants, besides cypripediums, Killarneys, etc., grown on this place.

Various Notes.

The floral social event of last week was the wedding of Mrs. Muth and Richard Umphried. Mrs. Muth conducts a retail flower store at Fifth and Fairmount avenue, while Mr. Umphried is a bulwark of the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co. Immediately after the wed-

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The Market.

Business has been good for this season of the year. During the last week several funerals have made a slight activity among the down-town florists. Outdoor work is demanding considerable attention, and the fight to exterminate the insect pests is being waged vigorously. Prices are normal and the supply of all kinds of stock is fully equal to the demand.

Various Notes.

A special meeting of the Rhode Island Horticultural Society has been called for Saturday evening, July 19, at 7 o'clock, at the Mathewson Street M. E. church, for the election of new members.

William Hay is cutting some choice roses at his range in Oaklawn. He is making extensive improvements about his place this summer.

Maurice Miller has completely renovated his store at 637 Westminster street and painted the exterior as well as the interior.

The family of George W. Williams is at Prudence Park, at their cottage, for the summer.

Mr. and Mrs. James B. Canning, 347 Smith street, are occupying their summer cottage on Sea View avenue, Highland Beach, for the remainder of the season.

W. S. Pino spent the week end following the Fourth with relatives in Worcester, Mass.

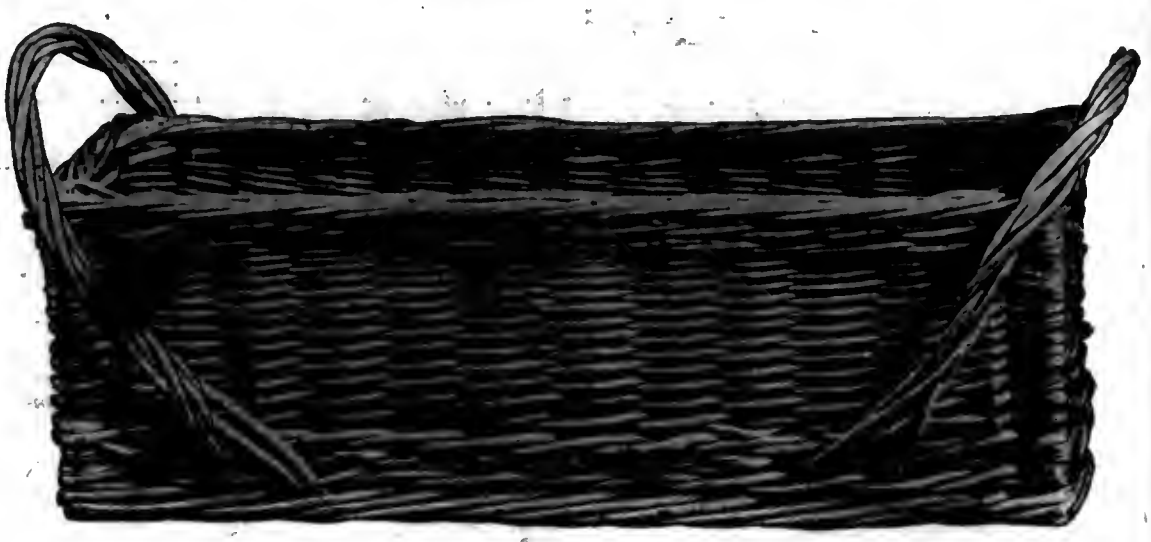
Charles H. Hunt, 127 Burnside street, is busy benching his mums, of which he intends growing a larger number than ever before.

Mrs. A. J. Olsen, of East Providence, is cutting large quantities of carnations, which are unusually good for this season.

Timothy McCarthy, with T. O'Connor, was registered at the Manissee House, at Block Island, last week, where he is spending his vacation.

Thomas Curley, 15 Harkness street, took an automobile party to Newport last week and visited several of the large estates there.

W. S. Fiske, of W. E. Barrett & Co., and family are at Prudence island, at their seaside cottage, for the summer.



M. F. Pollock, of Franklin street, is making extensive repairs at the office and greenhouses.

M. Macnair, 322 Weybosset street, has been having a novel and attractive window display. The large corner window is arranged as a miniature pond, in which are about a dozen ducklings, with a suitable lot of greenery all about.

Walter S. Sword and wife, of Valley Falls, are leaving the last of this month on a vacation trip to St. John, N. B.

The decorations for the reception given by Samuel P. Colt, president of the United States Rubber Co., at his country home at Bristol, in honor of his brother, Senator LaBaron B. Colt, were furnished by Samuel Kinder & Bro., of Bristol, and were among the most elaborate ever seen here. This city and Newport were requisitioned for palms for the occasion.

Charles H. Hunt, 127 Burnside street, had a narrow escape from serious injury

YONKERS, N. Y.

The Yonkers Horticultural Society held its regular monthly meeting in Hollywood Inn July 3. Howard Nichols read an interesting paper on "The Sweet Pea; Its Origin and Culture." A lively discussion followed, some favoring sowing in the fall, with winter protection, while others thought as good results could be had by sowing in pots and boxes under glass in the spring. Harry Wells was awarded the prize for collection of sweet peas, presented by Mr. Nichols, also a cultural certificate for Telegraph cucumbers

The Market.

Business last week was slow; in fact, it was the worst week we have struck so far. Only one day in the whole week was worthy of mention, July 10. It was the eightieth birthday of a lady who was a great lover of flowers, and most of her many gifts came from the flower shops.

The exceedingly hot weather we have had has made the indoor flowers extremely poor. The outdoor stock is coming along slowly but as well as one could expect, considering the hot and dry weather. There are some good gladioli to be had, such as Victoria, America, Francis King and Pink Beauty, all of which are ready sellers. Asters are coming in, but the supply of good ones is limited and sells up clean. There are also lots of good hardy phloxes and pond lilies to be had on this market.

Various Notes.

L. S. Landis has a house of Kaiserins in good condition, which he has been cutting and finds ready sellers. He has about a thousand plants. He has also a fine house of smilax; the strings are long but a little light as yet.

At George Goldbach's the window is handsomely decorated with light pink lupines, Pink Beauty gladioli and Japanese carnations. C. F. E.

The Market.

Midsummer dullness continues to reign in cut flower circles. Many growers have discontinued all shipments; others are sending in only small lots, while many are too busy planting their houses, rebuilding and getting work pushed ahead, so that they can go to the S. A. F. convention or to their summer mountain cottages, to trouble shipping in flowers at prevailing prices. Roses are of poor quality, as is but natural after such a spell of warm weather, and prices are hardly quotable. Some good Kaiserins, however, sell well. Carnations are small, poor and cheap. Sweet peas under glass are over and the outdoor stock, while plentiful, is short-stemmed, owing to the dry weather. Gypsophila is abundant and finer. The double form of paniculata sells best, as it is a fine keeper compared with the single. Outdoor gladioli are arriving, also a few asters, Early Dawn and Queen of the Market. Valley, lilies, marguerites, bachelor's buttons and other flowers are all rather slow sale. Cattleyas also move somewhat slowly. Gigas, Mendelli, Mossiæ, Dowiana and Harrisoniæ are all coming in. Some nice summer gardenias are arriving. Sales of green stock are at almost rock bottom now. Shipments to seaside and mountain resorts will, it is believed, help prices a little by another week.

Various Notes.

Norris F. Comley, of Lexington, made a large exhibit of a fine new forcing tomato at the sweet pea exhibition. Mr. Comley has five houses of this variety in heavy crop now, which are a great sight.

Arrangements are perfected for the coming picnic of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston, to be held at Cunningham park, East Milton, on Wednesday, July 23. An attractive sport list has been prepared, and there are some splendid prizes. Of special interest will be the obstacle race, fat men's race, half mile race and baseball games. It is hoped every club member and his friends, ladies of course included, will go to the park early and stay late. Certainly there is no more beautiful place near Boston for a picnic than Cunningham park.

W. J. Thurston, manager of the Boston Flower Exchange, was married July 3 to Miss Katherine Mary Bulger at the bride's home in East Boston. The young couple were well remembered by their friends and left on an extended trip July 12. On their return they will reside at 821 Centre street, Jamaica Plain, Mass.

At Thomas F. Galvin's Tremont street store attractive displays of hardy liliums, herbaceous plants, etc., from the Mount Desert Nurseries, Bar Harbor, Me., are great attractions. Frequent changes arrive and something good is always to be seen.

Mr. Rosenthal, of the Boston Cut Flower Co., is enthusiastic over his suc-

The Southwestern Market.

The cut flower market was anything but pleasing last week. There was considerable business for funerals, but only a little stock came in and the wholesalers cleaned it up each day before noon. The growers have commenced to pull out the old stock and are preparing the houses for early planting. Hence the market must depend principally on outdoor stock, which is not of good quality.

The best roses that come in are from outside growers. The trade is well supplied with extra good Beauties in all grades. Killarneys and Richmonds have to be cut in tight bud, as the extremely hot weather is hard on them in transit. A considerable number of carnations were sent in during the week, but they were small in flower and short in stem. The demand for these was heavy, especially for the whites.

Gladioli are limited in quantity as yet. The dry weather has kept them back. The local growers send in a lot each morning, but they are cleaned up at from $6 to $10 per hundred for choice. Last year at this time the market was glutted with them and the local growers were shipping to the Chicago market, but this is not the case so far this year. Easter lilies sell well. Asters are plentiful, but of poor quality. There is a large supply of outdoor flowers.

Club Meeting.

The monthly meeting of the Florists' Club was held on Thursday afternoon, July 10, at the home of J. F. Ammann, at Edwardsville, Ill. This proved to be one of the biggest, best and most enthusiastic meetings held by the club in many months.

Thirty-five members met at 12:30 at the Eads bridge, where a special car was waiting to carry them to Edwardsville. They arrived there at 2 o'clock and were met at the station by Mr. Ammann and members of his company, and escorted to his home, a block away, where they were joined by a number from Belleville, who raised the total attendance to nearly fifty. An inspection of this well kept place showed that all the houses had been planted and that the young stock of roses, carnations and mums was in fine condition. This tour of the houses was a great treat to all the growers.

The meeting was called to order at 3 o'clock, on the lawn in front of the greenhouses, under large shade trees, with F. H. Weber presiding and with all the other officers in attendance.

Chairman Ossiek, of the trustees, told about the arrangements for the coming florists' picnic.

H. C. Irish, chairman of the flower show committee, then made a full report of the workings of his committee and stated that there was every prospect of a grand flower show in the fall.

He introduced Frank Robinson, manager of the Coliseum, who placed before the members a preliminary list for the show, calling for $8,000 in premiums. The management of the show was to be in the hands of the Coliseum Co. and all the florists would have to do would be to get up a fund of $2,000 to be used for prizes for window displays during flower show week. This proposition was accepted by the members and a committee of twenty was appointed to help in carrying it into effect.

William Bouche and Frank Robinson made applications for membership.

The nomination of officers resulted as follows: President, W. J. Pilcher, C. C. Young and Edwin Denker; vice-president, Adolph Jaenicke and Henry Blixen; secretary, J. J. Beneke; treasurer, W. C. Smith; for a three-year term as trustee, Frank Windler, M. Moran and C. Bergstermann.

Edwin Denker, state vice-president of the S. A. F., announced that the official route from St. Louis to the Minneapolis convention would be via the Streckfus steamboat line, on the steamer Quincy, which leaves here on Thursday, August 14, and arrives at St. Paul on Monday, August 17. The round trip will cost $28, $32 or $38, according to the location of the staterooms. This includes all meals. Mr. Denker advised the members to make their reservations at once. The meeting was then closed.

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

An account of the sweet pea show at Portland, Ore., will be found in the body of this issue, following the report of the Boston show.

San Diego, Cal.—At a meeting of the new board of directors of the San Diego Floral Association July 2, L. A. Blochman was elected president to succeed Alfred D. Robinson. Miss K. O. Sessions was reëlected vice-president and G. T. Keene secretary. Alfred D. Robinson was elected editor of the association's monthly magazine, California Garden.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

The Market.

A few days of real summer weather and everyone who can go is off for the country. All the stores are more or less short-handed at present, but the absence of a few clerks is not felt at this time, nor will it be, until there is a decided change for the better in business. Not that it is any worse than it usually is at this time, but the poor quality of the stock and the poorer keeping cause hardships that are not often experienced in California. Roses of all kinds show a tendency to smallness and poor color. Carnations, especially the red varieties, are also not up to form or color. The hot weather to a certain extent favors the growers more than the retailers, because stock has to be renewed much oftener than is usually the case at this season of the year.

Prices have advanced for the better grades of stock and declined for the poorer stock. Sweet peas, gladioli, dahlias and other outside stock are of second quality, but with the return of our cool summer breezes we may expect both a resumption of business and a resumption of the supply of good flowers.

Various Notes.

George C. Perkins, of Newark, N. Y., who has been in this locality for several days, has turned eastward again.

Notice of the death of Robert J. Trumbull, at San Rafael, Cal., is given in this week's obituary column. G.

LOS ANGELES, CAL.

The Market.

The "heated term," or what comes nearest to it in this city and environments, is now on and everyone who can makes for the mountains or the ocean. This causes a dull season for the ordinary cut flower business, but that for funeral work has been well maintained and there is no great amount of stock going to waste. In the middle of the day the temperature is high in the sun, some of our local papers even acknowledging a temperature as high as 76 degrees, but it cools off in the afternoon and evening and there is never a night when a good blanket is a discomfort. The man who has no blanket is the one who becomes uncomfortable.

Roses from inside are decidedly on the short side and are poor, especially whites. Carnations are only of fair quality and the only flowers that are first-class are gladioli, valley and orchids. The statices, white, yellow and blue, are being carted around in the full sunlight in open wagons, presumably to show their lasting qualities. Centaureas are still in full supply; sweet peas hold out well and there are plenty of small flowers in general.

Flower Show at Germain Store.

A free flower show was held in the store of the Germain Seed & Plant Co., on Main street, July 10 and following days. The show was gotten up by P. D. Barnhart, who always works assiduously for the public good on such an occasion. He succeeded in getting together a most interesting collection of cut shrubs, herbaceous and other flowers, all of which were correctly labeled and well staged. The center of this large store makes a fine setting for such a show and the room was crowded with interested visitors. Great credit is due Mr. Barnhart for his work in this connection, for such shows have an educational value that eventually redounds to the good of the trade as a whole, and it is to such men as Mr. Barnhart, who works quietly and diligently for the good of the craft generally, that much of the success of California horticulture is due.

Among the rarer things shown were a fine variety of Erythrina speciosa from Mr. Sturtevant, of Hollywood; also a number of choice melaleucas from the Huntington estate and from Mr. Hart, of Sierra Madre. Some elegant Spencer sweet peas from the Routzahn Seed Co., of Arroyo Grande, and a collection of fruit from the Pioneer Nursery, of Monrovia, were also included.

Various Notes.

Murata & Co. have now the entire basement under the store at 751 South Broadway, which gives them far more space, better light and greatly improved premises in every way. The office and ice-box have been moved to the front, where artificial light is not needed, and shelving for boxes and other utilities are being installed. Mr. Murata says that shipping business keeps up well, notwithstanding the heat.

The H. N. Gage Co. is busy at the Montebello ranch, lifting bulbs of various kinds, and they are surely fine looking stock. Some of the finest Paper White narcissi I have seen were being handled recently, while the freesias, Star of Bethlehem and others, are all fine of their kind. Mr. Gage says he is convinced that as good bulbs can be grown right here as in Holland and can be ripened earlier, and he prophesies a large trade eventually with the eastern growers, for forcing.

Vacations are in order and a number of well known faces are missing from their usual places.

Business keeps up well at the Los Angeles Flower Market and the stock handled is as fine as any in the city. Fred Sperry is now a lonesome bachelor, as Mrs. Sperry has gone to Chicago on a vacation.

At Wright's Flower Shop business keeps up at its usual clip, notwithstanding the heat, and the fact that some of the staff are now away on vacation makes it pretty hard for those remaining. A fine wedding decoration last week at the Van Nuys home consisted largely of trimming the garage, 28x114 feet, with oak branches festooned with pink roses. The yard, 114x250 feet, was also decorated and formed the setting for the table, to seat twenty-four guests. The house was treated with rubrum lilies, except one parlor, where American Beauty roses were used. The bridesmaids carried French canes with suspended showers; the bride had a lovely shower of white orchids and valley. The whole of the lighting and illuminating effects were under Tom Wright's personal supervision.

Funeral work starts on Monday and keeps up all the week at the Goldenson store, according to J. Gordon. Mr. Goldenson is still on jury duty, but he is no ordinary juryman, as he walks up the street in that new white suit, the cynosure of all eyes, a la Mark Twain.

Dieterich & Turner are cutting extra select Sunburst roses from young stock. Killarney Queen is also in fine order. All the young stock, in fact, is perfect in every way.

Mrs. Fred Howard has been north to attend the funeral of her father, who died recently.

The death of Robert Leithead, a pioneer gardener of Pasadena, is reported in this week's obituary column.

H. R. Richards.

The Market.

Business has now assumed its usual summer aspect and there is little trade in flowers of any kind. Considerable outside shipping is being done, but there are prospects of a dull time the next few weeks. Carnations are abundant and keep their quality better than usual at this time. Sweet peas are down to bed rock, 75 cents a thousand. Other outside flowers are plentiful, but roses are scarcer than they have been for a month. Most of the growers are busy replanting their houses with carnations.

Various Notes.

At the invitation of the East Seattle Floral Co., a large number of florists were present at its establishment at East Seattle July 6, to celebrate the birthday of Joseph Stuber. To commemorate the occasion, he was presented with a handsome silver cup subscribed for by his friends in the trade. He is one of our most popular growers and everyone present was enthusiastic to think his popularity should be so fittingly recognized.

Sidney Tomlin has taken a lease of the Gash place at Greenlake, where he purposes to grow carnations. All in the trade wish him well in his new venture.

The wind on the afternoon of July 6 was remarkable for this region and did considerable damage, especially around Madison park where it assumed the violence of a small cyclone. C. Hoffmeister was the worst sufferer; about a thousand lights were destroyed at his plant. Carl Melby was also in the line of it, but his loss was not so heavy.

One new member was initiated at the monthly meeting of the Florists' Club, July 8. The attendance was not quite so heavy as usual, but, considering the time of year, this is not surprising. Arrangements are in progress to hold the annual picnic about September 15.

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

Business is quiet in every line, with only an occasional funeral or social affair to break the monotony. Vacations are the usual topic of conversation. There is plenty of stock to supply all the needs. Carnations are holding out nicely. Roses are poor, with the exception of Carnots and Kaiserins. There are a few Hillingdons and Sunbursts from the new stock. Sunburst will be grown more extensively this season, being popular among the elite. Outside stock is overplentiful. Sweet peas have been arriving in such a deluge that there seems to be no standard wholesale price. Auratum lilies are of good quality and are ready sellers. There is a general scarcity of blooming plants, gloxinias and hydrangeas being the only ones available. Valley seems to be plentiful enough to supply the local demand.

The greenhouses are the places of greatest activity, on account of the transplanting of the rose and carnation stock and the cleaning up of the houses in general. The mums are looking fine and are well established.

Various Notes.

Frank McCabe, representing the A. L. Randall Co., Chicago, was in town last week, on his initial trip. He has the pleasing personality which is a valued asset in salesmanship.

William Zimmerman is on the list of the "newly weds."

William Dorsch recently made a settlement for $12,000 with the Oregon Electric Co., whose road is to be built across his ranch, taking about four acres in all. It was necessary to remove several outbuildings to make room for the right of way.

Sam Roake, Jr., is also listed in the benedict class.

Herbert & Fleishauer, of McMinnville, recently sunk a well to a depth of 451 feet. Water was struck at forty-five feet, but the depth was increased in order to get a greater flow. However, no moisture was found lower than 150 feet.

cesses in the retailers' department at the great sweet pea show. Mr. Rosenthal always takes defeat philosophically and his late successes were well merited.

The garden committee of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society visited the nurseries of R. & J. Farquhar & Co. at Dedham last week to inspect the magnificently flowered field of Lilium myriophyllum. A special certificate was awarded in recognition of this lily's desirability as a hardy garden plant as well as a pot plant.

The sweet pea show occupied the attention of many of the growers last week and notebooks and pencils were plentiful at the show. The sweet pea show has passed and now convention talk is being indulged in and every effort is being made to send a goodly delegation from Boston.

Mr. and Mrs. Martin Wax entertained all the employees of Wax Bros. at their apartments in the Hemenway Chambers July 9, in honor of their recent wedding. A collation was served, vocal and instrumental music was furnished by Mrs. Wax, who is a splendid entertainer, and a general good time is reported.

The Market.

Business is fair for the season. Flowers are scarce, both indoors and outdoors. Everything is almost dried up, as we have had but little rain the last two months.

Various Notes.

The Wm. Blackman Floral Co. reports good business, with a scarcity of flowers. At the greenhouses things are in good shape. One house of roses remained to be cut back, but all the others were in fine growth. Part of the carnations were planted and looking well. The other benches were being emptied and refilled. An air-pressure pump will be installed here.

Julius Niednagel is busy and short of flowers.

E. L. Niednagel is fast getting everything in good shape for the new season.

J. C. Elspermann and wife are away on a visit to Chicago and other places.

Louis Fritsch says business is good, but flowers are poor and scarce.

Miss Nellie Goodge is doing well and is kept busy with something right along. The outdoor stock requires considerable attention these hot, dry days, in order to keep growing. Asters are almost a failure. E. L. F.

Hornell, N. Y.—Albert King, who conducted a florists' shop in North Main street, is reported to have left this city.

Meridian, Miss.—A protest has been made by the citizens of this city against the erection of a greenhouse in McLemore cemetery by Mrs. J. E. Watts. It is alleged that some graves were disturbed in digging for the foundation.

It Pays

To Pacific Coast Florists:

What stock have you for sale to the trade? Is it moving as it should? No?

Then tell the trade about it by using the Pacific Coast Pages of The Review.

Pacific Coast advertisers almost invariably report good results. Like this:

Say! That ad's a humdinger for getting the business.—Everett Floral Co., Everett, Wash.

I sold all the Mum cuttings advertised, and you will not hear from me again until I can get some more stock ready. Shall root 100,000 Carnation cuttings for next season, as I know The Review will sell them for me.—Frank Wilhelm, Los Angeles, Cal.

Please cut out of our advertisement in The Review the cyclamen seedlings. We sold all our surplus cyclamen seedlings as a direct result of our advertisement in your paper.—Spokane Greenhouses (Inc.), Spokane, Wash.

We want to say that our last advertisement in The Review brought us orders from both the Atlantic and Pacific coasts. We had, strangely enough, on following days, orders from Salem, Ore., and from Salem, Mass.—State Floral Co., North Yakima, Wash.

We are well pleased with the results obtained by advertising in the Pacific Coast Department of The Review. We sold out clean and refused many orders. The Review surely gives results. —Van Slyke & Seamons, Tacoma, Wash.

THE first shipment of French bulbs is on the water, having left Marseilles in the Sant Anna July 8.

THE death of Robert J. Trumbull, one of the oldest seedsmen on the Pacific coast, is reported in this week's obituary column.

OTTO A. KNAPP, Lodi, O., reports that July 13 "hundreds of acres of onions were destroyed by hail in the famous Lodi garden, the largest onion farm in the world."

HEADQUARTERS of the Harper Seed Co., Goshen, Ind., are to be changed from the Mummert building to a one-story building, 22x66 feet which is to be erected on West Lincoln street.

FOR several years the acreage of radish in Michigan increased steadily, and rapidly, but for the last three years the acreage has been stationary; even a slight reduction this year.

THE onion acreage for seed, both the globe and the flat varieties, in the vicinity of Chillicothe, O., according to Schilder Bros., still are in excellent shape, with every prospect of a fine crop.

THE tariff bill was reported to the Senate July 11 in the exact form in which the trade paragraphs were printed in The Review of June 26. It is thought there will be no further changes before the bill becomes law.

THERE have been two good showers in the Chicago onion set district in the last week, but they were rather late to help the crop. After the sets have passed a certain stage rain results in a growth that makes thick necks.

FIRE destroyed the bluegrass seed cleaning plant of E. F. Spears & Sons, Paris, Ky., July 3. A great quantity of bluegrass seed, most of it already cleaned, was stored in the place. The loss is about $60,000, partly covered by insurance.

BURNETT BROS., seedsmen, now at 72 Cortlandt street, New York, have leased the property at 98 Chambers street, between Church street and Broadway. The lease is for a term of years, and provides for a long term extension, based on an appraisal to be made for Grace church, owner of the fee.

W. ATLEE BURPEE & Co., Philadelphia, have mailed the European trade an advance announcement of four new sweet peas for 1914, King White, Illuminator, Wedgewood and Empress Eugenie, stating that "King White is easily the most important new Spencer that has been introduced." Copies of the circular have gone to American catalogue houses.

FIELD'S YEAR.

The annual stockholders' meeting of the Henry Field Seed Co., Shenandoah, Ia., was held a few days ago, all the directors being reëlected. The directors reëlected officers and declared a dividend of six per cent. It was stated that the number of orders filled this season was 60,805, against 53,000 last season. Exclusively a catalogue business is done and work has been begun

PAGE'S PLANT'S PROSPERITY.

It is said that the establishment of which Charles N. Page is the head did a business this season amounting to $487,000, with approximately 207,000 orders.

The Iowa Seed Co., Des Moines, was organized just twenty-five years ago, and in its first year did a business of $28,000, but the real start was in 1865, when George A. Jewett opened a small seed store. S. L. Fuller bought it in 1870 and continued it until 1878, when he sold out to C. W. Dorr. Mr. Dorr was succeeded by E. T. Pierce, M. Kurtzweil and Charles N. Page, operating under the corporate title. In 1908 J. N. Albright, Geo. L. Kurtzweil and F. H. Page were admitted to interests in the company. In addition to its store and warehouse the company also has a greenhouse establishment representing an investment of $30,000, seven new houses having recently been added. At Altoona a farm of 120 acres is operated and over 1,000 acres are under seed crop on contract.

LIMITATIONS IN ADAPTATION.

"Any careful observer can not have failed to notice the material difference often seen in the character of plants of the same species, and even of the same garden variety, when grown on different soils and exposures, and that one plant will reach its most attractive and useful development where another, possibly of the same species, and even supposedly of the same variety, will develop but poorly," said W. W. Tracy, formerly with D. M. Ferry & Co., but now in the U. S. Department of Agriculture, in a recent address at Boston. "I think it needs no further discussion to show that in order to secure the most satisfactory results in quantity and form, we must plant seed which is not only uniformly of the varietal forms which will be most satisfactory but which has been so grown as to be the most perfectly adapted to that particular climate and soil, and for the particular use for which it was planted. We think this is not universally practiced by even our most careful planters. Growers from Maine to Florida depend upon California for their lettuce seed. The Boston grower who forces a crop in midwinter uses seed grown in the same California fields as that used by a Norfolk or Florida planter for an outdoor crop. If the variety and the stock was the best possible for use in one set of conditions it can hardly be the best possible for the other. We have found that by growing lettuce seed under glass we were enabled to select and breed from plants which did much better inside than otherwise equally good and carefully selected plants grown in seeds are all grown by myself and are offered in the following mixtures and separate colors:

KENILWORTH STRAIN—The flowers are of perfect form and substance: many of the immense flowers are from 3½ to 4 inches; it is a striking collection of beautiful colors and markings, rich with shades of red, brown, bronze, mahogany and many others too numerous to mention. Light, Medium or Dark Mixtures.

KENILWORTH SHOW—An extra fine strain of large flowers; the immense flowers are of circular form and great substance; a beautiful collection of colors and markings.

KENILWORTH CUT FLOWER MIXTURE—Is a distinct class by itself, surpassing all other strains as a cut flower or for exhibition purposes, for inside or outside growing: the large flowers are carried erect above the foliage on heavy stems, 7 or 8 inches long, in the most graceful manner, and stand the hot, dry weather well.

MASTERPIECE—A remarkable type; the curled, wavy petals giving the flower a double appearance, its large flowers of great substance, on long, strong stems.

ORCHID FLOWERED, Mixed—A dwarf free bloomer with a range of delicate colors that do not exist in any other pansies, a remarkable combination of light rose, shell pink, blush mauve, fawn, light brown, orange and chamois.

the open. We think that the success of such growers as Hittinger Bros., of Boston, and Dell Titus, of Irondequoit, is largely due to their use of strains of seed especially adapted to their local conditions and cultural practice, and that an interchange of seed would mean comparative failure to both.

"The first success of the melon growers at Rocky Ford was largely due to the use of carefully selected and locally grown seed especially adapted to their location, cultural methods, and, last but not least, shipping requirements. Nearly twenty years ago I visited a melon field in Rocky Ford with Col. Swink, the father of the melon industry in that section, and asked him to select for me ideal specimens, which he did, taking great care to select fruits uniformly of a certain distinct character; then a little later, when he selected some fruits to take home to eat, I called his attention to how different these were from the first selection, and he said the first fruit was the best for shipping and good enough to sell, but not such as he wanted for his own table. The Montreal melon is different in character and is grown and handled differently, but the growers, like those of Rocky Ford, use locally grown seed carefully tried and selected so as to secure the best possible adaptation to local conditions and requirements.

"No two farms are exactly alike in climate and productive energies, no two men will follow identical cultural methods, and the varietal character of a vegetable which will give the best satisfaction and profit on one farm and for one market will not be as satisfactory in another, so that the best possible results can only come from the use of seed from which it is possible for you to produce a superlative quality, at least of those vegetables upon which your reputation and profit chiefly depend.

"How can such seed be secured? I have had an intimate connection with American seedsmen for over thirty years and I believe them to be quite as honorable and considerate of their customers' needs as any class of merchants, but they are in business for the sake of personal profit rather than from altruistic motives, and can not be expected to push the sale, or to long continue to offer varieties or special stocks which afford them little or no profit. Often a certain variety can be depended upon to give a good yield of seed in one location, but rarely more than a light crop in another, although what seed you do get is apt (not certain) to yield a large crop of better quality in the second location than seed from the location which gives the larger seed crop. Can you expect the seedsman to persistently grow his seed in a location where the crop is apt to be a failure or to push the sale or long continue to offer a stock which affords him no profit? I have known of many instances where a variety or special stock materially better than that generally used has never come into the general planter's hands and has dropped out of cultivation because the seedsmen could not handle it with profit. Again, could a seedsman be expected to furnish distinct stocks of common sorts so grown as to be especially adapted to the conditions and wants of each of thousands of customers, many of those using only one ounce or two of seed?"

The Market.

This week's business shows little improvement on the report given last week. The temperature has gone down steadily and we are having cool weather for this time of the year. Stock is plentiful and cheap. Carnations and roses show the effect of the previous heat. The market is full and stock can hardly be given away, especially carnations, which are extremely poor. Roses are improving in quality and size and some fine American Beauties are on the market, but, owing to the large glut of flowers and the slowness of trade generally, prices are not good.

Some fine shipments of Harrisii lilies are being received, but callas are scarce. Valley is good, but not overplentiful. Sweet peas are poor and do not move readily. Coreopsis, candytuft, Shasta daisies, cornflowers and cosmos are among the lower-priced flowers and, being outdoor stock, are plentiful and cheap. There was a heavy demand for laurel and smilax last week. There is still a call for bedding stock and there is plenty on hand.

The Elks' Convention.

The Elks have been here in convention during the last week and there have been thousands of visitors to the city. The streets have been brilliantly illuminated with electrical emblems and thousands of flags and other bunting have adorned the houses and business places of the city. Everyone did his best to give the visitors a hearty welcome.

One of the many notable features was the floral and electrical parade held Tuesday evening, July 8. Nearly 200 automobiles took their places in the parade. The car exhibited by George T. Boucher exhausted a good quantity of American Beauty and red rambler roses, and was fashioned like a yacht and outlined with 100 electric light bulbs. The effect was pretty and rightly deserved the first prize for the most unique decoration. Another car which also won a first prize was that of George B. Hart. This was a pergola the frame of which was made of wire covered with white cloth and artistically decorated with a profusion of rambler roses and Asparagus plumosus. There were many other cars of great beauty, but our two florists are to be congratulated on carrying off the two first prizes. It is interesting to note that there are six Elks belonging to the Rochester Florists' Association.

Most of the florists have been interested in the convention, as will be noticed. H. E. Wilson had a good window display of purple and white flowers with ribbons to match. The Rochester Floral Co. had a large emblem, a clock face, thirty-six inches in diameter, made of paper cape flowers and chenille. Henry P. Neun had a mountain scene with a large herd of elks making their way into the valley. Crosman Bros. used two large emblems, wonderfully arranged and made entirely of seeds, their different colors making a beautiful contrast. The stores of J. B. Keller Sons and Salter Bros. were decorated also.

Various Notes.

J. H. Werdein has had four busy days playing in one of the city bands, boosting Denver.

H. E. Wilson had an enormous quantity of funeral work last Friday and Saturday.

Miss Ethel M. Phillips is away on her vacation, covering a period of six weeks.

BODDINGTON'S "QUALITY" CHRISTMAS-FLOWERING

Sweet Peas

WE ARE SUPER-HEADQUARTERS

All true stocks of Winter-flowering Sweet Peas will be scarce this season. Some varieties are a total failure owing to the exceptional season in California this Spring. Our advice to intending planters is to order at once.

Mr. Wm. Sim, Cliftondale, Mass., the great Winter Sweet Pea Specialist, sows our seed almost exclusively.

Our stocks of Christmas-flowering Sweet Peas have stood the test for years, and we can refer you to the largest growers of this increasingly popular flower, as to the trueness and quality of our seed, earliness of blooming period and strength and habit of plants.

The following varieties are the "best by test" and include Zvolanek's and our own introductions, grown for seed, from selected stocks by the leading California grower and specialist in Sweet Peas.

Our output last year was nearly 3000 lbs. No kicks and plenty of testimonials as to quality, germination and trueness to type.

GO IT ALONE!

We have told you our story of Silver Pink Snapdragon, and now you will please note the verification of it by photograph and patrons. The photo shows a section of a bed taken last Memorial Day. It had been in crop for six weeks, yielding a good daily cut, and, by the way, is still doing good business—a continuous performance. Sow seeds in July and August for same results. The following letters prove our story and show that Silver Pink does the same for other folks:

Northport, L. I., N. Y., July 8, 1913.
Dear Sir: Enclosed please find check for $2.50, for which you will kindly forward 3 pkts. of Silver Pink Snap. seed. The only kind to grow; have tried them all, but SILVER PINK will go it alone this year.
Yours truly. Arthur Cockcroft.

Lewis Manor Farms.
Perrysburg, O., July 6.
Dear Sir: Had great luck with your Silver Pink Snapdragon and want three (3) pkts. more, for which am enclosing check.
Yours truly, Wm. G. Lewis.

See my ad for the last three weeks for other proof. Silver Pink from seed produces TWO blossoms where formerly one grew, which means double the money on the same space. Notwithstanding this fact, I made the price low and will keep it there. Seed, $1.00 per pkt. of over 500; 3 pkts., $2.50, delivered. PLANTS for FALL-FLOWERING now ready at $4.00 per 100, $35.00 per 1000. These are strong, well branched stock, ready for the bench. Cultural directions with order.

NEWPORT, R. I.

The Horticultural Society.

At a meeting of the Newport Horticultural Society July 8, a vote of thanks was extended to Mrs. William Storrs Wells, expressing the appreciation of President Andrew S. Meikle and the members of the society for her kindness in having out-of-town exhibitors, judges and helpers at the recent flower show entertained with a supper.

The society also voted to hold its fall dahlia exhibition in September, the show to include plants, flowers, vegetables and fruits. A special meeting will be held July 22 to adopt a premium list. Several special premiums have already been promised. An invitation from the Rhode Island Horticultural Society to take part in its sweet pea show July 19 at Providence was received.

A certificate of merit was awarded to a new white climbing rose, a seedling from a pink rambler. It is called Robertson's Rambler and is a strong, rampant grower, possessing strong canes and heavy foliage. The flower is white; the individual flowers are not so large as those of the white Dorothy Perkins.

Various Notes.

Gibson Bros., Malbone road, have just received a large importation of palms, bay trees and hydrangeas.

There is much concern among the florists here regarding the high price of ice, the present schedule calling for $9 per ton. There has been an advance of nearly $2 per ton during the last week.

Arend Brandt has recently demolished one large range of houses, and is offering the block of land for sale.

Alexander McWilliams, who has been the head gardener of the I. M. Davis estate for many years, has resigned and is to pay a visit to his old home in Scotland, accompanied by Mrs. McWilliams.

Henry Hohle, with Alexander McConnell, of New York, is enjoying a two weeks' vacation here. W. H. M.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Officers for 1913-14: Pres., J. B. Pilkington, Portland, Ore.; Vice-Pres., Henry B. Chase, Huntsville, Ala.; Sec'y, John Hall, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., Peter Youngers, Geneva, Neb. Thirty-ninth annual meeting, Cleveland, O., June 23 to 26, 1913.

PACKING houses on the nursery of E. Moody & Sons, Lockport, N. Y., were burned July 3. It is supposed that tramps started the blaze.

WM. A. PETERSON, proprietor of Peterson Nursery, Chicago, is in Yellowstone with his son, while Ben Gage, Mr. Peterson's right hand man, is in New England with his family.

The offices of the Albany Nurseries, Inc., of Albany, Ore., have been moved from the Schmitt-Hunt building to the fourth floor of the new First National Bank building.

THE tariff bill was reported to the Senate July 11 in the exact form in which the trade paragraphs were printed in The Review of June 26. It is thought there will be no further changes before the bill becomes law.

HENRY MEUSCHKE, proprietor of the Saxonwald Nursery, Castle Shannon, Pa., and his wife were passengers on the big Hamburg-American steamship, Imperator, when it started on its maiden voyage June 25. This is Mr. Meuschke's first visit to his native land, Saxony, which he left over forty-five years ago.

IN IOWA.

"We have just closed a most satisfactory season's business, being the largest in our history," says C. E. Gardner, treasurer of the Gardner Nursery Co., Osage, Ia. "We have had to greatly increase our plantings," he added, "and among other things we have thirty-eight acres set solidly to the new everbearing strawberries. We have been working with them for the last five years and our prophecy is that these new everbearers will take the place of the common, once-a-year-fruiting varieties within the next few years.

"We enjoy reading the nursery notes in The Florists' Review and would be glad to see that department of your valuable paper made larger."

DUTY ON APPLE SEEDS.

Under the present tariff law apple seeds pay a duty of 10 cents per pound, which is equivalent to $4 per bushel. Under the new bill as it came from the House the duty would have become ten per cent ad valorem, which would have been an extremely sharp reduction, as the present rate is equal to from thirty to forty per cent, depending on the market price in Europe. Under the bill as it now stands before the Senate, the rate will be 5 cents per pound, or a reduction of just fifty per cent in the duty to be paid, $2 per bushel instead of $4.

The Senate bill is considered as quite likely to become the law, and there are those who look upon this reduction in duty as particularly unfortunate at this time. A heavy plant was made last year, resulting in a surplus of seedlings, and any reduction in the cost of French seed it is thought will tend to increase the plant at a time when a reduction in the production of apple trees is to be desired, rather than an increase.

INSPECTION IN COLORADO.

The report of the state entomologist of Colorado for the year 1912, which has recently been published, gives an account of the working-out of the nursery inspection law in that state. During the season of 1912 there were county horticultural inspectors at work in fifteen counties, less than one-fourth of the total number of counties in the state. They inspected the stock from 284 nurseries outside the state. Certificates were issued to thirty-four Colorado nurseries.

The work is not considered of great importance by the county commissioners and they have not therefore appropriated sufficient money hitherto to make it worth while. Instead of setting aside enough funds to insure honest inspection by a man trained for the work, they have hired men for a short time during the season. Although in some counties it would not be practicable to devote a large sum of money to this undertaking, in others men would have to be hired and paid a salary by the year to accomplish it properly.

During the last season the principal work of the inspectors was that of inspecting the nursery stock shipped into their counties in the spring. Crown gall, San Jose scale and Putnam scale infested the majority of the trees which were condemned and destroyed. About two per cent of the fruit trees inspected were condemned. Many shipments of fruit trees which had not been fumigated before their entrance into the state, as the law requires, were fumigated when received in the county and the bill rendered to the nurserymen shipping the trees. Counties not having inspectors are liable to become the dumping ground for the undesirable stock of unreliable nurserymen, Clarence P. Gillette, the state entomologist, believes, and he is urging a more thorough and complete inspection throughout the state.

GLEN COVE, N. Y.

The regular monthly meeting of the Nassau County Horticultural Society was held at Pembroke hall, Glen Cove, July 9, with a fair attendance. President E. J. Brown spoke feelingly of the death of Thomas Harrison, a former president of the society, and appointed a committee to draw up resolutions of condolence. James Gladson, Glen Cove, was elected to active membership and two applications were received. Special prizes for the fall shows were offered by the Stumpp & Walter Co., New York, and the Julius Roehrs Co., Rutherford, N. J. H. Boettcher, gardener to W. Hester, Glen Cove, exhibited some fine sweet peas and was awarded a certificate of culture for a collection of eight vases and first prize for vases of pink, white and red.

It was decided to hold the dahlia show October 8. All classes will be open. Several special prizes are offered for dahlias, vegetables and outdoor flowers. Anyone interested can have a schedule by applying to the secretary, James Macdonald, Glen Cove. Prizes will be offered at the next meeting, August 13, for two cucumbers, twelve asters and twelve gladioli. J. M.

WHOLESALE GROWER, IMPORTER AND SHIPPER OF POT PLANTS

DETROIT, MICH.

Various Notes.

For the first time in the history of their business, several of the retail florists in the heart of the city are closing their stores at 6 p. m., sharp, Saturdays. The starters of this movement are Messrs. Fetters, Breitmeyer, Taepke, Schroeter and Brown. No doubt others will follow suit.

Hufford & Maebius have closed their branch in the Broadway market for the summer.

On Tuesday, July 22, the members of the Detroit Florists' Club will be the guests of Thomas F. Browne, at Greenfield, Mich., for the afternoon and evening. A ball game will be played in the afternoon; then lunch will be served and the meeting will be held early in the evening. Autos will be available for those wishing to visit Albert Stahelin's greenhouses. This kind invitation from Mr. Browne is not limited to members of the club; any florist who wants to spend an enjoyable and profitable half day with his fellow tradesmen is entirely welcome.

F. J. Knecht, of Ft. Wayne, Ind., was a recent visitor.

Albert Sylvester, of the Michigan Cut Flower Exchange, moved into his beautiful new bungalow July 14.

Robert Jean, proprietor of the Scribner Floral Co., was married July 8 and is now spending his honeymoon on an extended automobile trip through the western part of Michigan, Wisconsin and Illinois.

Albert Stahelin took a trip to Toledo on Sunday, July 13, principally to visit some of the carnation and vegetable growers. He now devotes part of his immense plant to tomato growing and his crop is exceptionally fine.

Miss Martha Kurzhols, of Schroeter's, will spend the next three weeks at Saginaw with relatives. H. S.

The Market.

Trade has been fair, notwithstanding the extremely hot weather that we have been having. There has been considerable funeral work, but outside of that it is decidedly quiet. Stock has been scarce; there are not enough lilies to go around. Shasta daisies have been plentiful and sell well. Beauties, roses and carnations have also been selling well. Indoor peas are a thing of the past and the outdoor ones are not arriving in any quantity. The demand for valley and orchids is light. Green goods are in fair supply.

Various Notes.

Robert Fohl has had a successful season with his Shasta daisies this year, having cut them by the thousands for the market.

Walter Hanson, formerly with E. A. Nelson, has taken a position on the J. A. Alison estate.

Walter Mott spent a day with the trade last week. Mr. Mott's old friends were glad to see this genial traveling man once again, as it has been more than fifteen years since Mr. Mott made this territory.

C. R. Greene, with A. Wiegand's Sons' Co., is going down among the hills of Brown county to spend his vacation. H. L. W.

Monmouth, Ill.—Charles A. Hewitt has closed a contract for two greenhouses, 30x75 feet, to be added to his plant this summer. When these are completed he will have 20,000 square feet of glass.

FIELD-GROWN PLANTS
READY NOW.

We do a very large business each season on carnation cuttings and field-grown plants because we never ship out stock we would not be willing to plant on our own benches. The field-grown plants are ready now. This is not surplus stock, left after selecting the stock for our own use, but is stock grown especially for sale to the trade. If we did not know it was good stock, strong, stocky, well branched, and free from disease, we should not offer it for sale. Last year's customers will be back—and this is an invitation to those who have not yet bought here to order of us this year.

"PEONIES FOR PLEASURE."

This book of "Peonies for Pleasure" gives information on peony history, soil and plants to use, how and when to plant, fertilizers and how to apply, and describes the most extensive planting of really valuable peonies ever gathered together under the sun; describes old and new as well as the plebeian and aristocrat of the peony family. If you want information on the plant that stands next to the rose in beauty, that is practically known to the amateur as simply a red, white and pink peony, then send for "Peonies for Pleasure."

We also issue a special wholesale price list of peonies for fall sales, 1913. Send for both of these booklets.

SWEET PEA TRIALS.

Three publications have been issued, and the writer is rapidly putting into final form all the descriptive notes on varieties. This material will be ready for publication at the close of the present season. The publications which we have already issued have had a gratifying reception not only in this country but in England.

This year the seeds which were received for trial were sown singly in 3-inch pots during the last week in March. Each pot was carefully labeled, so that no mixing of varieties in handling could possibly happen. The pots were placed in the greenhouse until germination occurred and then were transferred to coldframes, where they remained until they were planted in the field. The preparation of the land was similar to that which we have practiced heretofore. There was no rain for three weeks after transplanting, and for a time we thought the chances of success unfavorable. However, the plants grew well after the rains and began to bloom about June 20. This year we have abandoned the use of string as a support, and have employed wire netting. This serves the purpose well, except in the case of some varieties which required tying to the netting. In addition to the 150 varieties sown in pots, about 100 varieties were planted in the open ground. Owing to the late, cold season these were not planted until April 18, and at the present time only the Blanche Ferry and its near relatives are in bloom in this part of the trial grounds. On the other hand, the plants from seed sown in pots are now blooming freely and are making a splendid show. This affords an excellent illustration of the relative earliness of the same varieties grown by the two systems.

Among the varieties of recent introduction now growing on the trial grounds are:

Barbara, Bertie Usher, Betty, Blue Jacket, Captivation, Spencer, Chastity, Coronation, Cyril Unwin, Dobbie's Cream, Edith Taylor, Irish Belle, John Ridd, Lady Evelyn Eyre, Lady Knox, Leslie Imber, Margaret Madison, Loyalty, Mauve Queen, May Campbell, Melba, Millie Moslin Spencer, Mrs. Cuthbertson, Mrs. Heslington, Mrs. T. W. Warren, Orion, Pearl Gray Spencer, Primrose Beauty, Princess May, Red Star, Rosabelle, Scarlet Empress, Scarlet Emperor, Vermilion Brilliant, Winifred Unwin, Zarina Spencer, Andrew Aitken, April, Brunette, Bolton's Scarlet, Charm, Clematis, Dobbie's Scarlet and Dobbie's True Lavender, Earl of Lovelace, Ella Kelway, Felicity, Gustav Hamel, Grace Darling, Helen Pierce Spencer, Inspector, Lillian, Laura Wyatt, Lila, Lord Nelson Spencer, Lady Miller, May Perrett Spencer, Mrs. E. Cowdy, Mrs. Reginald Hill, and Southcote Blue.

At the present time, so far as we have studied the varieties, it appears that those of merit are:

May Campbell—Marbled carmine on cream ground.
Charm (Fordhook Fairy)—White suffused with delicate blush lilac.
Orchid—Rich, deep lavender suffused with pink.
Dobbie's Scarlet—Brilliant scarlet.
Lady Evelyn Eyre—A large blush variety.
Lila—A distinct variety; standards faint lilac deeper at midrib; wings light primrose.
Orion—Crimson.
Mrs. Cuthbertson—Rose pink standard and white flushed, pale-rose wings.
Walter P. Wright—Bluish lavender.

At the present date we would report that Inspector is better than Melba, and that both are better than Earl Spencer. The former shows a good percentage of doubles.

Dobbie's Scarlet appears to be the best of the bright scarlets, although Red Star is good.

Margaret Madison is doubtless better than Flora Norton Spencer. Leslie Imber and Southcote Blue are no better than the latter.

Helen Pierce Spencer, May Farquhar, Lord Nelson Spencer and Millie Maslin Spencer are good, but will report on them later.

Loyalty, Bertie Usher and Blue Jacket are blue-striped varieties.

Cyril Unwin resembles Arthur Green.

There are several cream-pink, white, orange, maroon and mauve varieties, but nothing which at this date is superior to the standard varieties.

These brief notes are subject to possible revision after further study, and the members of the society are referred to our forthcoming report for complete descriptions and comparisons of varieties.

The recently organized department of floriculture proposes to continue to test new varieties of sweet peas each season and hopes that the work which has been carried on may justify a continuance of the excellent support which the American Sweet Pea Society has given the work hitherto carried on at Cornell.

Greenhouse Heating.

SUBSCRIBERS are invited to write the Editor of this Department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. But please do not ask The Review to make a choice of apparatus for you. The greenhouse heating equipment advertised in this paper is, we believe, the best for the trade to buy, and each article the best in the special field of its adaptation.

A CLOSED SYSTEM.

I note in The Review for July 3 a reference to a closed system of greenhouse heating, using hot water under pressure. Will you please tell me how this can be done with a regular hot water system? E. L.

The system is "closed" with a mercury seal, sometimes advertised in The Review as a "regulator" and sometimes as a "generator." The effect is to seal the outlet to the expansion tank, so that the water must become hotter than otherwise would be the case to push aside the seal and escape to the tank. The device keeps the water under a pressure greater than the atmospheric pressure and increases the heating capacity of the boiler by permitting the water to be heated to a considerably higher temperature than would be possible under atmospheric pressure. The regulator or generator can be used in connection with any boiler, but the manufacturer should be consulted as to whether or not the boiler was designed to stand the additional strain the system puts on it. BOILER INSPECTION.

We have two boilers, one a thirty horse-power marine, and one a forty horse-power tubular. Up to the present time we have carried no boiler insurance. There have been several agents here within the last two months, all of whom have stated that we are compelled by law to have our boilers inspected or be liable to fine, the only alternative being insurance in their respective companies, in which case we would be immune from inspection or fines. Personally we fail to see the advantage of carrying such insurance, as each policy we have seen states definitely that we can recover damages only in case of explosion of any part of the boiler caused by pressure. Our system being the old gravity one, you will

Superior in Name Superior in Fact

A BOILER costs enough so that every florist should be anxious to get the most possible for his money; he should closely investigate several styles before choosing. The more you investigate the more sure it is that you'll buy the SUPERIOR STANDARD. It was designed specially for greenhouse work after a close study of what was needed. It is easily cleaned, although it has more flues than any other boiler, but—more flues give more heat; more flues require less fuel; the water heats quicker and hotter, because the volume of water heated by each flue is smaller.

All we ask is a chance to show you.

realize that we do not carry pressure; in fact, never move the gauge. Our boilers are six feet below the coils. Is it a fact that we are liable to a fine without Ohio state inspection under above conditions? We should be glad to know if you deem such insurance necessary. Inclosed find copy of letter explaining the point we make. C. B.

The letter is from a local agent of the Travelers Insurance Co., and is as follows:

"Enclosed please find policy covering your boilers, which I wish you would read over carefully. I wish to state that a boiler policy is the only kind of a policy that will cover property loss due to the freezing of your products. You will note that an explosion means a sudden rupture of a boiler or any of its parts, or a sudden collapsing, crushing or forcing inward of the furnace flues or other parts of the boiler caused by pressure. This policy covers damage to the assured, damage to the property of any other person or persons for which the assured will be liable, and for bodily injuries, including death at any time resulting therefrom. I am sure that you will be more than pleased with the service of the Travelers and the inspection of the boiler by our inspectors is well worth the price asked for the policy. You will understand that you are exonerated from the state inspection, with the exception of a 50-cent charge, which they make when sending you a certificate.''

The subscriber should apply to the State Boiler Inspector, Columbus, O., for a copy of the state law covering the operation of steam boilers. The application of the law to any individual case is not one on which The Review would care to pass an opinion. If the correspondent is in doubt after a careful reading of the law, he would better consult his attorney. In general it may be stated, however, that the state boiler inspection laws do not apply to greenhouse boilers operated under the gravity or low pressure systems. Where effort has been made to bring greenhouse boilers under some such new law, the florists, by getting together, sometimes with the aid of an attorney, have been able to get an interpretation to their satisfaction. Boiler insurance, however, is a good thing, provided it be written on equable terms. The risk is not so great on greenhouse boilers as on those run under higher pressures.

THE COAL SITUATION.

The amount of summer storage coal which has been brought up so far is, according to reports, smaller than usual. Probably half of the retail dealers have as much coal in storage as they are accustomed to have at this time of year. Not many of them have been taking in speculative shipments and those getting their supply on contract are not so heavily stocked with smokeless as they are usually at this date. Then there is another fifty per cent who held off when prices were advanced and took practically no coal on contract. These are now trying to get coal on contract and on the spot market, but have little success. In Chicago, particularly, the quantity of smokeless coal in storage is away below the average. There has been buying of eastern coal to a certain extent, but the amount of western coal purchased for storage is much lower than usual.

In addition to these facts there comes still the rumor of coming labor difficulties. The report from Louisville says: ''The labor situation in the eastern Kentucky coal fields will center more and more attention with the approach of September 1, when, according to the threats of numerous union organizers who have been circulating through this field for the last several months, some of the leading operating companies will have to meet union demands or close down.''

The railroad situation is likewise far from promising. The roads are not now in the best of condition and, as the grain shipments increase in volume, the railroads will decrease in efficiency. When, in addition, the fall movement of goods begins, the roads will be still less able to take care of shipments properly and, if called upon to handle an unusually heavy coal business, are likely to be swamped.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

The Market.

Aside from funeral work there is little or no demand for flowers at this time. Considering the high temperature, the stock that is to be had is in fair condition and reasonably plentiful.

A Greenhouse Boiler that fairly shot into fame

Here is the boiler that is making the most wonderful greenhouse heating record in the world. Florists and gardeners who have used other makes are constantly giving the Kroeschell Greenhouse Boiler the highest praise.

The Kroeschell

has the highest standard of heating values. Immense Self-cleaning Heating Surface, Longest Fire Travel, Perfect Combustion, Free Circulation, Thin Waterways, Honest Working Capacities, Unequaled Fuel Economy.

The Kroeschell

has replaced hundreds of cast iron boilers. In every case higher temperatures are secured with the Kroeschell with the same piping and with less fuel.

We have no agents. The Kroeschell is sold direct from factory to users. This eliminates the unnecessary middleman's profit.

Unlike Cast Iron Boilers, which cannot be depended upon to carry their ratings even when crowded with hard coal, "the Kroeschell" again excels because—every Kroeschell Boiler is honestly rated and guaranteed to carry the glass and pipe capacities stated in our catalogue to 60 degrees at 15 below zero. Any kind of fuel can be used. Our ratings are easily maintained with the cheapest grades of coal.

OVER 1500 CAST IRON BOILERS were replaced by the Kroeschell Hot Water Boiler during the past six years. It is a common occurrence for a Kroeschell Hot Water Boiler to replace two to four cast iron boilers at a single place; this is the CENTRAL HEATING SYSTEM PLAN, and has saved many florists hundreds of dollars per season in fuel alone, besides a big saving in labor.

KROESCHELL VERSUS CAST IRON

Kroeschell Replaces Cast Iron

I am heating between 17,000 and 18,000 sq. ft. of glass with the No. 12 Kroeschell, maintaining 50 to 54 degrees in the greenhouses.

I have night fireman and we fire about every hour in extreme cold weather, but in ordinary weather every two or three hours, leaving the boiler run five to six hours at the last firing.

Have had three different makes of sectional cast iron boilers, but would not return to the sectional boiler under any consideration.

Kennett Square, Pa., July 3, 1913.

Kroeschell Replaces Cast Iron

We are heating 6000 sq. ft. of glass with the Kroeschell House Boiler you furnished last fall, and we think it can take care of more.

We maintain a temperature of 60 degrees in the greenhouses and have no trouble keeping temperatures, even in the coldest weather.

The boiler does not require attention after 9:00 p. m., except in the coldest weather, when we bank at 11:00 p. m.

The boiler has given entire satisfaction. We doubt if your boiler could be improved upon, it is by far the best we have ever used, and we've been using heating systems for the past 20 years.

(Signed) The Avenue Floral Co.,
E. W. Eichling, Sec'y.
New Orleans, La., March 3, 1913.

Kroeschell Best of All

The Kroeschell Boiler I installed last year usually runs from 10 p. m. to 6 a. m. without attention. I do not have the least trouble to keep temperatures in the coldest weather. The boiler has given entire satisfaction.

The Kroeschell is the best boiler we have ever handled.

Madison, N. J., June 30, 1913. (Signed) Charles Totty.

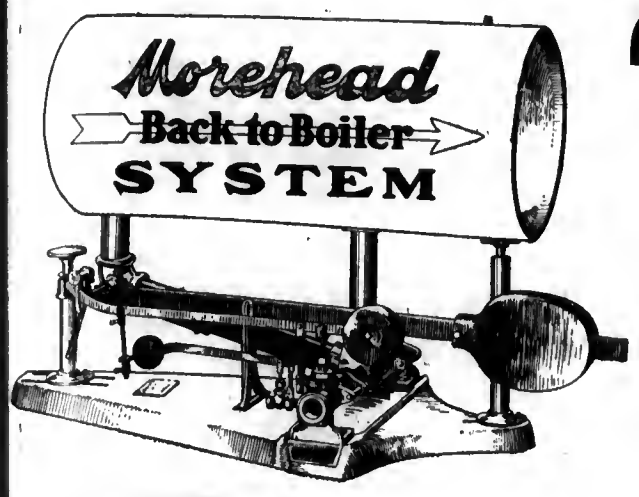
No More Cast Iron Boilers

I have used several different makes of boilers but none I like as well as yours.

The Kroeschell is easier to fire, takes less coal and water circulates quicker than any other boiler.

I have used two different makes of sectional boilers—no more cast iron boilers for us.

(Signed) Farmington Greenhouse Co.,
E. H. Steele, Manager.
Farmington, Mich., June 30, 1913.



Kroeschell Replaces Cast Iron

Your No. 12 Kroeschell Boiler which I purchased last fall is heating 38,000 sq. ft. of glass. I have no trouble in the least to keep 60 to 70 degrees in the greenhouses in the coldest weather.

Your boiler is doing the work for which I formerly used three cast iron sectional boilers, but I would recommend the Kroeschell to anyone wanting to heat their greenhouses with the least trouble.

inspection, with the exception of a 50-cent charge, which they make when sending you a certificate.''

The subscriber should apply to the State Boiler Inspector, Columbus, O., for a copy of the state law covering the operation of steam boilers. The application of the law to any individual case is not one on which The Review would care to pass an opinion. If the correspondent is in doubt after a careful reading of the law, he would better consult his attorney. In general it may be stated, however, that the state boiler inspection laws do not apply to greenhouse boilers operated under the gravity or low pressure systems. Where effort has been made to bring greenhouse boilers under some such new law, the florists, by getting together, sometimes with the aid of an attorney, have been able to get an interpretation to their satisfaction. Boiler insurance, however, is a good thing, provided it be written on equable terms. The risk is not so great on greenhouse boilers as on those run under higher pressures.

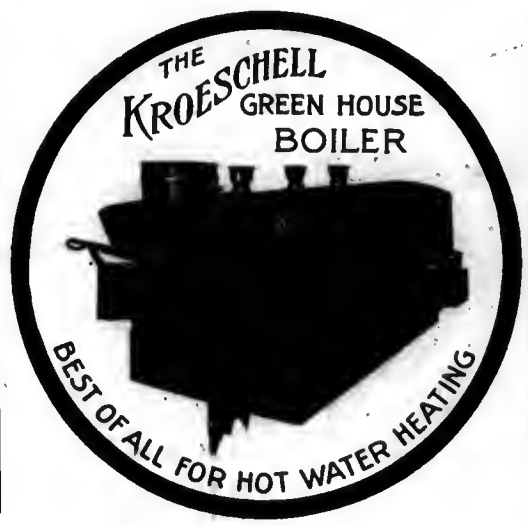
THE COAL SITUATION.

The amount of summer storage coal which has been brought up so far is, according to reports, smaller than usual. Probably half of the retail dealers have as much coal in storage as they are accustomed to have at this time of year. Not many of them have been taking in speculative shipments and those getting their supply on contract are not so heavily stocked with smokeless as they are usually at this date. Then there is another fifty per cent who held off when prices were advanced and took practically no coal on contract. These are now trying to get coal on contract and on the spot market, but have little success. In Chicago, particularly, the quantity of smokeless coal in storage is away below the average. There has been buying of eastern coal to a certain extent, but the amount of western coal purchased for storage is much lower than usual.

In addition to these facts there comes still the rumor of coming labor difficulties. The report from Louisville says: ''The labor situation in the eastern Kentucky coal fields will center more and more attention with the approach of September 1, when, according to the threats of numerous union organizers who have been circulating through this field for the last several months, some of the leading operating companies will have to meet union demands or close down.''

The railroad situation is likewise far from promising. The roads are not now in the best of condition and, as the grain shipments increase in volume, the railroads will decrease in efficiency. When, in addition, the fall movement of goods begins, the roads will be still less able to take care of shipments properly and, if called upon to handle an unusually heavy coal business, are likely to be swamped.

WASHINGTON, D. C.



The Market.

Aside from funeral work there is little or no demand for flowers at this time. Considering the high temperature, the stock that is to be had is in fair condition and reasonably plentiful.

A Greenhouse Boiler that fairly shot into fame

Here is the boiler that is making the most wonderful greenhouse heating record in the world. Florists and gardeners who have used other makes are constantly giving the Kroeschell Greenhouse Boiler the highest praise.

The Kroeschell has the highest standard of heating values. Immense Self-cleaning Heating Surface, Longest Fire Travel, Perfect Combustion, Free Circulation, Thin Waterways, Honest Working Capacities, Unequaled Fuel Economy.

The Kroeschell has replaced hundreds of cast iron boilers. In every case higher temperatures are secured with the Kroeschell with the same piping and with less fuel.

We have no agents. The Kroeschell is sold direct from factory to users. This eliminates the unnecessary middleman's profit.

Unlike Cast Iron Boilers, which cannot be depended upon to carry their ratings even when crowded with hard coal, "the Kroeschell" again excels because—every Kroeschell Boiler is honestly rated and guaranteed to carry the glass and pipe capacities stated in our catalogue to 60 degrees at 15 below zero. Any kind of fuel can be used. Our ratings are easily maintained with the cheapest grades of coal.

OVER 1500 CAST IRON BOILERS were replaced by the Kroeschell Hot Water Boiler during the past six years. It is a common occurrence for a Kroeschell Hot Water Boiler to replace two to four cast iron boilers at a single place; this is the CENTRAL HEATING SYSTEM PLAN, and has saved many florists hundreds of dollars per season in fuel alone, besides a big saving in labor.

KROESCHELL VERSUS CAST IRON

Kroeschell Replaces Cast Iron

I am heating between 17,000 and 18,000 sq. ft. of glass with the No. 12 Kroeschell, maintaining 50 to 54 degrees in the greenhouses.

I have night fireman and we fire about every hour in extreme cold weather, but in ordinary weather every two or three hours, leaving the boiler run five to six hours at the last firing.

Have had three different makes of sectional cast iron boilers, but would not return to the sectional boiler under any consideration.

Kennett Square, Pa., July 3, 1913.

Kroeschell Replaces Cast Iron

We are heating 6000 sq. ft. of glass with the Kroeschell House Boiler you furnished last fall, and we think it can take care of more.

We maintain a temperature of 60 degrees in the greenhouses and have no trouble keeping temperatures, even in the coldest weather.

The boiler does not require attention after 9:00 p. m., except in the coldest weather, when we bank at 11:00 p. m.

The boiler has given entire satisfaction. We doubt if your boiler could be improved upon, it is by far the best we have ever used, and we've been using heating systems for the past 30 years.

(Signed) THE AVENUE FLORAL CO.,
E. W. Eichling, Sec'y.

New Orleans, La., March 3, 1913.

Kroeschell Best of All

The Kroeschell Boiler I installed last year usually runs from 10 p. m. to 6 a. m. without attention. I do not have the least trouble to keep temperatures in the coldest weather. The boiler has given entire satisfaction.

The Kroeschell is the best boiler we have ever handled.

Madison, N. J., June 30, 1913. (Signed) CHARLES TOTTY.

No More Cast Iron Boilers

I have used several different makes of boilers but none I like as well as yours.

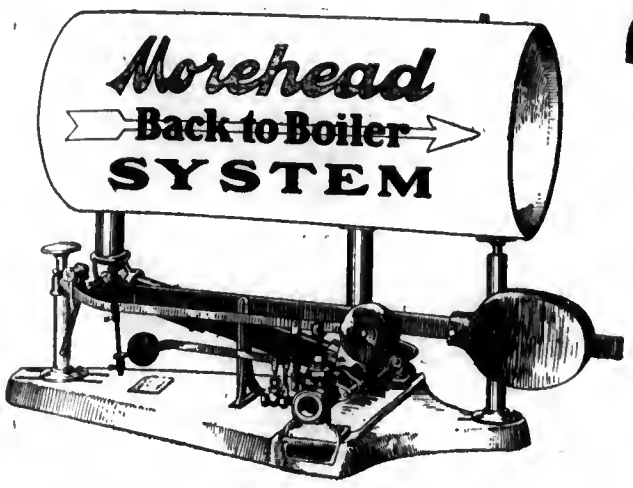
The Kroeschell is easier to fire, takes less coal and water circulates quicker than any other boiler.

I have used two different makes of sectional boilers—no more cast iron boilers for us.

(Signed) FARMINGTON GREENHOUSE CO.,
E. H. Steele, Manager.

Farmington, Mich., June 30, 1913.

Kroeschell Replaces Cast Iron



Your No. 12 Kroeschell Boiler which I purchased last fall is heating 38,000 sq. ft. of glass. I have no trouble in the least to keep 60 to 70 degrees in the greenhouses in the coldest weather.

Your boiler is doing the work for which I formerly used three cast iron sectional boilers, but I would recommend the Kroeschell to anyone wanting to heat their greenhouses with the least trouble.

Lexington, Ky., June 27, 1913.

Various Notes.

Work is progressing on the three new houses which are being erected by Gude Bros. Co., on its Bladensburg road property. This concern also has added a Commerce delivery car to its equipment.

Lewis Holman and Walter Hawley are visiting relatives of the latter in New York. Raymond Garrett, who is in the employ of O. A. C. Oehmler, will spend this month at his former home in Manassas, Va.

Among the visitors in town were the following from Philadelphia: I. Rosnosky, with the H. F. Michell Co.; Robert Shoch, with the M. Rice Co.; Joseph Goudy, with Henry Dreer, Inc., and Dennis Connor, representing Lord & Burnham Co.

Fred H. Kramer is preparing for the trip with the members of the Minute Men who are going abroad this fall. He looks pretty nifty in his captain-commissary's uniform, although not quite so picturesque as he did when he participated in the Fourth of July parade, dressed as an Italian organ grinder. We have not seen Adolphus Gude in his outfit yet. He is going also.

The several establishments here where women are employed are again facing the possible enactment of the La Follette bill, which limits the labor of all female employees to not more than eight hours per day, and to six days per week. This bill has already passed the Senate. If it becomes law the ladies employed in at least one store will be requested to look for other positions.

William F. Gude and family have returned from a short trip to Elkins Park, Pa. During their visit to that place short motor trips were taken over the surrounding country and an opportunity was afforded them to inspect the new rose plant and dairy of the Joseph Heacock Co., at Roelofs.

Frank Slye is spending a three weeks' vacation on a farm in St. Marys county, Md.

W. F. Gutchall, formerly with George Shaffer, has opened a stand in the market at Seventh and P streets, N. W., and is reported to be getting along nicely. C. L. L.

Various Notes.

Building and repairing seem to be the order of the day while business is dull in the summer. The fall promises to find the houses in this vicinity in the best condition as a whole that they have ever been in.

McIntyre Bros. have recently incorporated their business and are planning several new houses. They will later dismantle the old place, having purchased several acres of land adjacent to the new plant. The new houses are to be larger than any they have hitherto built.

Joe Brown had planned the rebuilding of his entire plant, replacing the old houses with new Moninger houses of larger size. Work was already in progress when his physician ordered him to Colorado for his health. As a result, no new houses will be erected at present, but the old houses are being well repaired. Mr. Brown leaves for the west this week. He has the sympathy of the fraternity and all wish him good luck and a rapid recovery.

Tom Joy, Jr., with his family and a number of friends, has been out on Caney Fork fishing for the last three weeks. He needed the rest badly, but look out for the fish stories when he returns.

The new rose, Fireflame, has produced a few blooms at the Joy place. It has a beautiful bud and is certainly of a striking color, though it remains to be seen whether a single rose will be popular here.

Mr. Geny says that there is nothing rushing at present, though business is fair for July. They have a good cut of nearly all seasonable flowers, though the quality is not of the best.

McKay, Reece & Co. say that it is almost impossible to secure cow peas for the late trade. The good rains of the last week have put the ground in fine condition and there would be a large acreage sown if the seed could be had. Should the present cool weather continue, with plenty of rain, they expect quite a revival of business.

Haury & Sons are planning some new houses, to be erected this summer. Their trade has been growing right along during the last two years. Their business has always been heavier in pot plants than in cut flowers, but it is understood that they will grow a larger area of cut flowers in the future, as their business in this line is demanding it. F. B.

Coshocton, O.—John M. Wells has purchased the Maple Bend Greenhouse and is preparing to open his new place of business shortly.

McAlester, Okla.—William Weaver, florist and nurseryman, has been appointed park superintendent. This is a new office and carries no salary. Mr. Weaver's main work will be to carry out the plans which are being made to beautify the city.

MUNCIE, IND.

The Market.

The reports from all the local florists are highly satisfactory. Nearly all of them were obliged to reject late June orders for bedding stock. Porch-box stock was also completely exhausted.

Various Notes.

The Muncie Floral Co., which made an assignment July 2, had been in business two years. The stockholders were Rollin Webb, A. McKinley and Joseph L. McKinley. They had leased the greenhouses and store of Simon Humfeld.

Rollin Webb, formerly of the Muncie Floral Co., has taken a position with the Williams & Clark Floral Co.

Miss Lauretta E. Miller, of Findlay, O., who was employed in a cut flower store in Buffalo, N. Y., has taken charge of the store for Miller's Greenhouses. Her window decorations are unusually effective and are appreciated by the public.

Henry J. Potomkin has renewed his lease on the Riggin greenhouses and will not build at his new location this season.

Simon Humfeld, whose greenhouses and store have recently been conducted by the Muncie Floral Co., has now leased the property to Mrs. A. P. Andrew. The lease of the Muncie Floral Co. expired July 1, one day before the firm's business went into the hands of a receiver. Mr. Humfeld has been out of business for the last two years.

Claude Clark has taken charge of the greenhouses at 607 North Madison street. He will also be manager of Miller's Greenhouses, having charge of both places. Mr. Clark was in business at Hartford City, Ind., until recently.

The Riverside Floral Co. is making extensive improvements. This firm reports a most satisfactory business, almost double that of last year. S. H.

ALBANY, N. Y.

About thirty-five members of the Florists' Club accepted the invitation to visit Fred Goldring at his farm at Slingerlands, July 10, and had a good time. After making a tour of the greenhouses and noting the vigor of the stock planted outside, especially the roses and carnations, the members were served with refreshments, to which all did justice.

A brief business session followed. It was decided to have the annual clam bake at President Henke's, August 16, every member pledging his support to make it a success. Friends outside the trade are to be invited. L. H. Schafer, chairman of the committee, will report progress at the next meeting, August 7.

HOT BEDS AND COLD FRAMES

These two uses, Hot Beds and Cold Frames, try the very soul of any wood. Hence Oak, Ash and other varieties do not give any sort of satisfaction—they are not born for that kind of experience. Cypress is the one wood that defies rot influences and sticks on the job, even when it is in contact with the wet earth.

It isn't sensible to quarrel with the boxing of the Hot Bed if you made it of the wrong wood and it rots too soon.

The "hoss-sense" thing to do is to prevent such a natural disaster by using a wood that was designed by the Almighty to LAST—in fact, the wood that lasts so almighty long that it has come to be universally known as the "Wood Eternal."

You may already have Hot Beds and Cold Frames made of Cypress—the leading builders make them. All you need is to exercise business caution in buying. Be certain they are of Cypress.

COMMERCIAL FLORICULTURE

TO BE TAUGHT IN CHICAGO PUBLIC SCHOOLS

VOCATIONAL SCHOOL PLANNED.

Chicago to Lead the Country.

To teach the aspiring apprentice florist the "why" as well as the "how" of his occupation is the plan of the Chicago public school authorities.

The vocational schools of Chicago are famous the educational world over—but they have only reached the stage of proved practicability; the day of expansion is just dawning. During the last school year only five vocational courses have been given, but they have been so successful that many others will be added as fast as the necessary organization can be developed. A course in commercial plant growing, to eventually include every phase of the subject, will be one of the first to be established if present plans do not miscarry. It will be the first school of the kind in America.

Reinberg Enthusiastic.

Peter Reinberg, who was the pioneer among the Chicago growers of cut flowers to build glass by the acre, is president of the Chicago board of education and is enthusiastic in his advocacy of the vocational schools, particularly the proposed school for florists and gardeners. He is the largest employer of labor in the greenhouses within the city limits of Chicago and knows the needs and ambitions of the boys just starting in the trade as few other men do.

But the man to whom the trade really will owe the school for florists is William M. Roberts. Mr. Roberts for years was assistant superintendent of schools in Chicago, but recently was relieved of that office to become district superintendent in charge of vocational schools and the various special classes that have been instituted to meet the needs of Chicago's cosmopolitan population. It is to Mr. Roberts that the board has entrusted the duty of extending the trade schools, free to all citizens of Chicago between 16 and 21 years of age. He is even more enthusiastic than Mr. Reinberg in his belief that a school for gardeners will "fill a long-felt want."

The Present Schools.

The range of activities under the direction of Mr. Roberts already is something remarkable. There are night schools for day workers and day schools for night workers—even a class in a downtown school to teach English to the foreign-born women who scrub in office buildings all night. One of the latest is a school for cooks, the pupils being apprentices in hotel and restaurant kitchens, chefs in embryo. The course includes cleanliness and sanitation as well as the culinary art.

The trade schools are a part of the high school course. The beginning was made with the building and allied trades and was with the backing of the unions and the employers' associations. Any boy in high school is permitted to take a vocational course if he wishes, but that is not the purpose of the school. The idea is to draw the pupils from the apprentices who are working in the trade. Take the electrical workers as an example. The classes meet one forenoon each week, in a room in a high school that has been fitted up with $15,000 worth of equipment. By an arrangement between the union and the employers' association, the apprentices are given the time off with pay. The carpenters' course is a little different. There are daily classes for three months each winter. The course is like the apprenticeship, four years. The pupils from all parts of the city attend the one class, as their number is not large enough to justify any other plan. The instruction in the vocational classes is as close to the working practice as circumstances will permit; it is in the hands of instructors who have worked at the trades and who know the points on which beginners are weakest. In the five building-trades classes there are 600 pupils.

The Plan.

The plan Mr. Roberts has in mind for florists is to establish a course in the fine new Nicholas Senn high school, which is right on the edge of the greenhouse district on the north side. The plans for the building contemplate the erection of a greenhouse to be used to produce plants for the structure and grounds. Although President Reinberg has expressed his belief in the inadequacy of this greenhouse for practical purposes, it can be added to as the needs develop. An instructor is being sought and one of the qualifications will be familiarity with a number of departments of the business, so that he can take up subject after subject as the interest develops.

There are three or four state institu-on which instruction will eventually be given:

Nicholas Senn High School, Where Chicago Proposes to Start a Public Vocational School for Florists and Gardeners.

tions that have floricultural courses that have been established with more or less difficulty, mostly because of the need to first procure funds. For the undertaking in the Chicago public schools no immediate appropriation is needed. Class room and equipment are ready. The high school funds available to the vocational department can be used for the necessary salary. Indeed, the board rules should make the opportunity attractive to the best men in the business. While the regulations do not permit paying a high salary at the start, salaries advance automatically as time passes and it is possible to reach $2,600 for ten months' work.

Practical Work.

The course will be started in September if Mr. Roberts is insured of a class of twenty or more. No vocational courses can be started with less. The question of what to teach will be decided by the wishes of those who want to be taught. Mr. Roberts is in consultation with H. B. Dorner, who has charge of the work for floriculture at the University of Illinois; with W. N. Rudd, who probably has given the subject more thought than has anyone not actually engaged in educational work; with Fred Heuchling, secretary of the West Parks civil service commission, whose experience has shown the need of such a school; with E. A. White, who has charge of the floricultural classes at Massachusetts Agricultural College, Amherst; with the horticultural department at Cornell, where florists' sons go for their college course, and with leading growers in the city. While the work being done at these institutions is being investigated, it is not with a view to adopting anything but the practical features of the instruction given. The Chicago idea is practical in all things.

Eligibility.

The rules of the Chicago board of education make the school age from 6 to 21 years; the vocational schools are for those from 16 to 21, but in cases of those above 21 years who wish to share in the advantages offered the board has granted special permits. It will no doubt do so in the case of florists. The schools are free to all residents within the city limits; non-residents must pay tuition, which is only $80 per year for those who take a full course of five studies and proportionately lower in the case of special courses.

Mr. Roberts welcomes suggestions from the trade. He wants to start a school for florists and gardeners that shall have a wide and permanent usefulness. He should be addressed: Wm. M. Roberts, District Superintendent of Schools, Tribune building, Chicago.

COLLEGE WORK FOR FLORISTS.

Studies for those intending to engage in the growing of flowers for commercial purposes are provided in the department of floriculture of the New York State College of Agriculture at Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y. Instruction in floriculture along general lines has been given since the beginning of the work of the department of horticulture and almost all its graduates have had more or less experience in both greenhouse and outdoor work. There is now, however, a separate department of floriculture, which adapts its instruction to the florists' needs.

The rapid development of fruit-growing, floriculture and vegetable-growing as distinct occupations has resulted in a demand for men specially trained along a particular line, rather than men broadly trained in the whole subject of horticulture. In order to meet the growing demand for trained florists by providing special courses of instruction and for the purpose of developing the investigative work, a department of floriculture has been organized.

Aims of the Department.

The department of floriculture has three principal aims—to give instruction at the college; to conduct investigations, field studies, and surveys aiming to help in solving the floricultural problems of commercial florists throughout New York state and to give information and assistance to intending planters of home and public grounds in the state.

The instruction given at the college is intended to meet the needs of amateur flower-growers; to provide instruction for students in other lines of horticulture who wish to get a knowledge of some of the fundamental principles of floriculture; to train students for teaching and investigative work in floriculture in colleges and experiment stations and to prepare students for professional work.

Classroom Equipment.

The equipment is divided into two parts; that belonging to the classrooms and offices is on the second floor of the main building and that connected with the forcing-house and gardens, as well as with the experimental areas, is in the field.

Lectures are given in the headquarters of the department on the second floor of the main building. The larger lecture room, which is provided with a stereopticon, has a seating capacity of 120 persons. The smaller lecture room seats thirty-five, besides containing the herbarium. The remainder of the floor is used for offices for the instructing staff. Large display cases lining the corridor are filled with horticultural specimens, tools and various appliances.

In addition to the large collection of floricultural books in the university library, the department is fortunate in possessing the large private library of the late Professor John Craig. This contains 3,000 volumes, many of which are on floricultural subjects and are available for the use of advanced students.

Greenhouses and Gardens.

The greenhouses completed in 1910, together with the contemplated additions to be erected during the present year, cover an area of about 8,000 square feet. The range consists of a conservatory and propagating house and a house for the culture of roses, carnations, chrysanthemums, sweet peas and other greenhouse plants. These buildings are used by all classes in floriculture and afford space for advanced and graduate students investigating special problems. The service building is a two-story structure containing laboratories, an office and seed storage and tool rooms.

The department has been assigned twenty acres of land for its large collections of peonies, irises, perennial phloxes, roses, sweet peas, gladioli and miscellaneous annual and perennial flowers. These collections afford valuable material for study and numerous problems for investigation.

Aside from ordinary equipment, the garden herbarium, with more than 12,000 sheets, is an important aid in the study of plant variation. There is also a good collection of negatives illustrating the growing of flowers, which is being added to continually and which furnishes a useful source for lantern slides for illustrating recent methods in the management and construction of forcing-houses and the growing of flowers in the field and under glass. The department has a collection of 1,000 lantern slides, to which additions are constantly being made.

Regular Courses of Instruction.

The following courses of instruction are regularly given by the department:

Greenhouse Management.—Studies of the principles and practice of propagation, soils, potting, shifting, watering, ventilation, fumigation, and the like, of florists' plants.

Greenhouse Construction.—The development of the modern greenhouse; types of houses, materials and methods of construction, installation of heating systems, and the like. Practice in erecting sections of cypress and iron-frame houses, and in planning and estimating the cost of commercial ranges for flower and vegetable production.

Commercial Floriculture.—Studies in the propagation and culture of the leading floricultural crops. As facilities permit, students are assigned space in the greenhouses for practical experience in the growing of roses, carnations, chrysanthemums, violets, sweet peas, and the like.

Commercial Floriculture.—A continuation of the course described above, with lectures, assigned reading and discussions on greenhouse plants and on the packing, handling and marketing of cut flowers and plants for retail and wholesale markets.

Greenhouse and Garden Practice.—Designed to give the student added practical knowledge of greenhouse and garden work. Practical work in greenhouse management, propagation, compositing soils, potting and watering.

Floral Arrangement.—A study of the principles of floral art. Practice in the arrangement of flowers in designs and bouquets, baskets, table decorations and interior decoration.

Conservatory Plants.—A study in the culture and uses of tropical and subtropical plants grown in conservatories, including palms, ferns, begonias and orchids.

Garden Flowers.—Designed to acquaint the student with garden plants, and to give practical knowledge of the propagation and culture of the annuals, herbaceous perennials, bulbs and shrubs used for cut flowers or in ornamental planting.

Amateur Floriculture.—The propagation and culture of plants suitable for window garden and dooryard, including a study of containers, soils, fertilizers, insecticides; also, preparation of flower beds and planting.

Propagation and Culture of Ornamental Shrubs.—Designed to acquaint the student with methods of propagation, pruning and culture of shrubs.

Gardening.—A personal and informal course for lovers of plants and gardens. The course consists of actual work in the identification and growing of plants, supplemented by conferences and informal discussions. Attention is given to garden literature and history, planning of grounds, and the like.

Investigation in Floriculture.—Investigation of problems in growing cut flowers, exotics and garden flowers; hybridizing; study of varieties.

Winter Course.

A winter course, covering a period of twelve weeks, has been offered for the last three years. This course begins November 11, 1913, and ends February 13, 1914. The following subjects are offered:

Floriculture and Greenhouse Practice.—A study of the propagation, potting, soils, culture, insects, diseases and marketing of flowers. Designed to familiarize the student with the ordinary operations of the greenhouse and garden.

Forcing Structures.—The construction and uses of hotbeds, coldframes and inexpensive greenhouses; heating. Laboratory work will consist of plan-making, preparation of estimates and erection of models.

Fertility of the Land.—A study of soils from the chemical and physical points of view, with discussions of fertilizers, manures and the principles of plant growth.

Soils.—A study of the derivation, classification, function and properties of soils.

Plant Diseases.—This course is devoted to the consideration of some of the common bacterial and fungous diseases of plants. It includes a study of the causal organisms, their relation to the host plants and their control.

Elective Subjects.

The following subjects are open to the choice of the students:

Plant-breeding.—A discussion of plant improvement with special reference to farm and horticultural crops. Methods of selection and hybridization as means of improvement are carefully considered.

Extension.—A study of the problems of university extension in agriculture. Practice in the oral and written presentation of topics in agriculture, with criticism and individual conferences on the technique of public speech.

Rural Improvement.—A course of six lectures, commencing after the Christmas recess, dealing with questions of rural improvement and intended to give the farm boy a general view of landscape art, together with specific hints for working out some of his home problems.

Investigations by the Department.

Because of the lack of greenhouse facilities, investigations in floriculture have been confined to outdoor problems. In 1904 the American Peony Society and the department of horticulture at Cornell University arranged a coöperative experiment for the purpose of studying all the varieties of peonies. The objects sought were to bring order out of the confusion of nomenclature so as to furnish growers with the correct names and accurate descriptions of authentic varieties; to study the botanical status of the species and varieties, and to study methods of culture, varieties best adapted for special purposes, use of fertilizers, keeping qualities and the like. The same general work has been undertaken with sweet peas and gladioli in coöperation with the National Sweet Pea Society and the American Gladiolus Society, respectively.

In addition to the above, large collections of China asters, irises, perennial phloxes and climbing roses are being planted for investigative purposes. Four publications on peonies and two on sweet peas have been printed. Others will appear as results are obtained.

HART'S PRIZE-WINNING FLOAT.

The floral float shown on this page was one of the two entered by florists which won first prizes in the floral and electrical parade held July 8 in connection with the Elks' convention at Rochester, N. The frame of the pergola is made of wire covered with white cloth and the decorations are rambler roses and Asparagus plumosus.

PORT ALLEGANY OTAKSAS.

M. E. G. Ventres, proprietor of the Port Allegany Greenhouses, at Port Allegany, Pa., is not a specialist in hydrangeas in the sense of devoting most of his time to them, for he grows a general line of stock and sells it at both wholesale and retail. But he does aim to be a specialist in hydrangeas in the sense of giving special attention to their culture and using his best skill in an effort to produce plants of a specially high grade. As evidence of the success of this endeavor, he has submitted some photographs, one of which is here reproduced. It shows three plants of Hydrangea Otaksa, taken from a large number of others of equally good quality. From three to five blooms, he says, had been cut from each of the plants before the photograph was taken.

tions that have floricultural courses that have been established with more or less difficulty, mostly because of the need to first procure funds. For the undertaking in the Chicago public schools no immediate appropriation is needed. Class room and equipment are ready. The high school funds available to the vocational department can be used for the necessary salary. Indeed, the board rules should make the opportunity attractive to the best men in the business. While the regulations do not permit paying a high salary at the start, salaries advance automatically as time passes and it is possible to reach $2,600 for ten months' work.

Practical Work.

The course will be started in September if Mr. Roberts is insured of a class of twenty or more. No vocational courses can be started with less. The question of what to teach will be decided by the wishes of those who want to be taught. Mr. Roberts is in consultation with H. B. Dorner, who has charge of the work for floriculture at the University of Illinois; with W. N. Rudd, who probably has given the subject more thought than has anyone not actually engaged in educational work; with Fred Heuchling, secretary of the West Parks civil service commission, whose experience has shown the need of such a school; with E. A. White, who has charge of the floricultural classes at Massachusetts Agricultural College, Amherst; with the horticultural department at Cornell, where florists' sons go for their college course, and with leading growers in the city. While the work being done at these institutions is being investigated, it is not with a view to adopting anything but the practical features of the instruction given. The Chicago idea is practical in all things.

Eligibility.

The rules of the Chicago board of education make the school age from 6 to 21 years; the vocational schools are for those from 16 to 21, but in cases of those above 21 years who wish to share in the advantages offered the board has granted special permits. It will no doubt do so in the case of florists. The schools are free to all residents within the city limits; non-residents must pay tuition, which is only $80 per year for those who take a full course of five studies and proportionately lower in the case of special courses.

Mr. Roberts welcomes suggestions from the trade. He wants to start a school for florists and gardeners that shall have a wide and permanent usefulness. He should be addressed: Wm. M. Roberts, District Superintendent of Schools, Tribune building, Chicago.

THE BEST SWEET PEAS.

Among the sweet peas which showed up best in the prize-winning collections at the Boston exhibition July 12 and 13 were the following:

Barbara, a magnificent salmon orange, will be widely grown another season; Thomas Stevenson, a beautiful orange scarlet, easily the best of its shade; Mrs. Harry Bell, pale salmon apricot, a glorious flower, with an attractive color; Edrom Beauty, similar to Helen Lewis in color, but a far better flower; Doris Usher, pink on a cream ground, quite pleasing; Dazzler, rich orange scarlet, one of the best; Scarlet Emperor, the finest of the scarlets, fine in many collections; Decorator, one of Burpee's 1913 set, described well as a Rose du Barri Spencer; Orchid, from the same introducers, is of a pleasing heliotrope shade; their new Illuminator, salmon rose, is worth watching and their King White, pronounced by Mr. Kerr away ahead of all existing whites, should create a stir next season.

Florence Nightingale was the leading lavender in the show and will take some beating. Asta Ohn Spencer and Masterpiece are two other lavenders that are well to the front. Edith Taylor is a wonderful salmon rose, only seen in one collection; it is still scarce, but was the finest novelty in England last season. Hercules is best described as a glorified Countess Spencer and it will soon displace the latter variety. Nora Unwin, White Spencer and Etta Dyke appeared most frequently as whites, while in cream or primrose shades Dobbie's Cream was easily in the lead, with Primrose Beauty and Primrose Spencer as the next best of their color. Dobbie's Crimson was the best of the deep reds, although more vases of King Edward Spencer were staged. Senator Spencer is good for those who admire its color, which combines claret stripes and flakings on a pale lavender ground. Moneymaker is a grand white self, well shown in several collections. Mrs. Hugh Dickson, apricot on cream ground, is still the best of its color, but Mrs. Routzahn Spencer, somewhat similar in color, is still one of the best. Mrs. Breadmore, buff ground edged with rose, is quite pleasing.

John Ingman stood out the most prominently among the rosy carmines. Constance Oliver, delicate pink suffused with cream, also showed up well. The old Countess Spencer, introduced in 1904, was well up in the running, but Hercules will displace it. Evelyn Hemus, cream with picotee edging of terra-cotta pink, was good in a number of stands. Marie Corelli, rose carmine, is not yet surpassed in its particular shade. Only a few striped, marbled and mottled flowers appeared and the dark shades had comparatively few entries. I noticed only a couple of grandiflora varieties in the show, Dorothy Eckford and St. George. How are the mighty fallen!

For those who like deep shades Othello Spencer is still the best maroon, while Aurora Spencer and America Spencer are good for those looking for striped or flaked varieties.

Great advances are still being made in sweet peas and their culture is being better understood each year. Perfection in size and coloring is still far from being reached. Hardly a sweet pea exhibited in Boston had been introduced ten years, most of them not half that time, and it is safe to say that a decade hence even such wonderful varieties as Barbara, Edith Taylor, Mrs. Harry Bell, Elfrida Pearson, Hercules, Florence Nightingale, Thomas Stevenson, Dobbie's Cream, Scarlet Emperor and Illuminator will be no more than pleasant memories. W. N. Craig.

OUTDOOR SWEET PEAS.

There are no summer flowers more popular than sweet peas. It is a popular fallacy that they are plants which will only flower for a few brief weeks. Everything depends on the treatment they get. If they are in well prepared soil, have been mulched and liberally watered, they will flower for months, provided, of course, that seed pods are not allowed to form. Too often, however, with the first heavy crop of flowers, other duties are pressing and the peas are neglected, with the result that they seed heavily. This speedily cripples their vitality and shortens the flower stems. There are no flowers more useful to the country florist than sweet peas, and he or she who has a nice row or two will find that there is good money in them. In order to keep the plants blooming, however, a few points should be remembered. Most of the growers already know them, but they will bear repetition: Mulch well, water freely, spray with a soap spray for aphis, pull off all seed pods and fading flowers, and where any vines die, remove them. If these details are observed, sweet peas will flower well for fully three months.

BUSINESS EMBARRASSMENTS.

Chicago, Ill.—John G. Lambros, who filed a petition in bankruptcy May 24, scheduling liabilities of $2,300, was in court July 22, but none of the creditors was present or represented by attorney. Mr. Lambros has had no store since he was obliged to vacate the basement of the Fish building, recently torn down. The store at Halsted and Madison streets is his brother's. Lambros, however, is said to run all the stands in the elevated railroad stations with the exception of that at Randolph street and Wabash avenue.

ST. LOUIS FALL SHOW.

There will be at least one big show in the middle west this fall, at St. Louis. It will be given by the Coliseum owners as a means of keeping their big building busy, with the cooperation of the St. Louis Florists' Club. Frank M. Robinson, manager for the Coliseum Co., had this to say July 16:

"The preliminary premium list of the Mid-Continental Flower Show, to be given under the management of the directors of the St. Louis Coliseum Co., in the Coliseum, the week commencing November 10, 1913, was sent to the printers today. The same carries 108 classes and premiums in cash amounting to $6,000. The final premium list will be mailed out October 1, and the management plans to make the St. Louis show one of the most successful ever held in the west.

"We anticipate making this show one of the prominent social events of St. Louis. The management is indebted to John Young, secretary of the S. A. F., Chas. H. Totty, president of the American Chrysanthemum Society, and to various members of the St. Louis Florists' Club, who have made valuable suggestions in preparing the preliminary list. An elaborate scheme of decoration for the building is being worked out, which is probably better adapted to the holding of flower shows than any other like building in the country."

CHANGES IN PARCEL POST.

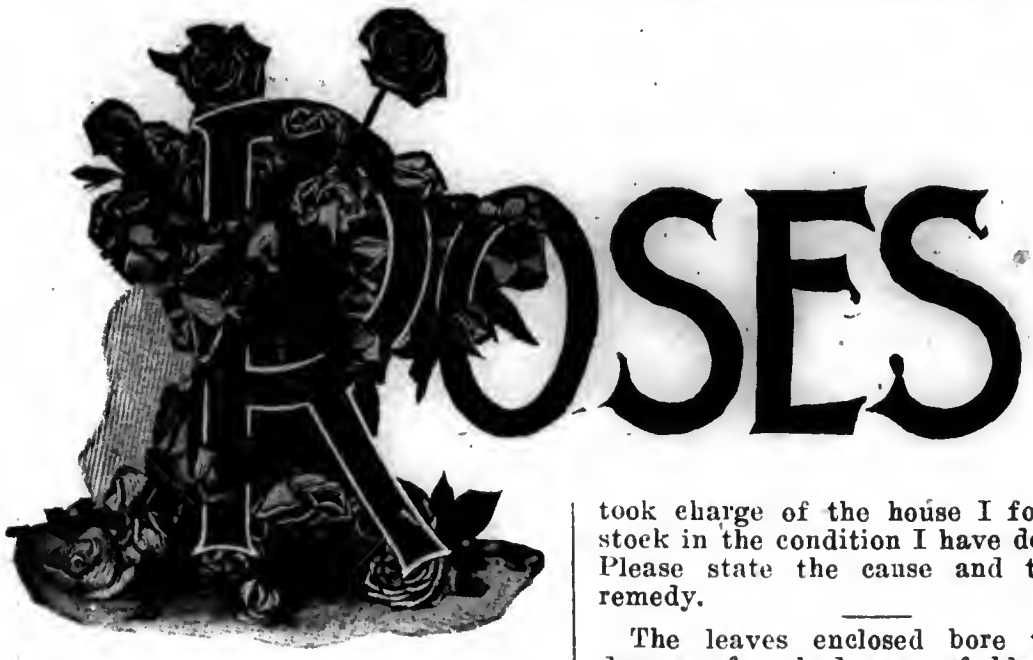
The Postoffice Department has announced a series of changes in the operation of the parcel post system, including an increase in the maximum weight limit on packages, a reduction in the rates of postage within the first and second zones, and the substitution of a convenient rate chart for the parcel post map in determining postage rates.

Postmaster General Burleson submitted to the Interstate Commerce Commission and obtained its consent to the following changes, which are to be effective August 15:

The first zone shall include the territory within the local delivery of any postoffice and the first zone rate of postage will apply to all parcel post mail deposited at any postoffice for local delivery or for delivery by city carrier or on rural routes emanating from that postoffice.

The second zone shall include the remainder of what is now the first zone, together with the present second zone, and shall include all the units of area located in whole or in part within a radius of approximately 150 miles from any given postoffice.

The rate of postage on parcels weighing in excess of four ounces in the proposed first zone, that is, for local delivery, will be reduced from 5 cents for the first pound and 1 cent for each additional pound or fraction thereof, to 5 cents for the first pound and 1 cent for each additional two pounds or fraction thereof.



The rate for the new second zone, that is, the territory embraced within a radius of 150 miles from any given postoffice, will be reduced from 5 cents for the first pound and 3 cents for each additional pound (the present first zone rate), or 6 cents for the first pound and 4 cents for each additional pound or fraction thereof (the present second zone rate), to 5 cents for the first pound and 1 cent for each additional pound or fraction thereof.

The maximum weight of parcel post packages will be increased from eleven pounds to twenty pounds, the increase of weight to apply only to the first and second zones. No change has been made in the restrictions as to the size and form of the package.

Postmaster General Burleson states that the changes decided upon are somewhat in the nature of an experiment, and that it is expected that experience gained in their operation will afford a valuable basis upon which to predicate future changes in reducing rates of postage and in increasing the limit of weight. The statistics collected by the department show that at least one-third of the total number of parcels are handled within the first and second zones, now to be consolidated into one zone.

Under regulations adopted by the postmaster general the use of distinctive stamps is no longer mandatory, and the public is now permitted to mail parcels with ordinary stamps affixed. The insurance fee, which originally was 10 cents, was found to be excessive, and Postmaster General Burleson has reduced to 5 cents the fee on parcels insured to actual value up to $25 and a 10-cent fee is exacted only on parcels insured to actual value of more than $25 and not exceeding $50. Under this arrangement the business of insuring packages has more than doubled, particularly in the sending of valuable merchandise. It also is possible to secure special delivery for any parcel by affixing 10 cents in stamps and indicating the purpose.

The parcel post rates apply to packages of cut flowers, and to almost everything a florist receives except seeds and plants. The regulations apply to these also, but the rate on seeds, plants and cuttings still is 1 cent for each ounce or fraction of an ounce, regardless of distance.

PROBABLY DRY AT THE ROOT.

We have several benches of Kaiserin and La France roses which we are growing for the third season; these have never grown well. We also have a bed of Maryland roses from spring stock, which are in excellent condition. The Kaiserin and La France were planted in heavy black clay by another grower, at a depth of fully two inches below the ball. They usually have some red spider. They have been kept mulched all the season with well rotted cow manure and have been well syringed with water. They bore one crop in early spring, with good stems; since then the flowers have all been short-stemmed. There is some yellow foliage on them, though they have good drainage and continuous ventilation. It seems as though we cannot encourage them to make base canes or to break freely and produce stems and blooms. Would wood ashes benefit them? Thus far they have had no wood ashes, but have had several light dustings of lime. F. W. R.

Both Kaiserin and La France are strong growers and gross feeders in summer. That they bore a good crop of flowers with long stems in the spring, and since then have thrown up only short stems and yellow foliage, is a sure sign that the plants were allowed to get dry at the root. The mulch of cow manure has probably deceived you and caused you to allow the clay underneath to get dry. Your plants do not need lime or wood ashes nearly so much as they need a good supply of water, to dissolve the manure and wash it down to the roots of the plants, for no plant can absorb food unless it is dissolved, and the only way to dissolve it is to use water.

To grow Kaiserin and La France profitably, they should have a good mulching of manure every two or three weeks during the growing season, with large quantities of water. The water should be allowed to run through the benches, so as to wash out any impurities in the soil; then you will not need to use lime to sweeten the soil, as the water will do this more effectively. In short, the secret of growing good summer roses is water, and plenty of it. W. J. K.

BLACK SPOT.

Enclosed you will find some specimens of my rose leaves, which are drying up, getting yellow and falling off. First the leaves become black-spotted; then they turn yellow and fall off. When I took charge of the house I found the stock in the condition I have described. Please state the cause and the best remedy. P. N.

The leaves enclosed bore the evidences of a bad case of black spot, which is usually caused by lack of ventilation and by too much moisture overhead. The best remedy is plenty of ventilation day and night, especially at night. At this time of year keep the plants in good growing condition by giving them plenty of feed and water, of which they need good quantities during the summer, especially if they are large plants, but keep the water off the foliage as much as possible. If the plants are free from spider and are kept wet at the root, it will be well to omit the syringing for three or four weeks; by that time the black spot should have disappeared. If that treatment does not help them, try Bordeaux mixture, spraying the diseased foliage, but in most cases the trouble will be overcome without the Bordeaux, by adopting the method I have indicated. W. J. K.

ROSE LEAF ROLLER.

I am a rose grower and have been bothered with the leaf-roller the last year. I wish The Review would get the rose growers to tell what is the most economical and surest way to fight this terrible pest. I have tried hydrocyanic acid gas, but do not consider it practical. It is widespread over the country, and I should like to know what others are doing for it. B. S.

The Review will be glad to publish descriptions of all the different methods of controlling the pest. Tell us how you do it.

OUTDOOR CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

Is there any way of forcing my outdoor chrysanthemums to open early? J. A. W.

I do not know of any way of forcing outdoor chrysanthemums into flower. Even if lifted, potted and placed under glass, they would not be forwarded any. Any attempt at forcing them in a high temperature would only spell ruination for the plants. C. W.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Cinerarias and Calceolarias.

It is time to sow seeds of the showy greenhouse annuals, cinerarias and calceolarias, where good-sized plants are wanted. Of course, fairly good ones may be had if the seed is sown even as late as the end of August, but if you want cinerarias to flower for Christmas and through January, and if you want herbaceous calceolarias of a size to make them the envy of your neighbors, sow the seeds now in well drained pans or flats of light compost, containing a good sprinkling of sand. Cover the seeds lightly, if at all, and stand the pans or flats either in a greenhouse with a northern exposure, or in a cold-frame where as cool conditions as possible prevail. Cover each pan or flat with a square of glass after watering, and in addition lay a sheet of paper over them in order to keep the soil moist as long as possible without watering.

The seedlings will appear within a few days, when light must gradually be given them. Growth is slow in July and August and careless watering may cause the whole lot to damp off. Give them a cool, airy frame or house and look out for the caterpillars which will a little later come along and, if not caught, will soon devour every plant. Both calceolarias and cinerarias barely exist during the two hottest months of the year. With the cooler nights of September and October they take on added vigor.

Mignonette.

Early in August is a suitable time to make a first sowing of mignonette under glass. There is no advantage in sowing earlier, as the plants give flowers of mediocre quality and come in a time when outdoor flowers are still abundant and good. Mignonette needs a cool house; one piped to maintain a winter minimum of 40 to 42 degrees is desirable. Either beds or raised benches can be utilized. If the latter are used, be sure no heating pipes run below them. Mignonette loves to have its roots cool and moist. A good depth of soil should be given it, not less than six inches, and plenty of well rotted manure should be included in it. Sow the seeds in little patches twelve inches apart each way. Thin the plants out to two or three to each patch. Let them run up to flower, then pinch back well to make the plants branch. It is not until steady cold weather arrives that mignonette reaches its greatest perfection. Watch sharply for the cabbage worms, which have a special liking for this plant. Remember also that fumigation for mignonette must always be light, or the foliage will be scorched. Be sure to buy the best seed procurable for indoor culture.

DUTCH BULBS

NARCISSI IN TENNESSEE.

Some Tests and Their Results.

For some years we have been experimenting with different members of the narcissus family. We have tested a large number of the more standard varieties and last year we tested about 100 of the newer varieties, many of which are just beginning to be offered by the more progressive growers abroad.

In these tests a few facts were well impressed on our minds, and some of them were not exactly pleasant. The first thing to mention is the utter unreliability of most of the growers on "the other side" in the matter of supplying varieties true to name. They seem to feel that they are for sale anyway and that Americans will never know whether they get the true or a false variety. But by persistent effort and by purchasing the same variety from several sources, we have been able to become acquainted with most of the varieties we have ordered and can tell them readily. Most of these, we believe, can be grown in this country as well as in the old world, if not better. All varieties are not hardy in the extreme north, but an almost endless array of them are hardy, and the best part of the matter is that the cheaper varieties are usually fully as good as the newer and higher priced sorts. It is our purpose to mention merely a few that we believe the trade should become better acquainted with, as they are a real improvement over some of the older varieties.

Phœnix and Poeticus.

Sulphur and Orange Phœnix are not so well known as they should be. They force as well as Von Sion and we find that they sell better. Outdoors they are the most satisfactory of the entire family, except poeticus, seldom giving less than 18-inch stems and increasing rapidly. Apricot Phœnix is a new one; it is a sort of semi-double, with a distinct appearance that commands attention at once. We do not think it will ever be so popular as either of the other Phœnixes, but as soon as the price is right all will find it a seller. We have not found any other doubles, of which there seem to be a number of candidates for favor, that have distinct enough features to make them worthy of a place with any but the collector.

Our tests of the new poeticus varieties have been a disappointment, as we have found only one of real value, King Edward VII. It is a real improvement in size, type and length of stem, and after three seasons of test under trying conditions it remains without disease and is a sure bloomer. Like some other sorts, it does not always reach us true to name.

The New Whites.

Emperor is easily distanced in every way by Glory of Leiden. Empress is still the best bicolor of the large trumpets for outdoor work. The William Goldring, however, has a better color and is fully as large, with shorter stems. We have tried out about fifty of the new whites, but are not ready to say that any of them are a real success. Mme. De Graaff would be fine were it white, but it is not. Cernuus pulcher is a more refined flower than De Graaff and a little nearer white. Tortuosus is a true white and a good one, but too small. Serratus is a fine white, as large as Golden Spur. It is a close second to Snowflake, which we consider the best white we have ever seen. Its weaknesses are its shortness of stem and its resemblance to albicans in shape.

THE WEEKLY FLORISTS' REVIEW

As experience is the best teacher, so do we learn fastest by an exchange of experiences. Many valuable points are brought out by discussion.

Good penmanship, spelling and grammar, though desirable, are not necessary. Write as you would talk when doing your best.

WE SHALL BE GLAD TO HEAR FROM YOU

In Sir Watkin florists have a variety that is a winner in every way and in this country it has not proved of weak constitution, as is sometimes reported from abroad. Outdoors among the grass, with no care for three years, it averaged over four inches in diameter, on longer stems than Emperor. Of course, it is of a different type, but it is a seller.

Barrii and Poetaz Varieties.

The Barrii family is a good one for florists, as the members of this family are hardy anywhere and will stand as much neglect as the poeticus. B. conspicuus and B. Falstaff are the two best known. They are about alike, so one does not need both. They are striking, with the two shades of yellow in the short trumpet. Torchlight is a great improvement, as the two colors are much more striking and the band really approaches red. Siddington would be better still, were it not for its short stems. Vivid is a misnomer, as it is not vivid at all. Grand Duchess is a distinct variety, with a white trumpet about an inch long, and the perianth is a distinct star; it is a good variety.

But the Poetaz varieties are the real acquisitions in the narcissus family. They are grand for cutting, blooming as many as a dozen in a cluster, and the stems are often two feet long. The flower is as large as poeticus. They seem absolutely hardy, and the cheaper varieties are far the best. We have only eight varieties that we have tested. Thus far we like Irene and Elvira the best of the family, and believe they are the ones that are worth growing for cut flowers.

The True Jonquils.

Among the true jonquils there is just one that is of real value, and of it we sold more last season than of any other narcissus, and will likely do so again this season. This is the true Campernelle rugulosus. It is a fine forcer and equally good in the open ground, where it takes care of itself. The flowers are pure gold and as large as a silver dollar, in clusters of five to fifteen. The fragrance is the most attractive feature, though it would be a winner if it were odorless.

We are partial to the Leedsii type for outdoor cutting. The stems are extra long on most varieties and they are good sellers. We have not tested them in the extreme north, but they should be as hardy as the poeticus. We know none in this family that are not good, though two or three varieties are all that a grower needs, as they are nearly alike. Amabilis, Duchess of Brabant, Minnie Hume and Mrs. Langtry are as good as any, at reasonable prices.

Aside from Sir Watkin, we do not think there are any of the incomparabilis type that are for florists' use, except Lucifer, which is too high priced as yet, and Stella. The latter is a good seller where a cheap flower that has grace is desired.

None of the bulbocodiums are of value to the florist, though they are sweet flowers when well grown. They are too small and they lack stems.

Floyd Bralliar.

Beaver Dam, Wis.—A. G. Boomer, who bought the business of Jos. Wagner about a year ago, is erecting three large greenhouses on Park avenue. For downtown display rooms and store, he has rented the quarters at 104 North Spring street, which he is furnishing with a full equipment of up-to-date fixtures.

CARNATIONS

CARNATIONS FOR EUROPE.

The publication of some recent notes by W. Wells, concerning the packing of stock of new varieties of carnations to be sent to Europe, has resulted in some interesting correspondence. It appears that Mr. Wells bought a certain variety from Peter Fisher, Ellis, Mass., and, on arrival of the stock in England, commented that the packing was "not top notch." It happened that Mr. Fisher personally had packed the shipment. This is what he says of the methods of packing for long shipment:

"I think it is only just towards the packer to state that the plants in question were lifted from the benches in which they were growing, and packed just exactly as Mr. Wells directed, and that against the judgment of the packer, who is also the writer of this article, stating incidentally that my method in packing foreign shipments was to pack in sphagnum moss containing a faint trace of moisture. Mr. Wells replied that it was necessary to soak the moss in water, wring it by hand and apply to the roots; the plants were also headed back as instructed. It was the excess of moisture that caused all the trouble."

Mr. Fisher says that at the same time he shipped stock of Gorgeous to England packed in sphagnum containing only a trace of moisture and the shipments arrived in excellent shape.

TIME TO BENCH.

I should like to know if I can soon bench my carnations. I have nothing in bloom and want to bench as soon as I can for good results. B. A. A.

There is no reason why you should not bench your carnation plants right away if you have good, strong, well branched stock in the field. It is not the date that governs benching, but the condition of the stock to be transplanted from field to house. A few years ago benching generally was left until the latter part of August or the first part of September, but gradually the larger growers have come to plant as soon as they have developed in the field good, strong, well branched plants. In a year when conditions have been favorable to growth in the field, housing begins right after the Fourth of July holiday. Planting is now being vigorously prosecuted by most of the large growers and will be completed by the middle of August.

HOUSING ANTIRRHINUMS.

When should antirrhinums be put in the greenhouse, and what kinds of antirrhinums are best? Mrs. J. A. W.

The earliest lot of antirrhinums, which should flower well for Christmas, can be housed any time after the middle of August. Some fine special strains are now offered. New England Pink has great popularity. It is the best selling color on the list. Giant White and Giant Yellow are other good varieties. The dark shades do not take well.

C. W.

PLANTING FREESIAS.

In growing freesias, should I place the 6-inch pots with the bulbs in a dark place, such as a cellar, until they head, or in a shady place at the north side of the house, or in the sun? I have heard so many different opinions about the planting of freesias that I concluded to ask for your advice, which I have found always good. P. C. M.

Rudolph Lestak, the Flying Florist.

The pots or pans should be placed either in a cellar, or in a coldframe where they can be covered with board shutters until they are started, after which full light can be given them. Some growers give the pots a covering of moss, removing it when growth starts, but you will not go far wrong if you will simply give them a covering of boards to prevent the sun from drying out the soil too rapidly. C. W.

INSECTS ON GERANIUMS.

I am enclosing some geraniums and also some specimens of insects which have done considerable damage to them. Any information as to how to get rid of this pest would be greatly appreciated. J. C. L.

I did not find any leaves or insects in your letter, but should judge that the damage referred to was probably caused by a small hairy caterpillar, which is at times destructive and almost skeletonizes entire plants. Where only a few pests appear, the best method of extermination is to squeeze them between the fingers. When they are too numerous for this, poisoning should be resorted to. Spray with arsenate of lead, one pound to twelve and one-half gallons of water. This will whiten the foliage somewhat, however, and if this will be objectionable try white hellebore, one pound to five gallons, or Paris green, one ounce to twelve and one-half gallons. Add a little lime to the Paris green and there will be little danger of burning.

Do not spray when the sun is hot; a cloudy day or toward evening on a clear day is a suitable time. Try to get the spray below the foliage, as this is where most of the pests will be found. C. W.

AVIATION.

Quite a few florists are known as high fliers, and there are others who go up in the air at the slightest provocation, but so far as is known Rudolph Lestak is the first working florist to procure an aviator's license. Mr. Lestak removed from the east to Chicago and entered the employ of H. N. Bruns, where he was a grower of lily of the valley. Later he took a position on a private estate at Lake Geneva, but for the last year he has been employed at Klimmer's Greenhouses, at Forest Park, now under the management of Frank J. Klimmer. Mr. Lestak obtained his aviator's license last week and the accompanying illustration was prepared from a photograph taken as he was landing after his first flight.

AN ENGLISH ROSE SHOW.

The annual summer show of the English National Rose Society was held at the Royal Botanic Gardens, London, July 4. There was a wonderful display of top-quality blooms, and new varieties were exhibited in large numbers, Hugh Dickson, Belfast, probably eclipsing everything in this line by staging twenty-six novelties and annexing several gold and silver gilt medals. His gold medal varieties were Brilliant and Mrs. J. Lynas, the former a grand decorative scarlet crimson flower, and the latter a pretty soft shade of pink. The varieties that won the silver gilt medals were Muriel Dickson, hybrid briar, bright cherry red; Ulster Gem, single, pure yellow, quite striking; Mrs. Hugh Dickson, a large white bloom, shading to yellow; Mrs. J. W. Parker, a full flower, blush white, and William Cooper, a large, bright crimson. Cards of commendation were received for Duchess of Abercorn, Mrs. Godfrey Brown and Mrs. W. Sargent. Among the others from the Belfast grower were some promising sorts which looked like winners at future dates.

Alexander Dickson & Sons, Ltd., Newtownards, Ireland, received a gold medal for Queen Mary, a rose of various tints, after the style of Juliet, and silver gilt medals for Conway Jones, a superb cerise crimson, and Red Letter Day, rich crimson. Cards of commendation were awarded for Mary Greer, a superb lemon white, and Mrs. Moyna, blush white.

Mrs. Ambrose Ricardo, cream, flushed yellow, from S. McGredy & Son, Portadown, received a silver gilt medal, as did also a Testout-colored Druschki from E. Hicks, Twyford.

Mrs. Andrew Carnegie, the sensational rose of last year's show, was again exhibited in capital form by James Cocker & Sons, Aberdeen, and with it they carried off several prizes.

The best decorative display of cut roses, in a space 3x33 feet, was put up by W. & J. Brown, Peterborough, and richly merited the gold medal awarded, for variety and brilliancy. In the championship class for seventy-two best blooms, B. R. Cant & Sons, Colchester, won first; Alex. Dickson & Sons, Ltd., second. D. Prior & Sons, Colchester, were first for twelve varieties, seven blooms of each, and G. Paul & Sons, Waltham Cross, first for nine baskets of roses.

In a class for best display in a space 3x20 feet, there were seven competitors, the premier prize going to G. Jackman & Sons, Woking. For a group of roses in pots, 250 square feet, Hobbies, Ltd., Dereham, proved the victors.

Altogether the show was one of great extent and interest, held in glorious weather and patronized by a large crowd of visitors. Bee.

A BASKET FROM NEW YORK.

The accompanying illustration shows a specimen of the work of Max Schling, the New York retailer. The arrangement of the roses in the basket is most artistic and the effect is, through its simplicity rather than its elaborateness, striking as well as beautiful. Basket work of this kind is bound to make a hit with the customers of high-class florists.

INDIANA FLORISTS.

Consolidation of Two Societies.

The State Florists' Association of Indiana held its midsummer meeting at Winona Lake, July 16. Being one of the committee in charge of the consolidation of the Northern Indiana Florists' Association with the older state association, the writer journeyed to Indiana's leading summer resort the day before the meeting, for the purpose of completing the details of the merger, which was to be consummated at the joint meeting of the two societies. Upon arrival at the thriving little city of Warsaw, where our friend Dederick holds out, we were met at the station by that jovial gentleman and directed to the Winona assembly grounds. Here we found one of the finest places for holding a convention or picnic that it has ever been our pleasure to see. It is quiet and restful, if you feel inclined to rest; yet there are plenty of facilities for sport and recreation, if you are looking for that kind of an outing. There is boating, fishing, baseball diamond, lawn tennis courts, croquet grounds, golf—in fact, almost anything your heart could wish for. The committee had hardly set foot on the grounds before it was agreed that here was an ideal spot for holding the midsummer meeting, and the suggestion offered later, that the July meeting of each year should be held here and that it should be made a two-day meeting, was taken up without a dissenting voice.

Meeting of Joint Committee.

In the afternoon the joint committee held its meeting at the cottage of President J. D. Conner, Jr., and be it said to the credit of the northern Indiana men that although their society was to terminate its existence as a separate organization, and at a time when it was in a most flourishing condition, there was never a thought except for the betterment of the trade and a greater florists' association. Where men are agreed on a purpose for the general good, details are not difficult to work out, and so it was at this meeting. As already stated, the July meeting of each year is to be held at Winona; besides this, there are at least three other meetings to be held north of Indianapolis each year; hence the northern contingent of the greater association will have at least as many meetings each year in their original territory as before the merger. The other advantages, such as a larger acquaintance, greater effectiveness with legislatures, etc., are of course of mutual benefit. So the membership of each of the two former associations will benefit equally. It was agreed that the annual meeting shall be held at Indianapolis in January and that the exhibition of flowers shall be made even a greater feature than it has been made by the state association heretofore. This insures two big meetings each year—the one at Winona in July and the other at Indianapolis in January. Having completed the details of the merger, the committee was ready to report to the meeting, and during the interim proceeded to enjoy the good things offered.

Meeting of Northern Association.

The meeting of the northern organization was called to order by President J. D. Conners at 10:30 a. m. The committee read its report, which was laid on the table until the afternoon meeting, for the purpose of giving the members opportunity to study its provisions thoroughly before voting on it. After adjournment we were escorted to the dining hall, where an elegant dinner was served. Whether the morning's activities had been of the appetite-producing kind, or whether the environments here are of such a wholesome nature, we are unable to say, but at any rate the way that company fell to was a pleasure to see. Certainly the food tasted good.

At the afternoon meeting the main subject was, of course, the merging of the two societies, and that the members had given the committee's report considerable thought was evidenced by the free discussion that followed. There was not a word of criticism, but a free discussion for the purpose of a thorough understanding of the provisions of the report. When the vote was cast, there was one dissenting vote out of nearly fifty. This was later made unanimous and it was agreed that the association should at once take steps to complete the merger.

Ratification by State Society.

The state association at once called its meeting, with President W. W. Coles in the chair. The committee's report was received and concurred in, and the committee was discharged with thanks. A letter was read from E. T. Barnes, asking the association to visit his place early in October to view the dahlias. This change was agreed to and the trip will be made in October instead of September, as had been at first arranged. A resolution was introduced, proposing that a petition be sent to the S. A. F. asking that body to adopt some scheme whereby anyone who joins a local organization may thereby also become a member of the national society. This resolution was made the special order of business of the August meeting. By this time it was train time for many of the members and the meeting was brought to a close, everyone feeling that the day marked a big step forward in the affairs of the association. The writer wishes to express his personal appreciation of the courtesies shown and the fair-mindedness of the northern Indiana bunch. A. F. J. Baur.

Port Richmond, N. Y.—Fred G. Hawkins, of Stapleton, has moved to this city and is doing business at the place formerly occupied by Wm. McFarland.

Jamestown, N. Y.—J. D. Woodard, who formerly conducted the Woodard Flower Shop, at Warren, Pa., is now a resident of this place.

Washington, Ia.—Frank T. Wolf has bought an interest in the Keck Floral Co. The new firm will be known as the Keck-Wolf Floral Co. and will move the greenhouses from their present site on West Washington street to Mr. Wolf's tract of two and a half acres southeast of town.

Dayton, O.—Warren G. Matthews, proprietor of the Dayton Floral Co., has completed negotiations with the King Construction Co. for the construction of his new greenhouses, comprising 25,000 feet of glass, to replace the plant which was destroyed by the flood this spring. He expects to have the work completed in time to take care of the fall business.

Nashville, Tenn.—The firm of McIntyre Bros. has been incorporated as the McIntyre Floral Co., capitalized at $37,000. The incorporators are Dan McIntyre, Thomas McIntyre, Nellie McIntyre and William McIntyre. In the last year McIntyre Bros. added to their real estate and buildings to the amount of about $25,000, and the company now plans to begin the erection of greenhouses next March which will double the present capacity of the plant and cost $25,000.

Muncie, Ind.—Some important changes have been made among florists of the city as a result of the appointment of a receiver for the Muncie Floral Co. The flower store formerly owned by the Muncie Floral Co., located at the corner of Main and Walnut streets, is now known as Miller's Flower Shop, and has been taken over by Mrs. A. P. Andrew, formerly Mrs. George F. Miller. She has secured the services of Miss Lauretta Miller, of Buffalo, N. Y., who is an experienced woman in all phases of the business and will have charge of the shop. Claude C. Clark, formerly of the Williams & Clark Co., is now manager of the Muncie Floral Co. and the Miller's Greenhouse, the two having consolidated.

The alarm clock went off at four o'clock in the morning.

"I fooled you that toime," said Mike with a grin, "for I wasn't aslape at all."

The florist fools himself who thinks there is any way of selling goods in the trade more effective than advertising in The Review. Also, it's the most inexpensive way in proportion to results.

"We are completely sold out and have had to send money back. The Review is, without doubt, the best advertising medium in the trade."—J. C. RENNISON CO., Sioux City, Ia., July 16, 1913.

Review readers are not asleep. Note this:

"Please tell us confidentially what you think of — — . Why doesn't he advertise in The Review if he is O. K.?"—MILLER FLORAL CO., Farmington, Utah, July 5, 1913.

The alarm clock rings in The Review office at 4 o'clock (p. m., not a. m.) every Tuesday. It is to let everybody know advertising forms close for that week's issue in just sixty minutes.

Monticello, Ia.—C. L. Van Meter is busy with the erection of two houses.

Iowa City, Ia.—H. J. Paasch and his wife have returned from a two weeks' visit to Spencer, Ia.

Glen Ridge, N. J.—A fire in the cellar of Axel Stanley's flower shop July 11 caused damage to the amount of several hundred dollars.

Atlantic City, N. J.—Plans are being made by the Atlantic Cut Flower Market to place cut flower stations along the Boardwalk and in the hotels. The stations will occupy spaces about five feet square and will be of artistic design, constructed entirely of ornamental metal and beautifully decorated. Space will be rented from hotels and property owners along the beach front.

OBITUARY.

Peter Morel.

Peter Morel, of the firm of Morel Bros., Scranton, Pa., died of pulmonary trouble early in the morning of July 14. He had been ill for only a few days and his friends were greatly shocked by the unexpected news of his death. He was the junior member of the firm and had been more active than his brother, Louis, for the last few years in the managing of the selling end of the business; hence he had a wide acquaintance, especially among the florists of the Lackawanna and Wyoming valleys, and will be greatly missed in the trade. It is believed that his characteristic energy, which persisted almost till the end, was one of the causes that hastened his death. Contrary to the physician's advice, he arose on Saturday morning, July 12, and left his room, but was soon compelled to return to bed, as his lungs could not endure the rapid heart action which the exertion occasioned. The strain of the increased heart action quickly brought on inflammation of the lungs, which took him away Monday morning at 2 o'clock.

Mr. Morel was of a genial disposition and was an assiduous worker, spending many hours of each day in his business. With his brother, he built up a large vegetable and flower trade, adding to their greenhouses until the range covered an extensive area. He is survived by his wife, his brother, Louis, and three sisters.

Joseph Clarke.

The death of the well-known gardener, Joseph Clarke, occurred at West Manchester, Mass., July 13, the deceased being in his seventy-eighth year. Mr. Clarke, who was of Irish birth, came to America when a youth and at once engaged in horticultural pursuits. His first charge was at Canton, Mass., but he later moved to Manchester, Mass., to design, plant and care for the estate of N. L. Higginson, where he remained until his retirement a few years ago. This estate was the most tastefully laid out and planted on the Massachusetts north shore and it was a never-ending delight to go over the beautiful winding walks there, viewing the rock gardens and other unique features. Rock plants, hardy herbaceous plants, lilies and other bulbous plants, many of them rare and difficult of culture, could be seen growing there with a reckless abandon, while many choice trees, shrubs and greenhouse plants were also to be found. Mr. Clarke knew intimately the particular needs of all his plants and they seemed to appreciate his kindly attentions.

For many years he was a member of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, showing greenhouse plants and hardy plants at almost every exhibition. He acted as a member of the plant and flower committee of the society till two years ago, his knowledge of hardy plants being invaluable to the committee. The North Shore Horticultural Society owed much to him and he acted as its first president. He never missed a meeting or exhibition until quite recently and was beloved by the entire horticultural fraternity there, and, in fact, wherever he was known.

He was a member of the Gardeners and Florists' Club of Boston, and seven years ago was elected one of its few honorary members for his eminent services to horticulture. It can safely be said of him that he was one of the most upright and respected practical gardeners who ever lived in Massachusetts. He is survived by one son, Joseph T. Clarke, for many years the respected superintendent of the John E. Thayer estate, South Lancaster, and by two daughters.

E. B. Sutton.

Effingham B. Sutton, who was in business some years ago as a florist at Babylon, N. Y., died July 16 at his home in Flushing, N. Y., at the age of 60 years. He was born July 7, 1853, in New York city. Before entering the florists' trade at Babylon, he was in business for a time with his father and brother, maintaining a line of fast clippers between New York and San Francisco, under the firm name of Sutton & Co. He removed to Flushing nine years ago.

Julius Roehrs.

Julius Roehrs, founder and head of the Julius Roehrs Co., died at his home at Rutherford, N. J., at 10 a. m. Sunday, July 20. He had been ill for several months with stomach trouble and had returned only a few days before from a trip to Europe in quest of health.

Julius Roehrs was born in Hamburg, Germany, in 1844. He served three years in the botanical gardens at Kiel, Holstein, and went from that city to Erfurt and Dresden. In 1865 he came to America, having been appointed head gardener for Mr. Lienan, of Jersey City, who at that time was beginning to form a collection of orchids. In 1868 Mr. Lienan returned to Germany, and his whole collection of orchids and stove plants was sold. Mr. Roehrs then took over Mr. Lienan's greenhouses and started business as a general florist. He also built some greenhouses on Prospect street, Jersey City Heights, where he grew roses and carnations for his retail trade. He did not remain in the retail business, however, for more than five years. When the Lienan greenhouses were torn down Mr. Roehrs moved entirely to Jersey City Heights, where he made a specialty of growing hybrid perpetual roses under glass. With these he was remarkably successful.

When again compelled to look for a new site, he bought a large tract of land in Rutherford, N. J., and removed his entire establishment to that place, where it is now located. He continued to give his chief attention to the growing of hybrid perpetual roses until the profits in that line were curtailed by the appearance of the American Beauty, which forced the older varieties to take a back seat. At this juncture he began the handling of palms, stove and greenhouse plants, and to his many other varieties of stock he also gradually added orchids. In recent years he has justly prided himself on having one of the finest and most complete commercial collections of orchids on this continent.

He married, in 1877, a German lady—Miss Schroeder. They had seven children, five boys and two girls. The two eldest sons, Julius and Edouard, have been for years associated with him in business; and it is expected the company will continue under their direction without change of policy.

The funeral was held at the residence Tuesday afternoon, July 22. There was a large attendance, every branch of the trade being represented and many from a distance being present. The flowers attested the high esteem in which Mr. Roehrs and his family are held, the offerings being extremely numerous and fine in character. The rooms were banked to the ceiling. The pall was of orchids. A splendid wreath came from Sander & Sons, St. Albans, England.

J. M. Gleason.

J. M. Gleason, a well known and highly respected Boston seedsman, died Sunday evening, July 20, following an operation performed the same morning. Mr. Gleason was a native of Concord, Mass., and spent his entire life, after leaving school, in the seed business. He was first with the firm of Allan & Co., New York, next moving to Boston and being a partner in the firm of Everett & Gleason. He later went over to Schlegel & Fottler Co., being a member of that concern until it became merged with the H. E. Fiske Co. and W. W. Rawson Co., as the Fottler, Fiske, Rawson Co., when he and A. F. Barney joined forces with the old house of T. J. Grey Co.

There were few more expert seedsmen in the United States than Mr. Gleason and he had the confidence and respect of a wide circle of market gardeners, florists and private gardeners. The deceased was a member of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston, many members of which attended the funeral services as a last token of esteem. There was a wealth of floral souvenirs from numerous friends and business associates. Mr. Gleason was in his sixty-fifth year and leaves a widow and two sons, one of whom is married, to mourn his loss.

Bridgeport, Conn.—Charles Pflomm's Sons have awarded the contract for the construction of an addition, 30x91 feet, to their greenhouses to the Lord & Burnham Co. Work is to be started at once.

Waynesboro, Pa.—Henry Eichholz has rebuilt and replanted his greenhouses, which were destroyed by fire last fall. Some of his carnation seedlings were taken care of by friends among the Harrisburg florists and will be grown on for the next national flower show.

Joplin, Mo.—An automobile belonging to William E. Poundstone was stolen from the garage behind his establishment on the evening of July 5. It is believed that this theft and one or two others were the work of a band of joy-riders, for the automobile was found abandoned next day a few blocks from the garage, the meter showing it had run about ten miles.

Glen Cove, N. Y.—The King Construction Co., North Tonawanda, N. Y., has received an order from J. P. Morgan for the erection complete of an extensive range of glass houses at his country place here. The range comprises houses for peaches and nectarines, vegetables, violets, bouvardias, carnations, melons and general plants. The houses will be King channel bar with curved glass eaves. All the lower parts of the houses, including the heating pipes, are to be of cast iron. The steel work used for supporting the glass is to be zinc-plated.

its meeting, with President W. W. Coles in the chair. The committee's report was received and concurred in, and the committee was discharged with thanks. A letter was read from E. T. Barnes, asking the association to visit his place early in October to view the dahlias. This change was agreed to and the trip will be made in October instead of September, as had been at first arranged. A resolution was introduced, proposing that a petition be sent to the S. A. F. asking that body to adopt some scheme whereby anyone who joins a local organization may thereby also become a member of the national society. This resolution was made the special order of business of the August meeting. By this time it was train time for many of the members and the meeting was brought to a close, everyone feeling that the day marked a big step forward in the affairs of the association. The writer wishes to express his personal appreciation of the courtesies shown and the fair-mindedness of the northern Indiana bunch. A. F. J. Baur.

Port Richmond, N. Y. Fred G. Hawkins, of Stapleton, has moved to this city and is doing business at the place formerly occupied by Wm. McFarland.

Jamestown, N. Y. J. D. Woodard, who formerly conducted the Woodard Flower Shop, at Warren, Pa., is now a resident of this place.

Washington, Ia. Frank T. Wolf has bought an interest in the Keck Floral Co. The new firm will be known as the Keck-Wolf Floral Co. and will move the greenhouses from their present site on West Washington street to Mr. Wolf's tract of two and a half acres southeast of town.

Dayton, O. Warren G. Matthews, proprietor of the Dayton Floral Co., has completed negotiations with the King Construction Co. for the construction of his new greenhouses, comprising 25,000 feet of glass, to replace the plant which was destroyed by the flood this spring. He expects to have the work completed in time to take care of the fall business.

Nashville, Tenn. The firm of McIntyre Bros. has been incorporated as the McIntyre Floral Co., capitalized at $37,000. The incorporators are Dan McIntyre, Thomas McIntyre, Nellie McIntyre and William McIntyre. In the last year McIntyre Bros. added to their real estate and buildings to the amount of about $25,000, and the company now plans to begin the erection of greenhouses next March which will double the present capacity of the plant and cost $25,000.

Muncie, Ind. Some important changes have been made among florists of the city as a result of the appointment of a receiver for the Muncie Floral Co. The flower store formerly owned by the Muncie Floral Co., located at the corner of Main and Walnut streets, is now known as Miller's Flower Shop, and has been taken over by Mrs. A. P. Andrew, formerly Mrs. George F. Miller. She has secured the services of Miss Lauretta Miller, of Buffalo, N. Y., who is an experienced woman in all phases of the business and will have charge of the shop. Claude C. Clark, formerly of the Williams & Clark Co., is now manager of the Muncie Floral Co. and the Miller's Greenhouse, the two having consolidated.

The alarm clock went off at four o'clock in the morning.

"I fooled you that toime," said Mike with a grin, "for I wasn't aslape at all."

The florist fools himself who thinks there is any way of selling goods in the trade more effective than advertising in The Review. Also, it's the most inexpensive way in proportion to results.

"We are completely sold out and have had to send money back. The Review is, without doubt, the best advertising medium in the trade."—J. C. Risnson Co., Sioux City, Ia., July 16, 1913.

Review readers are not asleep. Note this:

"Please tell us confidentially what you think of —— Why doesn't he advertise in The Review if he is O. K.?"—Miller Floral Co., Farmington, Utah, July 5, 1913.

The alarm clock rings in The Review office at 4 o'clock (p. m., not a. m.) every Tuesday. It is to let everybody know advertising forms close for that week's issue in just sixty minutes.

Monticello, Ia. C. L. Van Meter is busy with the erection of two houses.

Iowa City, Ia. H. J. Paasch and his wife have returned from a two weeks' visit to Spencer, Ia.

Glen Ridge, N. J. A fire in the cellar of Axel Stanley's flower shop July 11 caused damage to the amount of several hundred dollars.

Atlantic City, N. J. Plans are being made by the Atlantic Cut Flower Market to place cut flower stations along the Boardwalk and in the hotels. The stations will occupy spaces about five feet square and will be of artistic design, constructed entirely of ornamental metal and beautifully decorated. Space will be rented from hotels and property owners along the beach front.

BETTER push along the carnation planting, so as to be ready for the S. A. F. convention.

THE scarcity of sphagnum moss is at an end, at least for a time. The market is unsettled.

NOTE the way the advertisements of field-grown carnation plants are increasing in the Classified section of The Review.

DID you ever stop to think of the many evidences that the slow-pay customer, whose long overdue account is worrying you, also owes your competitors?

NOT a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending The Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper.

THIS year in greater degree than usual one can combine business and pleasure by attending the S. A. F. convention. There will be many new faces among those in attendance and Minneapolis is almost a summer resort.

THE premium list for the Illinois State Fair, Springfield, has been issued. The classes for florists are to be staged October 6 to 9 and include 117 classes, with adequate premiums. J. E. Taggart, Freeport, Ill., is superintendent of floriculture this year.

A PRELIMINARY schedule for the plant classes of the International Flower Show to be held at New York March 21 to 28, 1914, has been issued. Those wishing copies can get them by addressing John Young, secretary, 54 West Twenty-eighth street, New York.

DUTY ON GREENHOUSE GLASS.

The pending tariff bill, which seems almost certain to become the law, reduces the duty on the greenhouse sizes of window glass from 1⅞ cents per pound to 1 cent per pound. Double-strength 16 x 18 and 16 x 24 is imported on the basis of eighty pounds to the box of fifty square feet, so that the present duty is $1.50 per box and the new rate will be 80 cents per box, a reduction of 70 cents.

There are at present no large quantities of greenhouse sizes in stock, either in this country or in Belgium, where conditions have been such that production has been curtailed for many months. The present disposition of the factories, therefore, is to hold prices to the level that has existed throughout the early summer, but there is a feeling on the part of jobbers that some important changes are impending. It is thought that business conditions may not be such as to consume all the foreign glass that will be manufactured in the next year and that it can be marketed in this country at an excellent profit at present prices after paying a duty of only 80 cents per box. It is asserted by those who have made a life-long study of the glass trade that the cost of production in the United States is more than the freight and 80 cents per box greater than the cost in Belgium. No wage agreement has thus far been made for the autumn fire in this country, and none will be until the tariff law has been signed. The manufacturers feel that with nearly half their protection removed the wages will have to come down to more nearly the European scale.

On the whole it looks as though greenhouse glass may sell somewhat cheaper than it has, at least for a time after the new tariff law goes into effect.

Additional Prize.

The following prize offer was received too late to be printed in the schedule of the Minneapolis exhibition:

By Jacob Thomann & Sons, Rochester, N. Y., first prize of $10 for twenty-five spikes of the best white gladioli; second prize, $5; open class, No. 19.

A SLEEPLESS FLORIST.

This florist has been kept awake nights by his business, but he got the business by keeping awake in the daytime. It is as clear as day that the way to sell the most stock is to offer it to as many people as you can who buy your kind of stock. That is what it means to advertise in The Review. Have you seen daylight yet?

Please take those fern and mum ads out of your most valuable paper. They don't let me sleep nights. Too much work.—B. B. Pohlmann, Rockford, Ill., July 15, 1913.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

There are those who say that not in years has the Chicago market been so bare of stock as it was at the opening of the present week. There always comes a time in summer when receipts are light. Possibly the supply is as great as it was at its lowest ebb last season, but certainly the supply is not now so large as it was at this date last year. Carnations are almost out of the market and asters, because of the long spell of dry weather, are not coming in as early as usual. Indeed, the receipts of asters have not yet become large enough to cut any figure in this market. Local wholesalers, in the hope of augmenting their supply, have been telegraphing eastern markets, where asters have been reported plentiful, but the replies received early this week have not been such as to afford the prospect of a profitable speculation. Neither are gladioli coming in so abundantly as was the case at this date last year. There are increased shipments, but the general shortage of stock results in the gladioli cleaning up promptly, and more could be sold if good.

Cool weather has resulted in a reduction in rose crops, Beauties especially. The oversupply which has characterized the situation for some weeks is now a thing of the past. There are Beauties to be had, but not always just the grade the buyer wants. Prices nat-

NO NEED TO DO WITHOUT FIRST-CLASS

ORCHIDS

YOU CAN GET FINE CATTLEYAS HERE

GOOD ORCHIDS are not abundant in this market just now—mostly shipped in from the east—but WE have a good crop locally grown that we recommend you to try. These are not only well grown but they are fresh cut and reach you in condition to give the best of satisfaction. If you have been disappointed elsewhere it's all the more reason for ordering of Amling next time.

GLADIOLI

Year after year we lead the market on Gladioli—the largest supply of high grade stock. This is stock that it is a pleasure to handle. Plenty of America, Augusta and Mrs. F. King, the three best in their colors.

Asters are just starting to come in. We have a fair supply, and it soon will be large. LET YOUR ORDERS COME.

BEAUTIES

Cuts are not quite so heavy this week but we still cut thousands each day. The quality is right up to the top notch, as it always is with our stock. We are especially anxious to hear from the buyers who need daily shipments, no matter how large or how small. If you can use a dozen Beauties per day, or a hundred Beauties per day, or any other quantity, we want you with us this summer.

FANCY ROSES

Good roses have become so scarce that medium and long stems carrying quality flowers sell on sight, but we aim never to be without some good roses in the ice-box to go out on late shipping orders. Let us know your needs as early in the day as possible, but call on us at short notice if you must. You will find us rose headquarters, now and all summer.

FANCY VALLEY

You can depend upon us at all times for valley. If you run short, a wire to Amling will bring the valley you need.

EASTER LILIES

We can supply fine Easter Lilies in large quantity every day in the year.

urally have advanced; they now are averaging about the usual summer figures. The growers who are carrying over their old roses are now drying them off and practically all the stock cut is from young plants. A larger proportion of the roses were replanted this year and there is beginning to be a fair cut from the young stock. Of course stems are short, in most cases, and buds are small. White continues in best demand. Although Killarney predominates, Sunburst probably gets more attention than any other variety; it has come rapidly to the front as a summer rose. A number of growers now are cutting Mrs. Russell and everyone appears to think highly of it, although its true character can not be judged from the short-stemmed flowers now seen.

Possibly the most abundant item on the list is giganteum lilies; these are coming heavily, but the price is being fairly well maintained because of the general light supply. Shasta daisies also are abundant, though not in such oversupply as was the case a fortnight ago. They are not particularly good property. Orchids have shortened up, although there is no special demand. Valley is not plentiful, little demand being anticipated in July.

Outdoor sweet peas show the effects of the severe heat and lack of rain early in the season. Only a few are coming in and not many of these are good.

Greens are more plentiful, especially smilax, and there is an abundance of Asparagus plumosus bunches.

In spite of the general shortage in stock, average prices are not up to the usual summer level, according to general report. It nevertheless is said by most of the wholesale houses that daily sales foot up at least as good a total as last year at this time, statements that are difficult to reconcile.

Various Notes.

The Cook County Florists' Association held its monthly meeting at the Tavern July 17, with an attendance of about twenty members. Vice-president Allie Zech occupied the chair, because of the absence of President Kohlbrand on vacation. It was the first time Vice-president Zech had been called on to preside, but he acquitted himself with much credit. An address on greenhouse insurance was given by Florian D. Wallace, listened to with so much interest that several growers present indicated their intention of covering themselves on all classes of insurance. It was decided to hold the next meeting August 14, as the regular night falls in convention week.

postponed meeting July 22 at the office of President Rudd. The work in hand was the preparation for a gladiolus show late this summer and a spring show for 1914. The shows have not been profitable of late, but will be continued as long as the society's surplus holds out.

NEW ORLEANS, LA.

Club Meeting.

The New Orleans Horticultural Society held its twenty-eighth annual meeting at the Association of Commerce building, July 17. H. C. Doescher presided, Paul Abele acted as secretary in the absence of C. R. Panter, and an unusually large number of enthusiastic members were present.

P. A. Chopin, who presided over the society during 1905-06, was elected as the new president. Dan Newsham, one of the younger, rising local florists, was chosen vice-president. John Eblen, a charter member and the society's first treasurer, was reëlected to that position by a rising vote. C. R. Panter, who has also served the society efficiently for many years, as its secretary, was reelected. There being no opposition, all officers were chosen by acclamation.

The secretary's report showed that the society is in excellent financial condition. The books showed a balance on hand of $800 in bonds, stocks and cash. The membership has passed the fifty mark.

E. F. Farley was elected a member. The applications of Charles Farley and A. Verlander were received and laid over until the next meeting.

The business being over, all present betook themselves to the banquet hall of the Association of Commerce, where an elegant cold supper was spread. The president, P. A. Chopin, in his address to the society, urged the members to help him carry out his plan for a spring flower show on as great a scale as ever achieved here. He is confident that, by a united effort, the people visiting the show can be convinced that New Orleans can produce as elegant plants and flowers as any other locality in the Union. He called upon the following to express their views: E. Baker, who made some remarks on the continuation of the lectures, etc.; H. Papworth, who spoke of progressiveness, as shown by having in stock the latest novelties in plants and other things pertaining to a flower store; Paul Abele, on a greater trade show; C. Eble, who predicted success for the show on account of the large number of big firms here now; F. Reyes, on educating the people to appreciate florists' wares; R. Steckler, on the seed department of the business, describing the great benefits derived from proper advertising; George Thomas, on the great progress made in landscape gardening here during the last ten years.

The splendid supper, provided by the newly elected officers, was highly enjoyed by all and many a toast was drunk to the success of the officers, the society and the spring flower show. The next meeting will take place in August.

Various Notes.

C. R. Panter, secretary of the N. O. H. S., who likewise holds the office of Past Supreme Arch of the order of U. A. O. D., went recently to London, England, as Supreme Representative of all the Druidic orders of this country, to take part in the international session held in that city. He intends, at the close of the convention, to visit the various centers of horticulture in England, combining business with pleasure.

Henry Scheuermann, for many years manager of the store of the Metairie Ridge Nursery Co., has resigned his position and is now connected, temporarily, with F. J. Reyes & Co.

J. A. Newsham has returned from a two months' trip to England, Belgium and France. At London he attended a meeting of the Royal Horticultural Society, which was of a highly instructive order. At Covent Garden he admired the quick and up-to-date handling of all kinds of plants and cut flowers. He stated that the stock is shipped in open trays, without any packing, by all the railroads over the entire country, with hardly any damage. Being an orchid specialist himself, Mr. Newsham paid a visit to some of the foremost growers of this plant. He observed with keen interest the large number of orchid seedlings raised by the specialists, but found them, with a few exceptions, not equal to the original species. At Ghent, Belgium, he visited the specialists in azaleas, araucarias, kentias and Laurus nobilis, the principal plants grown for southern exportation. At Paris he admired the exceptionally artistic window displays in the flower stores. On the return trip Mr. Newsham visited Henry A. Dreer's place, in Philadelphia, and found that this establishment displayed more system, cleanliness and general good management than most of the places he had visited in Europe. He spoke most highly of the hospitality shown him during his entire trip. This was his first visit to the old country in twenty-five years. R. E.

OMAHA.

The Omaha Florists' Club will hold its annual picnic Wednesday afternoon and evening, July 30, at Krug's park, with a good program of sports and races, lunch and refreshments. All florists and their friends are invited. The club is getting ready for a bowling team to take along to Minneapolis to the S. A. F. convention. It is expected a large delegation from Omaha and Nebraska will go to Minneapolis in special cars leaving Omaha Monday evening, August 18. Florists out west and in the state are invited to join the Omaha Florists' Club's party.

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

The market had a drop in business last week, Saturday being the only good day of the week. Funeral work is all that is keeping the retailers going at present. Some growers around the city still have their old carnation plants in the benches and they help out considerably when there is a lot of funeral work.

Various Notes.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

The Market.

Business last week was slow. The extremely hot weather which has prevailed during the month had affected the quality of the stock, with the result that many varieties of flowers are to be had at the buyer's own price. Carnations are so small as to be undesirable and the roses present a soft appearance in general keeping with the apathy of the Washingtonians, for this is the vacation period. Locally grown cattleyas are somewhat scarce. Asters are not yet sufficient in quantity to prove a factor in the market and gladioli find little demand.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Eastern Market.

The retail florists complain that there are times when it is difficult to obtain enough material to give their work needed variety, a complaint that has much truth in it. The hot, dry weather of the early summer wound up some indoor crops before the new crops came into bloom, and ruined many early asters. Lancaster county is furnishing an increasing supply of asters, but more could be used, particularly of the finer grades. Gladioli are in strong supply and are being used freely at fair prices. The quality and variety are excellent. Easter lilies are plentiful at moderate prices. Valley and Cattleya Gaskelliana also are in fair supply. Down east sends Beauties and New York state sends sweet peas. Both are useful. Among the best summer carnations noted are White Perfection, Mrs. C. W. Ward and Victory. Kaiserin, Maryland and Double White Killarney lead the roses. Good roses are scarce, poor ones plentiful. The volume is above normal for the season.

Sprinkling.

The Campbell Irrigating System gave a practical demonstration on the grounds of Walter P. Stokes, at Moorestown, N. J., July 21. The chief difference between the Campbell and the Skinner systems lies in the fact that the Campbell system requires no adjusting of the sprays, being so arranged that they meet or overlap without the care of an attendant, a good advantage. There are other points of difference that may or may not be considered desirable. The Campbell spray is coarse, rather inclined to make puddles of water, while the Skinner, on the other hand, makes a fine mist or spray. Both are good and worthy of attention.

John Wanamaker with a request for a prompt decision. The boiler men have been asked whether in the event of Saengerfest hall being chosen, they would give a practical demonstration of their heating systems, a brainy idea, as the hall lacks heat.

Samuel S. Pennock attended the outing of the Lancaster County Florists' Association at Hershey's, twelve miles from Harrisburg, July 15.

The H. F. Michell Co. will build two greenhouses, about 25x120 feet, for hardy roses at Andalusia and add 250 sashes for coldframes.

Foreign goods continue to pour in for the M. Rice Co., several hundred more cases having been received this week. Their ten floors of stockroom space are rapidly filling up.

Edgar W. Bayley, lately in charge of the Ellenwood Greenhouses, at Hatboro, Pa., is now manager of the rose section of S. J. Reuter & Son, Westerly, R. I.

Wm. J. Young, Jr., will spend a couple of months on his farm near Pottstown, Pa., returning to his Germantown place once a week. He will be back permanently about the middle of September.

George Burton is now one of the largest rose growers near this city. Beauties are his specialty. His plants are noted for the fine quality of the stock.

H. Bayersdorfer is expected home from Europe, July 26, on the Kaiserin Augusta Victoria.

The death of Julius Roehrs, which occurred July 20, at his home in Rutherford, N. J., is a great shock to his friends in this city.

Albin Harvey & Son, Brandywine Summit, have nearly completed their large new house, 54x500 feet, which will be planted with cucumbers, to be followed by sweet peas and probably by carnations next season.

William F. Gude, his two sons and George H. Cooke, all of Washington, D. C., spent Sunday, July 20, as guests of Commodore Westcott at Waretown, N. J.

John Savage is installing a new 125 horse-power boiler at his place at Gwyneed Valley.

Walter P. Stokes' two new King houses are 17x160 feet each. They are detached from the rest of the Floracroft plant at Moorestown, N. J., are to be separately heated and embody a new idea in the forcing of Easter lilies. Improvements in iron benches and concrete pipe supports also have been made at Floracroft.

Fred Berger has been spending his week ends at Seaside Park, N. J.

Berger Bros. are receiving some fine gladioli, including Kunderdi Glory, Princeps, Mrs. Francis King, America and Augusta.

Fred J. has been spending a couple of days this week with Henry F., at Atlantic City, whereat his friends will rejoice, for Frederick J. is a hard worker. His last name? You can guess.

Among the visitors noted this week were F. N. Baer, Kutztown, Pa.; George M. Cosh, Brazos Greenhouses, Houston, Texas; Mr. Victor, with R. H. Hawkins, Bridgeport, Conn.; George Blackman, of the Wm. Blackman Floral Co., Evansville, Ind., and the younger Dick, rep-

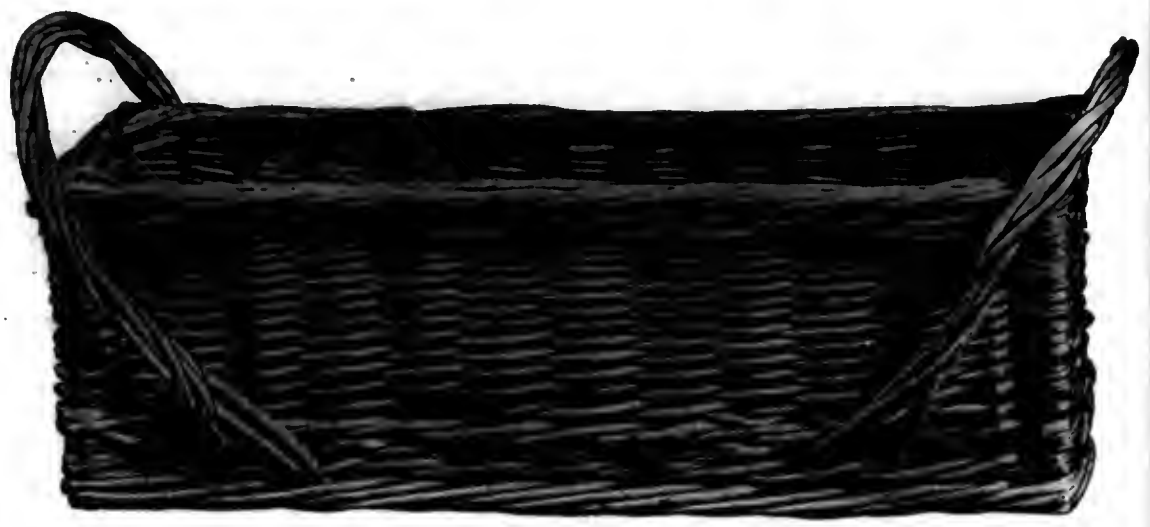
The Market.

Business during the last week has been dead. It is the inevitable July slump that comes every year, but this season makes the record for inactivity, low prices and general demoralization. There is little good stock of anything but lilies reaching the market. There seems to be no end of these. One wholesaler reports promises of a quarter million from two of his growers, to arrive during the next few weeks. Sales on Saturday were over 13,000 and the ice-box still was full to the brim. This is not an isolated case; the same report of oversupply comes from every wholesale house handling lilies in quantity.

Roses show the effect of the heat and not many of any variety are in good selling condition. Few of the American Beauties arriving are salable. An occasional dozen, carefully selected, may bring 20 cents each, but from 10 cents down to the discard covers the quotations of ninety-five per cent of all arrivals. The same average applies to all varieties of roses, except Mrs. Shawyer. Small shipments of this comparative novelty bring fair returns. The supply of the other novelties is still limited, with the exception of Double White Killarney. Of the ordinary varieties there is no reasonable quotation possible.



The few good carnations now arriving can be bought for $1 per hundred. As for the rest, what grower can afford to produce them at 25 cents per hundred? No wonder the department stores can advertise them at the demoralizing price of 5 cents a dozen, which is also the quotation for roses. There is now little call for valley, and the best seldom sells at over $2 a hundred. Sweet peas are a drug and few are salable at all.

There seems to be already a surfeit of early asters and dahlias have begun to arrive. Of gladioli there is no limit thus early. What will it be when the big shippers begin their flood? Fifty cents is already top for everything but the novelties. Even America was selling July 19 at $2 per hundred. Cattleyas are down to 25 cents for the best and some fine stock sold at $12 per hundred July 19. There is an unlimited supply.

There seems to be hardly any retail demand except on Saturdays. The elimination of practically all Sunday business in the wholesale section makes buying to tide over possible necessities before Monday's market opens a fairly general practice. The relief to the principals and employees of the wholesale trade in this assured Sunday rest can be imagined. Before another week passes, it is believed, all will see the wisdom and benefit of the innovation and join hands with the majority.

Charles Carlin, of Thorley's, is, as usual, devoting July and August to recuperation. It would be a lonesome street without Mr. Carlin. It is hard to remember the years he has been a part of it.

Ralph Armstrong's branch at Newport is progressing. July 26 and August 1 he will have two big decorations for Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish. The season promises to be one of the best in years. A. T. Bunyard and Wadley & Smythe are also busy with decorations.

Robinson Co., will spend the last two weeks of August in the Thousand Islands and at Niagara Falls. Samuel Salzberg, salesman for the same firm, will now spend two weeks' vacation at Pine Hills, in the Catskills.

Phil Kessler's family is now at Point Lookout, in Nassau. August they will spend in the Adirondacks. Mr. Kessler spends his week ends at each resort until September.

Jonathan Nash reports that from 13,000 rose plants, including Maryland, Radiance and White Killarney, the returns to one of the firm's growers for the year were $14,894, a record that should be an inspiration to grow first-class stock everywhere.

Patrick McGovern, of Nineteenth street and Ninth avenue, Brooklyn, one of the pioneer florists of that city, died on Friday, July 18. He was buried July 4, a large number of the trade attending the funeral. There were many beautiful floral offerings. His son will continue the business.

E. B. Sutton, of Flushing, L. I., formerly a grower at Babylon, died last week. His shipments when in the business were made to John I. Raynor.

Herman Vlasfeld, the Holland bulb salesman whose severe illness was recorded last week, died in the hospital July 7 of typhoid. The funeral was in charge of the Masons. He was popular and widely known and respected by his American patrons.

Secretary Young, of the New York Florists' Club, advises that President Siebrecht has appointed Walter F. Sheridan, John Donaldson, Joseph A. Manda, A. L. Miller, Charles Schenck, Charles Weber and Joseph Fenrich as the nominating committee to name candidates for the different offices in 1914.

A large delegation of New Yorkers attended the funeral of Julius Roehrs July 22.

moderately tall plants, and these do well for cutting, either planted out in benches in a house where a minimum temperature of 60 degrees can be maintained while the bracts are developing, or grown singly in 6-inch pots. Later cuttings, rooted between June 1 and August 1, make up nicely in pans, being moderately dwarf and of a size which is popular. Of course, some customers will call for quite tall plants in large pans.

Use fairly coarse sand, with good drainage below it, for the cuttings. Those rubbed off with a heel root most easily, but such as are cut below leaves are also suitable. As they bleed much when cut, dip the bottoms in powdered charcoal as soon as made. Throw the cuttings into a wooden pail or tub of fresh water for a couple of hours before placing them in the sand; then soak the sand well. The cutting bench should be in a warm house; if you do not possess one, a small frame with a sash can be stood inside the house. This will insure a closer and warmer atmosphere. Do not, however, keep entirely closed, or many will rot. Keep sun and wind away from the cuttings at all times. Pot as soon as the roots are an inch long. Use a light, sandy compost at first; later it can be heavier and it should be made moderately rich for the final potting.

Extreme care in watering is always necessary with poinsettias, particularly after the end of September. If they are too dry or too wet a large part of the foliage will turn yellow, and bare-stemmed plants are hard to sell at any price. C. W.

HARDY VIENNA CARNATIONS.

We have planted, in the open ground, about 1,000 hardy Vienna carnations and are anxious to know what results they will give in this country. We also wish to know what protection would be required in winter, in this Nebraska climate. We have planted a few hundreds of these plants in 4-inch pots, and intend to winter them over either in a coldframe or in a cool greenhouse. By taking them up and bringing them into the greenhouse, could we get a crop for Memorial day?

M. J. H.

I have not grown any of the hardy Vienna carnations, either outdoors or in pots, but some growers speak well of them. Perhaps some other Review readers can give their experience with them.

EIGHT PAGES OF RETAILERS' CARDS

This department for the cards of Leading Retail Florists — those florists who have the facilities for filling the orders sent them by other florists — has made possible the recent rapid development of this branch of the business, a branch of the trade now established for all time and so helpful that its volume will keep on increasing for many years.

Are you sending and receiving your share of these orders? You can send your share (and make 20 per cent profit without effort) if you let your customers know you can perform this service for them. To receive your share—well, The Review's department for Retailers' cards remains the one way of getting prompt action on the order in hand.

To be represented costs only 70 cents per week on a yearly order. This is for one-inch space. Other spaces in proportion.

Why not send your order today—now—before you forget it?

The Market.

Business continues extremely quiet, with hardly a ripple to disturb it. On Saturday, July 19, there was, however, an extra good clean-up, carnations being in particular demand. Among roses, some nice Milady are arriving. Christie Miller is also proving a fine summer sort. Beauties are of good quality for midsummer. Tafts continue popular. The demand is now largely for short and medium stock for funeral work, at 50 cents to $2 per hundred. Carnations are fewer in number and quite small; $1 per hundred is now top-notch price. Sweet peas are mostly short-stemmed and many are cut with the haulm. Asters are appearing in small numbers, mostly Queen of the Market, and make $1 to $2 per hundred.

Gladioli are in oversupply; so are lilies and valley. For such flowers as candytuft, bachelor's buttons, sweet sultan, etc., the call is light. Gypsophila, to a large extent, continues to take the place of asparagus. Some nice summer gardenias are seen, and there is still a good supply of C. gigas and other summer cattleyas. The demand for adiantum and asparagus is comparatively light.

Various Notes.

The picnic of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club at Cunningham park, East Milton, July 23, comes a little too late to be reported in this issue of The Review. The committee in charge has every detail perfected and fine weather only is needed to make it a grand success. There are no less than twenty-four events on the sporting list, com-

The unusually good summer demand seems to be holding up nicely. The supply has increased materially, but the demand has been so good that it easily takes up all good offerings. The supply of gladioli has increased most of all. The fine large ones can be had in quantities and there is a whole lot of stock coming in that is so poor that one can hardly hope to find sales for it. The rose supply, too, has shown a substantial increase. Good roses are arriving in practically all varieties. The stems are better and blooms are larger. The only trouble is that some of the receipts are so full-blown that it is impossible to use them. All that have been arriving in proper shape are selling. The supply of Easter lilies is short. During the last week nearly all of the local growers have been between crops. Auratum lilies are offered in fair quantities and have been meeting with a good market. The cut of rubrum lilies is rather limited. Pond lilies find only an ordinary sale. Regular receipts of choice valley in limited quantities have been selling well.

Various Notes.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.
President, C. C. Massie, Minneapolis; Secretary-Treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

THERE was frost in Montana last week, but it is not thought to have hurt the peas.

IT is reported that hail ruined quite a few acres of onions for seed in northeastern Ohio July 9.

A. L. GEORGE, of the Portland Seed Co., Portland, Ore., has been making a trip through Montana.

S. F. LEONARD, of the Leonard Seed Co., Chicago, is planning a trip to Montana and Idaho for a look at the peas.

THE death of J. M. Gleason, of the T. J. Grey Co., Boston, one of the veterans of the trade, is recorded in the obituary columns this week.

ACCORDING to an English advice of July 9, dry weather has affected the podding of peas, such varieties as Gradus, that should contain five to seven peas to the pod, being generally two short.

R. M. GREIG, Anaconda, Mont., reports killing frost July 14 and wants to know if it was the last or the first frost of which season. It is the first time that nasturtiums have been nipped there in July.

AN item in this column last week indicates that a mail-order seed house in the middle west last season received approximately 60,000 orders from the distribution of not far from 200,000 catalogues. Was it enough?

HIGH heat has held hold on the seed section surrounding Sacramento. July 17 the temperature rose to 96 degrees and stood there at 8 p. m., while July 18 it reached 98 degrees and had fallen only to 92 degrees at 8 p. m. The three following days the maximum was 86 degrees.

"IN regard to conditions in this part of the country," said R. O. Gardner, manager of the seed department of Joseph Breck & Sons, Boston, July 14, "we are pleased to say that they are most favorable, especially so in regard to our retail counter trade, which is holding out remarkably well."

THE peas in Wisconsin and Michigan are spotty. Some sections are much better than others, but even in the best sections some fields are poor. Apparently the difference is the result of the different stages of growth at the time of the heat wave of late June. The earlier the field the better it came through, as a rule.

THREE weeks ago the general view was that this would be a dealers' year on onion sets in the Chicago district; now the growers begin to feel that perhaps it will turn out to be a growers' year, although it is impossible to tell how much of the stock will make thick necks as a result of the growth following the recent rains.

THE plans of the Lake Shore Seed Co., Dunkirk, N. Y., for rebuilding on the site of the plant which was recently burned, have been abandoned and only that part of the building which was least damaged will be repaired and used as a storehouse. The company has purchased the building formerly occupied by the Lux light plant, which it will use for the handling of its business.

THE modifications of the parcel post regulations which are announced in this issue of The Review, reducing rates and increasing the weight limit within the first zones, will increase the desire to have seeds and plants included with other fourth class matter.

ONION SEED

We have a very fine acreage of the best varieties of both Globe and Flat. Shall have a fine lot of seed; prospects are very favorable. Can quote attractive prices on high-grade stock.

THE continued high temperature of the first ten days of July, according to the Laughlin Seed Co., of San Jose, Cal., has still further reduced the prospects of the seed crops of the Santa Clara valley.

"I THINK we have all been a little too hasty in condemning the multiplication of novelties in sweet peas," said Lester L. Morse, in a recent letter to Robert Holmes, the British expert. "After all, it is the enthusiasm after new varieties that helps to keep up the popular demand for sweet peas and the chances are our sweet pea shows would lack much of their enthusiasm if we did not have something new to show.''

THE MINNESOTA SEED LAW.

The last legislature passed a law for the regulation of the sale or exposure for sale of agricultural seeds in Minnesota. It became effective July 1 and provides for the labeling of agricultural seeds in such a way as to indicate the germinating power, the locality in which they were grown and the dangerous weed seeds or other impurities present.

The execution of this law is largely entrusted to the University Farm Experiment Station, where it has been placed in the hands of E. M. Freeman, plant pathologist, and W. L. Oswald, in charge of the seed laboratory. Dr. Freeman and Mr. Oswald have just prepared extension bulletin 39, which states the new law in full, explains its provisions, makes a number of suggestions valuable for seed buyers, and gives directions to those who wish to have free tests made by them at the university farm.

The bulletin has just been mailed to over 40,000 farmers and should be in the hands of all who buy or sell agricultural seeds in Minnesota.

ST. LOUIS.

The Southwestern Market.

The demand, or the lack of it, at the wholesale markets shows plainly that the cut flower business is down to the summer level. The wholesalers say that the demand last week was largely for flowers for funeral work and this seems to be well distributed over all parts of the city. This kind of work, with a little transient business, is about all the trade can rely upon until the fall season opens.

The market has been short on first-class roses for some time, as the hot weather has made a decided difference in the quality of the stock. Short stems prevail on all varieties. Beauties are among the best of the roses. Carnations are in large demand, but the quality of the stock is poor and the supply has been short all the week. Enchantress carnations seem to be the best. The great bulk of cut stock now consists of gladioli and a glut is looked for in these at the end of the week, as all the local growers are sending in big cuts daily. America, King and Augusta are fine in quality and the price of these holds up pretty well, but all other varieties are down in value; the price, July 21, of the three varieties named was $6 per hundred, while others sold at $3 to $4 per hundred. Asters are coming along poorly; the best of them are sold out clean daily. Valley and Easter lilies are the other flowers that make

PRINCESS

The New Upright Pansy

This strain is entirely distinct from all others. It is absolutely compact, upright growing, and extremely weather-proof, enduring many storms without damage to its flower. The flowers are mostly blotched and frilled like the Masterpiece, of good form and heavy velvety texture, on heavy stems carried well above the foliage. Attractive by the brilliancy of its colors.

Packet of 1000 seeds, 75 cents; 300 seeds, 25 cents.

seeds are all grown by myself and are offered in the following mixtures and separate colors:

KENILWORTH STRAIN—The flowers are of perfect form and substance: many of the immense flowers are from 3½ to 4 inches; it is a striking collection of beautiful colors and markings, rich with shades of red, brown, bronze, mahogany and many others too numerous to mention. Light, Medium or Dark Mixtures.

KENILWORTH SHOW—An extra fine strain of large flowers; the immense flowers are of circular form and great substance; a beautiful collection of colors and markings.

KENILWORTH CUT FLOWER MIXTURE—Is a distinct class by itself, surpassing all other strains as a cut flower or for exhibition purposes, for inside or outside growing; the large flowers are carried erect above the foliage on heavy stems, 7 or 8 inches long, in the most graceful manner, and stand the hot, dry weather well.

MASTERPIECE—A remarkable type; the curled, wavy petals giving the flower a double appearance, its large flowers of great substance, on long, strong stem.

ORCHID FLOWERED, Mixed—A dwarf free bloomer with a range of delicate colors that do not exist in any other pansies, a remarkable combination of light rose, shell pink, blush mauve, fawn, light brown, orange and chamois.

Florists' Picnic.

The event which is eagerly looked for yearly by the local florists took place July 17. The weather was bright and clear, but hot. It was by far the largest and best outing the florists have ever had and great credit is due the club's trustees, Messrs. Ossick, Guy and Connon, for the manner in which they handled the whole affair. The crowd, which numbered nearly 400, did not arrive until afternoon. The first arrivals were in eight automobiles, which left the wholesale district at 1 p. m., carrying the wholesalers, their employees and a number of friends. Every car up to four o'clock brought out florists and their families.

At three o'clock the committee on

George Waldbart took an automobile load to the picnic and was glad he went, as he met many old friends.

Charles Wors had charge of the seed-guessing contest and had his hands full of business all afternoon.

at the picnic. Every seat in their big touring car was filled with members of the family, headed by the honorable C. C. himself.

Max Pelletier, who furnished the picnic music, says he is going to join the Florists' Club. Mrs. Pelletier runs a neat flower store in the south end, which makes him an eligible candidate.

A committee of twenty-five from the Florists' Club met Tuesday night, July 22, at the Coliseum building, to confer with the management about the preliminary list for the fall flower show. H. C. Irish is chairman of this committee.

As the next meeting of the Florists' Club falls on the day of the departure of the convention party, August 14, the officers of the club decided to hold the meeting on Thursday, August 7, one week ahead of the regular date. Notices will be sent to all members of the change.

Fred Anthon, of Anthon Bros., Clayton, will open a retail flower store at 5642 Delmar boulevard, August 15. The Brecht Co. will furnish the refrigerator. Mr. Anthon will be a close neighbor to Sanders, Miller and Waldman.

The funeral of the late Chas. H. Huttic, president of the American Bankers' Association, brought great business for the local trade last week. Telegraph orders from outside florists were many. All in the trade had something to do. Kalisch Bros. report they had the family order and used 400 long American Beauties.

The fall flower show, to be known as the Mid-Continental Flower Show, will be held November 10 to 15. There will be a special prize of $200 for the best undisseminated seedling rose of indisputable American origin, to be named Rose of St. Louis.

The W. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co. is handling a large cut of gladioli, which are just beginning to come in from the big fields of C. E. De Wever, W. J. Pilcher, A. H. Ahner and the Grosses. America and Augusta are the best sellers. J. J. B.

Washington C. H., O.—The hail storm of July 9 shattered 400 panes of glass in the greenhouses of Robt. Buck & Co., proprietors of the Washington Floral Gardens, and injured the plants considerably, cutting to pieces many of those outdoors. The loss amounts to several hundred dollars.

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

St. Johns, Ore.—The judges of the annual sweet pea show and school garden exhibit here were R. R. Routledge, J. J. Butzer and J. R. Forbes, all of Portland.

Wenatchee, Wash.—The Milot-Mills Co. is preparing to add a new section, 18x200 feet, to its greenhouses, making a glass area of over 28,000 feet. An additional boiler also will be installed.

Eugene, Ore.—F. B. Chase is building a fifth greenhouse, 48x200 feet, which is so arranged that a team can be driven in at one end, through, and out at the other end. The house will be devoted to vegetables.

POMONA, CAL.

The Pomona Floral & Nursery Co. has been formed by the partnership of M. K. Zimmer and A. W. Pooley. Mr. Zimmer may be remembered as the junior member of the firm of Zimmer & Son, which was formerly located at Woodbine, Ia., and sold out January 1, 1909. He purchased the Franco-American Nursery plant and store at 283 North Garey avenue, where the store of the present firm is located. Mr. Pooley, at one time at Covina, Cal., was operating a store on West Second street and greenhouses at Genesha Park at the time of the sale. The combination of the two plants gives them 4,000 feet of glass and four acres of land.

Plans are being made for additions to the houses and to the nursery stock. Mr. Zimmer is at the store and Mr. Pooley has charge of the growing end of the business. Visitors of the trade are always welcomed and doubtless those who include this city in their California trips will find a stop here worth while.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

The Market.

The weather has shown a tremendous change in the last few days. The warm afternoons and nights have given place to delightful coolness. The effect on the stock being brought into town is quite noticeable. Roses and carnations are not plentiful, however, owing to the fact that so many growers are shifting stock at present. Business is quiet and the lack of these flowers does not make much difference, as there is more than enough stock to fill requirements. Dahlias and gladioli are doing their share toward making the windows bright. The prices on them are lower than they were a year ago. Asters are coming into town in fair quantities, but will not be at their best for a couple of weeks yet. They cost the retailers from $1.50 to $3 per hundred. Japanese lilies are not plentiful either, and both colors are held at from $1.50 to $3 per dozen. They are selling well. Owing to the recent hot spell, sweet peas are not as good as those we usually have at this time. The stems on most of them are short, and the flowers are not up to color. It is doubtful if we will have any more really good stock for some time.

Ferns and asparagus are in oversupply and, from the large amount of glass that is being planted to the latter this season, there will be no shortage of it again in the near future. Houses that have outlived their usefulness for growing roses and carnations are now being benched with asparagus. Other kinds of outside stock have not quite recovered from the warm weather, but they are daily becoming of better quality.

Various Notes.

J. H. Wallace, representing D. S. Lake, of Shenandoah, Ia., is in town in the interests of his house.

Arthur Cook, formerly of Seattle, is in town with the intention of locating here permanently.

It is rumored that a prominent retailer here will have charge of the flower department in the new Kahn department store in Oakland. G.

LOS ANGELES, CAL.

The Market.

Funeral work and a few weddings have been the mainstay of the business during the last week. There has been a lot of the former and it has cleaned up large quantities of stock. There is, in fact, quite a shortage of good indoor flowers, especially roses. This, of course, is partly due to the fact that growers are throwing out and replanting, while as yet there is not much being cut from the earliest planted young stock. But the demand is unusually good locally for this season of the year. It is becoming more and more apparent that Los Angeles is a summer resort that eastern people find more to their liking than most other places, and those with means are coming here year after year.

Dahlias are becoming more of a feature and gladioli are good and plentiful. A few asters are in, but they are not first-rate by any means. Baby roses are less plentiful and the smaller outdoor flowers are poor. Sweet peas are of fair quality only. Orchids and valley are about equal to the demand. Greens are more plentiful, with the exception of good maidenhair ferns.

Various Notes.

At the Los Angeles Flower Market large quantities of stock continue to move. Quite a lot of business is done here in funeral work for out-of-town florists and nurserymen who have not the conveniences to do it for themselves. These find it more profitable to turn the trade over to a wholesaler who has every facility for carrying it out well at a moderate price. This is perfectly legitimate wholesale business, quite distinct from "red violets."

Captain Gray has moved from the Ingleside Floral Co., and the place will soon go out of existence as a florists' establishment. He is now living on the south side, at Forty-eighth street and Second avenue, and is considering several up-town locations to open up in the retail end.

From present indications Frank Lichtenberg will have a fine and thoroughly up-to-date store in the new Hollingsworth building when it is completed. He has kept the center of the store open and there is a fine workroom in the rear, as well as a spacious basement.

The H. N. Gage Co. reports business good. Always trying to be up-to-date, Mr. Gage, since the frost last spring, has made arrangements to grow part, at least, of his asparagus seed under glass, to insure being able to supply the trade.

Still another nursery at Montebello. This time the Figueroa Street Nursery, forced out of its city location, has bought five acres near the foothills.

M. Meyberg and Marc Germain, of the Germain Seed & Plant Co., returned from a business trip to San Diego last week and Mr. Meyberg left for the north July 16.

F. Borden, of the Redondo Floral Co., reports business good, so good that Mr. Knopf, calling at the store in the intervals of automobiling, is pressed into service and kept at it until he sees the chance for a get-away.

Tom Wright is still busy with his alarm device, which he has now brought to what appears to be absolute perfection. Already prominent insurance companies are interested in it and indications are that it will be given a high rating. Mr. Wright intends exhibiting it at the S. A. F. convention at Minneapolis, where greenhouse men will have an opportunity of seeing it.

H. R. Richards.

The park commission has received the opinion of the city attorney that it has the power to carry out its plans of erecting flower stands at Central park and leasing them to private individuals. The stands are to be at the four entrances to the park and of such a character as to add to the decoration. The first will be built as an experiment at Fifth and Hill streets. H. G. Wright has made application to lease the stands from the city.

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

Business is quiet all along the line, but nothing else is expected when summer conditions prevail. Stock is holding out well, especially carnations, and the supply, on the whole, is just about sufficient to take care of the local demand. Roses are not overplentiful. Kaiserins have proved to be good sellers. The quality of the roses is up to standard, except that the foliage is badly injured by mildew. Sweet peas are abundant and are the best selling flowers in the market. Coreopsis, gaillardias and helianthus are overplentiful. Orchids and valley are scarce; the few left-over June brides are creating a demand in that line.

Various Notes.

R. L. Scott, the local representative of Lion & Co., New York city, leaves this week on his initial trip through Oregon and Washington.

J. L. Bergen, of Hillsboro, Ore., is spending his honeymoon at Newport, Ore.

this week. He was well known in the local trade, having been in business at Hillsdale for many years.

The regular meeting of the Florists' Club was held July 14. F. A. Van Kirk, on taking the chair, delivered a speech of acceptance which will long be remembered by those present. Committees were appointed to look after different matters of interest, to investigate the advisability of holding a flower show this fall and to consider the organization of a dahlia society.

Fred Jensen, of Kelso, Wash., was a week-end caller. E. R. C.

SEATTLE, WASH.

The Market.

Business has been stimulated a little this week owing to the carnival times of the Potlatch. Several florists have good orders for decorating automobiles and floats for the various parades. Good roses are scarce and there has been a considerable demand for carnations. The shipping business continues good.

Various Notes.

July 13 a number of well intentioned florists devoted the day to helping C. Hoffmeister repair the damaged greenhouses of the Washington Floral Co. The serious damage done by the wind on the preceding Sunday was fairly well obliterated by nightfall. Mrs. Hoffmeister kindly entertained the visitors at a splendid repast and, with his two charming daughters to wait on them, the putty artists were more than repaid for their labor. Mr. Hoffmeister is one of our oldest florists and has the respect and esteem of all in the trade. T. W.

SOW BUGS.

Can you tell me how to get rid of sow bugs in the greenhouse, the bugs that curl up in a ball when disturbed?

C. A. S.

Keep the greenhouse as free as possible from decaying wood or vegetable matter, as that is what most attracts the sow bugs, although they seem also to have a liking for Rex begonias, ferns and for carnations at the time of reestablishment. There are two or three ways of getting rid of the bugs already in the benches. The best is to prepare a mixture of granulated sugar and Paris green, with enough of the latter to give it a lively green color, and to drop pinches here and there along the edgeboards. Fresh bran and powdered sugar mixed with Paris green or white arsenic may be dropped here and there in the same manner or left in saucers in the benches. The next day the dead bugs may be swept out.

Boiling water kills the bugs and may be sprinkled with a watering pot with a coarse rose in places where it will not affect the plants. Turnips and potatoes scooped out and laid on the benches will attract the bugs. When you find a number gathered on the vegetable, drop it in a can of boiling or nearly boiling water.

COLEUS FOR HANGING BASKETS.

Will you be so kind as to state whether or not you have seen or heard of a running coleus? I have a genuine trailing coleus. For vases, hanging baskets or window boxes it has no equal. I have a few hundred plants of the running coleus and shall be glad if you will give me some information in regard to such plants. R. F. S.

I have not seen any coleus of a hanging character and, if you have such a plant, it should prove a desirable novelty. Are you quite certain you are not mistaking some other plant for a coleus? C. W.

NEWS OF THE NURSERY TRADE

C. D. Otis, of Lake Charles, La., has sold a $1,000 order for trees and shrubs to residents of Beaumont, Tex., for ornamental purposes.

Pollard Bros., of South Pasadena, Cal., have purchased twenty acres of land near Whittier and planted nursery stock between rows of orange trees.

The nurserymen are feeling the sting of government competition: they object to the Forest Bureau distribution of seeds and seedlings either free or at cost.

The U. S. Department of Agriculture has issued a pamphlet, under date of July 12, containing the notice of the extended New England quarantine and the regulations that will go into effect August 1.

Eight years ago J. A. Young started a nursery, about two acres in size, just west of Aurora, Ill. The Aurora Nursery Co., of which he is the president, now contains over thirty acres and is still growing.

The Bureau of Entomology of the U. S. Department of Agriculture has established a branch at 43 Tremont street, Boston, for the purpose of enforcing the gypsy moth and brown-tail moth regulations.

C. M. Griffing, of the Griffing Bros. Co., the southern nursery firm, recently delivered an interesting and instructive address on "The Physical Development of Cities," at a meeting held in Port Arthur, Tex., under the auspices of the Men's Civic League. Mr. Griffing's headquarters are at Jacksonville, Fla., and his company has branch nurseries and offices at Port Arthur and other places.

Articles of incorporation have been filed by the Bechtel-Swartwout Horticultural Co., at Mobile, Ala. The company proposes to conduct a general merchandise, horticultural nursery, live stock and realty business, with headquarters at Fowl River, Ala., and has a capitalization of $25,000, of which $17,100 is paid in. The incorporators are Theodore Bechtel, proprietor of the Bechtel Pecan Nurseries, at Ocean Springs, Miss.; Leslie G. Swartwout, of Fowl River, Ala., and C. C. Mechem, Jr., of Mobile, Ala.

MAINE LAW IS CHANGED.

State Horticulturist Gardner calls attention to the change of the law relative to carrying on the business of selling or dealing in nursery stock. The law reads: "No person, firm or corporation, excepting growers, shall engage in, continue in, or carry on the business of selling or dealing in nursery stock, or solicit purchases of nursery stock within this state, either as owner thereof, or as agent of such owner, without first obtaining a license to carry on and conduct such business in this state."

This new law is different from the old law, in that dealers as well as agents or solicitors are liable to the license fee, so that any firms, such as some of the 5 and 10-cent stores, which in the past have been selling rose bushes and some of the other hardy shrubs, will be required to pay the regular fee.

The form of license is prescribed by the state horticulturist, and the license will be issued by him upon proper application. The fee is $5 per annum for agents, dealers, salesmen or solicitors.

Fees obtained from such licenses will be paid into the state treasury and added to the appropriation of the bureau of horticulture, and will be used exclusively for the inspection of nursery stock in the state of Maine.
